Tuesday's Election To Draw Largest Turnout

The greatest voter turnout in the history of Newton is expected Tuesday, November 7, Election Day.

There are now 56,500 registered voters in Newton and Alan W. Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, is predicting that 90 to 95 per cent of that total will cast their votes in the 1972 Presidential Election.

Newton voters find themselves right in the middle of the fiercest Congressional race in the state with incumbent U.S. Representative Robert F. Drinan, a Democrat, being opposed by Martin A. Linsky of Brookline, a Republican, who has served two terms as a state representative, and Independent-Conservative candidate John T. Collins, who is also from Newton.

Licarie says there are more Newton residents who are registered to vote now than at any other time in the city's history.

In the Presidential Election four years ago 44,765 votes were cast in the city. Until now, that was the all time high.

But registrations this year are up by more than 5,000.

To date, more than 2,000 absentee ballots have been mailed out.

Voters who can do so are urged to get to the polling places in the city during the day to avoid delays at the polls Tuesday evening.

Election officials have also asked the voters to familiarize themselves now with the 10 referendum questions that are on the ballot in order to minimize time in the voting booths.

The U.S. Senate race has a special hometown flavor in Newton with incumbent Senator Edward W. Brooke, a Republican from 535 Beacon Street, being opposed by Middlesex District Attorney John J. Droney of Cambridge, a Democrat, and Socialist Worker Party candidate Donald Gurewitz, also of Cambridge.

The presidential contest tops the ballot next week with McGovern-Shriver, Nixon-Agnew and Socialist Worker Party candidates Jenness and Puley on the official ballot.

Four years ago, when voting in the presidential race, 29,400 Newton voters cast their ballots for the Humphrey-Muskie ticket and Nixon-Agnew got nearly 13,000 votes.

In the race for governor's councillor, Herbert L. Connolly of Newton, a Democrat, faces Republican Charles J. Laubenstein of Boston.

The contest in the Eighth Middlesex senatorial district has also brought predictions of a close race between two well-known Newton politicians. Incumbent Democratic State Senator Irving Fishman faces Republican challenger Alderman Michael Antonellis in a district that includes Newton and Watertown. George A. Muldoon, running as an independent, is the third candidate in the race. He lives in Watertown.

Two candidates will be elected from each of the two districts that represent Newton in the state house.

In the contest for the Twelfth Middlesex seats voters will name two from four Newton contenders. They are Peter F. Harrington, Vice President of the Newton Board of Aldermen, a Democrat; State Representative Paul H. Guzzi, a Democrat seeking his second term; Barbara M. Schiller, who was a delegate to the Republican state convention and Alderman Robert Tennant, a Republican.

Two state representatives will also be chosen from the four contenders for the seats from the Thirteenth Middlesex District. They are State Representative David J. Mofenson, a Democrat who seeks reelection, Alderman Lois G. Pines, a Democrat;

Lawrence Applefield, a Republican making his first bid for office; and Vahe A. Sarafian, a Suffolk University professor of history who is a Republican.

There is no race for Register of Probate for Middlesex County. Democrat John V. Harvey of Belmont is unopposed.

Two will be elected Middlesex County Commissioners from four candidates. The candidates are Sherry H. Jenkins of Weston, a Republican; William R. Morrison of Belmont, a Republican; and reform state Democrats S. Lester Ralph of Somerville and Paul E. Tsongas of Lowell.

Incumbent Thomas B. Brennan of Medford, a Democrat, and William A. Barnstead of Arlington a Republican, are contenders for the post of Middlesex County Treasurer.

Registered voters were sent a pamphlet from the Secretary of State's office indicating the nature of the seven statewide referendum questions that will appear on the ballot.

In addition, Newton has three more questions on its ballot for a total of 10.

Licarie said he expects the greatest bottleneck to occur because of the time it might take some voters to read through the questions.

To alleviate the problem, he said, copies of the questions will be distributed to people as they wait in line to vote.

The questions also appear in correct form on page 36 of the Newton Graphic this week. The legal notice can be clipped out and marked ahead of time by voters who wish to do so.

Sample ballots are also posted in Newton libraries and will be displayed at each polling place.

The election commission executive has asked people to vote during the day if possible, but also pointed out that anyone waiting in line at 8 p.m. to cast a ballot will be allowed to vote. He said at 8 p.m. election night, a police officer will separate the voters that were in line at 8 p.m. from the latecomers and "they will be allowed to vote no matter how long it takes."

The final three advisory referendum questions on the ballot, not appearing in the state pamphlet are:

Urge Automotive Center For South High School

By RICHARD D. HULL

A formal request has gone to the Newton Board of Aldermen from the School Committee for funds to construct an Automotive Center at Newton South High School. The facility would be installed to ease the burdens placed on the current facilities by an increasing load of students enrolled in mechanics courses.

The request came in the form of a motion passed unanimously Monday night by the School Board, following a report on the subject by School Committee member Eleanor S. Rosenblum. The Board has requested the mayor and aldermen to make funds available for both the hiring of the designer-architect who would draw up plans for the center and for the construction cost itself.

Recommended for the High School are four items utilized for automotive classes: an enclosed heated garage to permit work on three autos simultaneously; a small engines workshop for 10 students; contiguous Fundamentals of Auto classrooms for 25 students; and ancillary spaces as noted.

The classrooms would contain blackboards for diagrams and structural designs. However, as Mrs. Rosenblum noted, the majority of classroom work in automotive field must be undertaken in boy's shops and spaces large enough to enclose whole cars.

Currently, the work on the automobiles is done in the Newton South High School parking lot, and with winter weather coming on, practical instruction in mechanics will be severely limited.

One hundred students are already taking courses in Fundamentals of Auto, Small Engines, Service Station Attendants and Service Station Mechanics at South High. The present circumstances there are reportedly placing extreme burdens on the teacher and causing serious conflicts in the present schedule and facilities.

Furthermore, if brand new facilities are built for automotive instruction purposes, many more students will most likely sing up for the program. Noted Principal William Geer at Monday's meeting: "We have just begun to tap the students' interest in this field."

Mrs. Rosenblum hopes that the Center is approved and that it can be built in time for next year's school opening in September, 1973. "We need it very urgently," she stressed.

The project was originally approved in essence and placed in the School Department's Capital Improvement Program, but was suspended pending full recommendations of the study group organized to report on the matter. Part of the resolution passed by the School Committee was a request that the 34 Aldermen "reinstate the Automotive Center as a active item in the 1972 Capital Improvement Program."

If the project is approved by Mayor Theodore D. Mann and the funds are granted by the aldermen, an architect would come in "immediately," according to Mrs. Rosenblum.

The cost of the center was estimated by Mrs. Rosenblum and the study committee to be $84,000 maximum, of which at least 50 per cent would be reimbursed to the city from the state.

NEW EDITOR

Graphic Has New Editor

Cynthia J. Black has been named editor of the Newton Graphic by Paul J. Massey, general manager of the Transcript Newspapers.

The appointment is effective today.

Miss Black is a 1970 graduate of the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee School of Journalism.

Before joining the staff of the Newton Graphic last March, she spent two years as a general assignment reporter for a weekly newspaper, The West Allis Star, in suburban Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Black succeeds George A. Gagan who retired.

Aldermen's Pay Vetoed

Mayor Theodore D. Mann Monday announced that he had transmitted to the Board of Aldermen his veto of their salary proposal.

Among his reasons for the veto, the mayor cited the closeness of the vote on the issue, the fact the Board of Aldermen was given its own staff under the new charter, and the fact that the charter did not provide for compensation for the city legislators.

Aldermen voted 13-9 at their Oct. 16 meeting to pay themselves $2,500 per year as of Jan. 1, 1973. Their action launched a campaign by the Newton Taxpayer's Association to have the measure vetoed.

The board would have to muster three additional votes and keep the original 13 in order to have the two-thirds majority necessary to override the veto.

Alderman Sidney T. Small, not present for the original vote, has already announced his support of the measure. The other aldermen absent from the meeting, Robert Tennant, has gone on record as oppose.

Two other aldermen are also reportedly considering changing their original negative votes on the proposal to vote "yes" on overriding the veto.

Legally, the matter can come up for another vote at the Nov. 6 meeting of the board, but aldermen have an indefinite time in which to act on the veto.

Mann released his veto message at a press conference.

"Having served on the Newton Board of Aldermen for eight years before going to the state legislature," he wrote, "I have personal knowledge of the importance of the duties performed by our aldermen and their devotion to the good of the city."

"For many years, dedicated citizens have served their city without compensation. This cornerstone of civic involvement has helped Newton attain its high reputation of which we are all proud.

"The recent vote on the matter by your board indicates that it is unclear among your own body the action required at this time. Any proposal calling for a change in from long standing tradition by its own nature is controversial."

Mann then went on to point out that the new City Charter provided for a clerk of the board of aldermen and a staff for him.

"While making this provision, our new charter does not provide for the compensation of aldermen and the general assumption appears to be that none was intended when the membership of the board was set at 24."

Mann also noted in his veto message that the board's voting itself compensation during the current members' terms of office is not "consistent with" VETO—(See Page 25)

House cleaning and baby-sitting jobs are high on the Newton Job Bank list of positions to be filled right now. There are also factory jobs, lawn care work, odd jobs, dishwashing, secretarial positions and carpentry positions open. People ages 13 to 22 interested in work can drop in at the Newton Job Bank's main office.

Conservators To Hold Walk Sunday At 2

An interesting and informative walk is planned by the Newton Conservators, a local environmental organization, for Sunday, Nov. 5, at 2 p.m. in the Hammond Pond-Webster Conservation area. The walk is free and open to the public. Meet in the parking lot closest to Hammond Parkway behind R.H. Stearns, Route 9, Chestnut Hill.

The walk will be led by Dr. Larry Kaplan, a biologist at the University of Massachusetts, keenly interested in the area and the effects of development on it. Also present will be Jim Parker, a student at Boston College's Environmental Center, who is also well-versed on the area.

The Newton Conservators is an active organization which strives to protect and wisely utilize our natural resources. It has active committees on land use, air quality, solid waste, energy, pesticides and salt which need more members. For more information about activities or the walks, call the Newton Conservators at 244-3174.

Lasell Meeting November 9

Community Relations Commission Has All-Day Conclave On Schools

The Newton Community Relations Commission recently sponsored an all-day conference on community schools which covered all aspects of the community school concept with special emphasis placed on establishing the program locally.

The morning session, moderated by Mrs. Florence Rubin, dealt with running an effective community school program. Donald Welch, formerly principal of Emerson School; Mrs. Judy Dean, community school coordinator at Emerson School; Mrs. Mona Freeman, chairman of community school activities at Countryside School, and David Mortimer of the Lincoln-Eliot School, made presentations on this topic. The focus was on the financial aspects of using public schools in the evenings, coordination of volunteer workers, 429 Cherry st., West Newton, to fill our applications. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Job Bank fills a wide variety of jobs in settings ranging from private homes to businesses. One time only, part-time, and full-time positions are welcomed.

Anyone, private individual or business representative, is encouraged to call 969-5908 to list a job to be done. The staff requests a minimum of 3 days' notice to insure that the job is matched with the proper applicant and that a satisfactory arrangement may be worked out with both employee and employer.

This service is offered free of charge to both employer and employee. For further information call Job Bank's main number.

Nursing Homes Begin New On-Site Survey

The Massachusetts Federation of Nursing homes is inaugurating a program of on-site surveys of nursing homes before admitting them to membership. Joseph Vilmas of Newton, federation president, announced this week.

Vilmas said federation standards and codes are higher than those of state agencies, and among the highest in the nation.

The Boston Chapter president said the review team is currently visiting five nursing homes in the state who have applied for membership.

The federation represents a majority of the 690 nursing homes in the state, comprising more than 32,000 beds.

Vilmas said a new procedure in the inauguration of evaluation proceedings is the adoption of a plan to seek the opinions of community leaders. He said questionnaires are being sent to city and town leaders, civic, religious, business and others, asking them to rate the long-term health care facility as outstanding, excellent, good, fair, or poor, in relation to the question, "would you consider the facility as an asset to your community?"

He said the survey team will be looking for many things including overall cleanliness, general appearance of the patients, attitudes of the administrator and other representatives, alertness of the staff, staff education, community relationships and patient activities.

Vilmas pointed out the federation team evaluating the applicant will include representatives of the same level of care. "If a facility lists two or more levels of care, the review team will represent the highest level," he said.

The function of his committee will be to review, evaluate, and submit written recommendations following visits to Nursing homes applying for membership in the federation. "These recommendations will assist in keeping nursing homes of a substandard caliber from becoming associated with out federation homes that strive for quality."

"The Nursing Home profession still is an evolutionary state, evolutionary in the sense of development. We must be a law unto ourselves, a law which prevents abuses and assures operation in the public interest. "Each Nursing Home Administrator becomes a voluntary practitioner of the highest professional conduct. At the same time, his conduct is subject to challenge by his fellow professionals," Williams stated.

Wisconsin has more than 8,500 lakes.

Fink Will Address PTA Council Tonight

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink will address the Newton Council of PTA's tonight (Nov. 2) at Newton South High School at 7:45 p.m. He will discuss "What's Ahead for Public Education in Newton."

The general public is invited to attend the meeting and will have an opportunity to listen to the problems and proposed solutions facing the Newton schools.

President of the Council, S. Wendell Kravitz, of Newton, points to the present day role of the public school administrator as often times not a happy one. "He is the focus of all the pressures and pressure groups that beset policy making boards, whether it be open classroom, curriculum development, busing, school lunches, sex education, drugs, teacher problems, custodial problems, building problems, parent problems, or students problems," Kravitz expalined.

The PTA community and the other taxpaying citizens of Newton have this occasion to address queries and make suggestions with "the man in charge." Good education in Newton rests on the expert knowledge of the educators, but along with this will be the kind of motivation for learning supplied in the home, and community discussion of educational philosophy.

and the expansion of community involvement. In the afternoon session, the emphasis shifted to a discussion of program possibilities for community schools. Mrs. Rubin again served as moderator; and the afternoon panel included Mrs. Judith Chaloff from the Hyde community school program; Mrs. Theresa O'Halloran from the Lincoln-Eliot program; Mrs. Grace Olin from the Angier community school; and Mrs. Judy Dean from Emerson School. Each participant described programs currently being operated in her community school and then several members of the audience shared other ideas for community school programming.

Careers have it — AN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — What happens to bright, educated women who permanently set aside their career potential to keep house and raise children? A group, in interviews with University of Michigan psychologist Judith L. Birnbaum, said they had reached middle age feeling a lack of personal development and self-esteem.

A counterpart sample of career women, in contrast, expressed satisfaction not only with their professions but their competence.

Real Estate Today
By Lyn Medoff

WHAT GOES WITH HOUSE

Real Estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate but none of the owner's personal property. The problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently annexed to the real estate? Is it intended to become a part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Usual fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, lighting fixtures, etc.

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate. This will save misunderstanding at the closing, and sometimes save a sale.

If you have any questions or desire personal assistance in any area of real estate, feel free to phone or drop into our office: LYN MEDOFF ASSOCIATES, REALTORS 1862A Beacon St., Brookline. Phone: 734-8871. We're here to help!

Salinger Addresses Democrats

President John F. Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, will speak in behalf of presidential nominee George McGovern at a pre-election rally of the Newton City Committee.

The rally will present all Newton Democratic candidates running for office on Saturday (Nov. 4) from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Amory, 1137 Washington St., West Newton.

Entertainment will be provided by Little Walter and the Time Machine. Little Walter is the disc jockey for WBCNradio and says he promises "oldies, but goodies" music from the 1950's.

Admission is free and refreshments will be available. Anyone interested in meeting and talking with the Democratic candidates can attend.

Ethel Sheehan is chairman of the rally committee of the Newton Democratic City Committee.

Meeting Slated Monday Deals With Services For The Retarded

The Newton Chapter of the Greater Boston Association for Retarded Children (GBARC) and the Newton Special Class PTA plan to jointly present a program next Monday (Nov. 6) at 8 p.m. in Mason Rice School, Newton Centre.

NMHA Meeting Nov. 16

The annual meeting of the Newton Mental Health Association will be held Thursday, Nov. 16, at Newton Guidance Clinic, 64 Eldredge St. Beside the regular business meeting, there will be demonstrations of different types of psychotherapy. The demonstrations will be done by members of the clinic's professional staff, according to Mrs. Barbara Rubin, president of the mental health association. The association is a citizens group which sponsors

The program will include people from the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Area office, from the Newton Guidance Clinic, and the Newton Mental Health Association.

The speakers, Edward Sahatirian, associate area director; Rev. David C. Parachini, area drug program co-ordinator; from the Area office: Ellen Wilson, Ph.D., Clinical Psychologist and Mental retardation co-ordinator on the staff of the Newton Guidance Clinic; and Barbara Rubin president of the Newton the guidance clinic and other major mental health projects. Mrs. Rubin urged all members to attend. "Your attendance and participation makes a difference to you and to us," she said.

The guidance clinic serves school-aged children and their families in Newton. The agency currently is involved in an emergency fund drive to help eradicate an operating deficit of more than $40,000.

Mental Health Association will explain the importance of their agencies to citizens of the city of Newton. They will emphasize the special services performed for Retarded people and their families.

Miriam Schwartz, assistant acting supervisor of Special Education in the Newton Public Schools, will introduce the staff and special education teachers and report on the success of the integration of special class and regular class students. She will also describe the new programs that are being initiated in Newton's Special Classes.

Refreshments will be prepared and served by Mrs. Carolyn Snipe's class at Peabody School.

The public is invited to attend. For information call: Mrs. Rubin, Special Class PTA at 527-0415 or Mrs. Chansky, GBARC at 244-7310.

First Concert Of Fall Nov. 9 At High School

Newton High School will present the first concert of its concert series - the Harvest Fest on Thursday, November 9, at 8 p.m. in the Auditorium, 453 Walnut Street, Newtonville.

Performing groups included will be the Concert Choir and Smith Family, directed by Raymond Smith and the Concert Band, Orchestra, and Stage Band directed by Jerry Gardner.

Selections on the program will be varied and should appeal to every musical taste. Featured numbers include selections from "Godspell" by the concert choir, "Choral and Alleluia" by the concert band Copland's "Hoe Down" by the Orchestra, and "The Circus Band" by Charles Ives - a combined number. The finale will be a preview of Newton High School's forthcoming "Cabaret."

Tickets for this concert may be obtained at the door. For further information, contact the High School Music Department by calling 969-9810 ext. 348.

IN RECOGNITION - The Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce recently sponsored a luncheon to honor Dominic Cannistraro (second from right), recognized in a citation from the governor for his outstanding achievement in overcoming a handicap. Cannistraro, 30, a college graduate, works in the JFK

GOP Headquarters Open Election Night

Newton's Nixon-Brooke Republican Headquarters at 1280 Centre St., Newton Centre, will be open election night (November 7) with plans under way for a gala Victory Party and Open House, according to William L. Bruce, Newton Nixon Campaign Chairman.

The event is being co-sponsored by all Newton Republican groups, including, Newton Republican City Committee, Julius L. Masow, chairman; Newton Women's Republican Club, Miss Charlotte R. Thornbury, president; Newton Republican Club, Donald P. Quinn, president; and the Newton Young Republicans, Frederick Uehlein, chairman of the Executive Committee.

The Brooke Committee in Newton is headed by Alderman Edward C. Uehlein and Anthony J. Medaglia, Jr. who are co-chairmen in the city campaign to re-elect Senator Edward W. Brooke. Both groups are co-sponsors with the Newton GOP organization for the Tuesday night event.

Refreshments, election returns, and a celebration are listed as features of the night. "Everybody is welcome and we look for a turnout that will fill our auditorium to capacity," Bruce stated.

He also noted that the Newton Republican Headquarters will be open daily through election day. Voters are invited to visit or call for information and assistance. Information and leaflets about all Republican candidates in the area is available and on display in the facility.

The headquarters may be reached by telephone at 527-2115 and 965-0760.

AIDING THE BLIND - Newton's Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Milhender of 280 Boylston St., helped make it possible for Boston Aid to the blind to have a completely furnished and equipped first aid room in the agency's new center in West Roxbury.

Expansion Necessary In School Spanish Programs

The School Committee Monday night received a report on the Spanish programs in Newton's school system. The growing curriculum and influx of students in the courses has reached a point where preparations must be begun to handle an enlarged instructional study systems, the committee was told.

At Newton North High School alone, 52 more students are taking Spanish this fall than were enrolled in 1971-72; 371 altogether, according to a report by program administrator Mrs. Mary L. Waters.

Spanish is one of six foreign languages offered at North High School, and currently students may elect to take four years of the language in both Curriculum I and II. This year 111 pupils who took Spanish at Weeks and Bigelow Junior High are continuing the course in Newton North.

"Since Bigelow, Weeks, and Warren Junior Highs are now offering Spanish in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, our enrollment is going to increase dramatically. We must begin at once to prepare for this influx of students," said Mrs. Waters.

Three years ago the Spanish program was a much watered-down version of today's broadened instruction, she said. It lacked up-to-date curriculum materials, and was frequently taught by teachers whose primary field of interest was French, and who were deficient in the necessary Spanish fluency. In three years the student enrollment has jumped from a total of 257 to 371 at North High School alone.

Similarly, the number of teachers has risen from 2.8 to 3.4 and three extra classrooms have been added. Enrollment has leaped 65 per cent in Curriculum II at the High School in those three years.

The upgrading of the Spanish teaching staff has been hampered by problems relating from position real location and cuts in staff size, making the task of new teachers difficult. Nonetheless, additional teachers have been added in the past two years.

In the Junior High School, enrollment has gone from 304 in September, 1969, to 1,386 in September, 1972. This total represents a breakdown of seventh, eighth and ninth graders distributed in programs at Bigelow, Meadowbrook, Weeks, and Warren Junior Highs. This burgeoning roster of Spanish students indicates quite clearly the recent interest and development displayed in the language program at Newton Schools.

The Spanish program has never had any summer development funds made available to it, and the need now is as great as ever, days the program developers, in reporting to the School Board. Their official stance is that a lack of support for the Spanish program would lead to an undermining of the growth recorded since 1969.

The staff is experimenting with field trips to Spanish speaking communities in the Greater Boston area, activities run by Leo Romero of Newton Junior College. He has conducted these programs for Bigelow pupils so far and plans to extend the experiment to include the other junior high schools.

In general, the report issued to the School Committee was worded in an enthusiastic tone. More students than ever before are signing up for Spanish and are receiving greatly improved instruction.

The enthusiasm of Mrs. Waters and other administrators was tempered, however, with the knowledge that the program is increasing at such a swift rate that it requires an expansion of staffing and services to handle the teaching with optimum efficiency.

Lively Town Father

Mr. Thomas Darcy looks like a man who bears watching. Down at Hyannis on a recent weekend he popped up as a sort of an iconoclast by seeking the presidency of the Massachusetts Selectmen Association. Usually the statewide organization of town fathers quietly vote for the ticket of new officers placed before it by its nomination committee.

This year the association rejected the committee's choice and chose Mr. Darcy. He not only had the courage to toss his hat in the ring but he was chairman of the Board of Selectmen in the Town of Westwood, which was able to announce recently a slash of $3.55 in its tax rate.

We don't know how much Mr. Darcy or his Board of Selectmen had to do with that most meritorious and timely achievement but as the town's top elected officials, they must be given more than a modicum of credit.

Selectmen are pretty close to the people as democracy works out today. It's THE Selectmen of A Selectman the irate taxpayer telephones when the town plow blocks his newly shovelled driveway. Regardless of the fact they have little control over most of the factors which send tax rates zooming, Selectmen are obliged to share some of the blame with the town's assessors.

It's interesting to note Mr. Darcy doesn't intend to be a nice quiet president of the prestigious, dignified Massachusetts Selectmen's Association. He plans to do a little lobbying along with his fellow MSA members when matters of concern come up in the Legislature.

Selectmen ought to make good lobbyists. They have to meet their constituents at weekly or bi-weekly meetings and they are probably more exposed to confrontation day after day than are the representatives and senators.

If they learn to pass along some of their constituents' criticisms in their original forms, they might well bestir some action.

Maybe the new president of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association can help get things moving on Beacon Hill.

12 Months No, Answer

At the behest of the Sharon School Committee a lot of data was fed into a data-hungry computer in an effort to determine whether it would be advisable to extend the town's present 12-month elementary school program to the High School.

In effect the computer said, "No." The material which it ingested included a list of present student course selections, broken into four groups which would be made necessary in a 12-month rotating schedule of 45-day class and 15-day vacation periods. The computer sort of put the kibosh on the idea. Among other things it said 1.8 times more teaching time would be required to put the 12-month idea in operation.

Apparently the communities trying out the 12-month school year idea haven't yet produced enough evidence to send other cities and towns in pell-mell pursuit of the idea in this era of mountain-high education costs.

Generally, school superintendents, principals, guidance directors in the 12-month towns are in favor of the year. Most of the school systems adopted the schedule to escape double sessions and acute building shortages.

Indeed, one school official pointed out that while the cost-per-pupil factor in his town increased, the program had saved his town $7.5 million in new building costs.

For a long succession of years city and town school costs have been threatening to go over the 50 per cent level in public expenditures. Now it has passed that barrier in many communities and there's no reason to believe others will not know the same experience.

The 12-month school year is a unique system that would have been laughed to scorn not too many decades back. It's limited adoption reflects a sort of financial desperation.

One thing is fairly certain — the solutions it offered financially are limited. Taxpayers generally must look to Washington and Beacon Hill for real assistance.

See Massive Win For Nixon But Bay State Race Close

Children not yet born will be studying in their history books 50 years from now about next Tuesday's Presidential election.

In all probability, they will be reading that President Richard M. Nixon won one of the nation's historic landslide victories over a senator from the prairie state of South Dakota named George S. McGovern.

While Mr. Nixon appears virtually assured of reelection by a massive margin, his battle with Senator McGovern for Massachusetts' electoral vote is likely to be close.

Senator McGovern is conceded a realistic chance of carrying only four states and the District of Columbia. Massachusetts is one of the four. The others are West Virginia, Wisconsin and McGovern's home state of South Dakota.

Two conflicting factors may influence the voting in the Bay State on Tuesday.

One is the so-called bandwagon vote, the realization that President Nixon apparently is headed for reelection regardless of what happens in Massachusetts and that, as former Boston Mayor John F. Collins stresses, Massachusetts will want and need sympathetic help from him in the allocation of federal funds during the next four years.

Realistically, as Collins points out, Nixon is likely to be more sympathetic to requests for federal help for Massachusetts if he carries the state than if it rejects his Presidential candidacy for the third time. A greater flow of federal funds into the Bay State, of course, can mean more jobs and a higher degree of prosperity for everyone.

JUST WON'T GO AWAY!

On the other hand, there is a chance many Democrats who don't like McGovern and have indicated their intention of voting for Nixon, may experience a last-minute change of heart, possibly even in their polling booths.

President Nixon appeared to be leading Senator McGovern by about 100,000 to 150,000 votes in Massachusetts a fortnight ago. Since then McGovern seems to have made some slight gains. Whether he has turned around enough voters to carry the state is a question which will not be answered until next Tuesday night.

Lieutenant Governor Donald Dwight, chairman of the Nixon campaign in Massachusetts, voices confidence that Nixon will carry the state. In fact, Dwight says the President might even carry Democratic Boston as a result of the endorsement given him by the city's police officers.

Former Mayor Collins, head of the Massachusetts Democrats, and Independents for Nixon, is more cautious in his forecasts. Collins declares that President Nixon will be overwhelmingly reelected but that the race in the heavily Democratic Bay State will be very tight.

But if Mr. Nixon succeeds in achieving a cease-fire in Vietnam and the release of U.S. prisoners before election, he could conceivably become the first President to carry 50 states.

A truce obviously is near in Vietnam. If the fighting ends before next Tuesday, the public relief certainly should react to the advantage of President Nixon.

Senator Edward W. Brooke, the only black in the U.S. Senate, is a heavy favorite to win reelection over underdog Middlesex County District Attorney John J. Droney.

Polls indicate that Droney will run well in his home county, the largest in the Commonwealth, but that he is not as well known as Brooke in the other counties.

Brooke appears to be just as strong today as he was six years ago when he overwhelmed former Governor Endicott Peabody. Droney is hoping for an upset victory, but the odds are against him.

Thousands upon thousands of dissident Democrats will mark their ballot crosses and pull voting machine levers beside the names of Republicans Richard M. Nixon and Edward W. Brooke next Tuesday but then will swing back onto their party reservation.

Massachusetts is widely known as a ballot-splitting state. The law here does not allow one cross or a single turn of a lever to cast a vote for an entire party ticket, as it does in some states, and Nixon's vote-pulling power apparently will make no real impact upon the congressional contests.

If Tuesday's election results in any changes in party control of the Bay State's congressional seats, it probably will see the Democrats picking up a place now held by a Republican.

The only seat now filled by a Democrat which the GOP might capture is that of Congressman Robert F. Drinan of Newton in the fourth congressional district.

Even there Congressman Drinan is favored to win over Republican Representative Martin Linsky of Brookline, with independent John T. Collins of Newton running a poor third.

Paradoxically, Father Drinan, a liberal Jesuit priest, will be cut by many Catholics because of his opposition to public aid for parochial schools as well as a proposal for voluntary prayers in public schools.

Nevertheless, he is a slim favorite to achieve reelection to a second term.

In one of the most unusual congressional clashes, Congresswoman Louise Day Hicks and Boston City Councillor John Joseph Moakley, both of South Boston, appear to be the contestants in an extremely close race. Republican Howard M. Miller of Needham is a distant third, with many of the GOP voters swinging to Moakley. A fourth contender listed on the ballot is Jeanne Lafferty, candidate of the Socialist Workers Party. Her vote will be negligible.

Mrs. Hicks is carrying the Democratic nomination in a district which normally is Democratic 4-1. But Councillor Moakley, running as an independent, is a potent candidate and is making a strong fight. He says that if he is elected he will sit on the Democratic side of the aisle in Congress.

Voters To Decide Whether 18-Year-Olds Should Drink

A new law, which will allow 18-year-olds to start drinking liquor legally at the age of 18, is scheduled to become effective in Massachusetts next March 1.

The measure was enacted by both branches of the State Legislature earlier this year and was signed into law by Governor Sargent.

However, Question No. 8 on the Nov. 7 election ballot will ask Bay State voters whether 18-year-olds should be allowed to buy, sell, serve and drink liquor in Massachusetts.

The vote on this issue will not be binding. A "yes" vote will have no effect since such a law already is on the books and is to take effect in four months.

But if the people should vote strongly against lowering the drinking age, the Legislature would be likely to repeal the law due to go into operation March 1.

The argument in support of the referendum is that the 18-through 20-year-olds today are more mature than those of a generation ago and that this is reflected by the fact that they now are allowed to vote on reaching their 18th birthday.

Liquor now is sold to 18-year-olds in the neighboring states of Rhode Island, Vermont and New York. Bay State youths could go to one of those states to buy liquor if they can't get it at home.

The argument against lowering the drinking age is that it will boost the number of automobile accidents since more youths will drink and drive and that it will increase illegal drinking by boys and girls under 18 who will be associating with older youths. It also is argued that the 18-year-old drinkers will worsen the alcoholic problem.

Friends of Judge Seeking Votes Against Question 7

Friends of the approximately 50 judges who will be forced to retire from the bench if a proposed change in the State Constitution is approved by the voters next Tuesday have launched a campaign for "No" votes on Question No. 7.

Judges would be required to retire on reaching the age of 70 if the suggested constitutional revision is adopted.

Former Judge Frankland W. L. Miles is spearheading the drive against the adoption of this amendment to the Constitution. He stresses that he personally has no axe to grind since he retired from the judiciary more than 20 years ago to devote himself to the practice of law but that he believes the action would be unwise and not in the public interest.

One argument he advances is that there already is a provision in the Constitution which allows the Governor and Executive Council to retire a judge who is incapacitated.

While Judge Miles doesn't say so, the fact is that if that provision had been exercised in the case of one judge who should not presently be sitting on cases, the issue probably would not now be on the ballot.

Judge Miles declares that a chaotic condition will be created in the judicial system if approximately 50 judges are forced into retirement immediately after election day and that it will impose an expense on the taxpayer public since the judges will retire on a pension amounting to three-fourths of their pay.

He adds that most of the over-70-year-old judges are in good mental and physical health and are performing their duties efficiently.

There is no question that some chaos will be caused in the state's judicial system and that some highly competent judges will be compelled to retire if a yes-vote prevails on Question No. 7, as will probably be the case.

Close Vote Is Expected On Graduated Income Tax Issue

The most important referendum on next Tuesday's ballot will be Question No. 6 which asks whether the State Constitution should be amended to allow the Legislature to enact a graduated state income tax.

It will be the third time the graduated tax issue has been placed before Massachusetts voters. A similar proposal was rejected by a massive 5-1 margin in 1964 and by a 2-1 plurality in 1968.

Tuesday's vote on the issue probably will be close. The matter has not been discussed and debated as much as it was four and eight years ago. There has not been the same organized statewide fight against it.

The principal argument in favor of a graduated tax is that it would be a fairer impost than the present flat levy and would place the greatest tax weight upon those best able to pay.

Arguments against the suggested graduated income tax are that it would injure the state's economy, would make Massachusetts a less desirable place for a new or expanding business and would be likely to increase state spending at a time when more stringent economies are needed.

Governor Francis W. Sargent has urged the adoption of the graduated tax. The League of Women Voters also is supporting the proposed constitutional change, as it did in 1968.

Nicholas P. Morrissey, New England regional organizer of the Teamsters' Union, and Republican State Committeeman Edward King of West Roxbury are two of the well known figures fighting the suggested change in the State Constitution.

Move To Force Law-Makers To Reduce Size of House

In an obvious move to pressure members of the State Legislature into voting to reduce the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 240 to 160 members, the question of whether the law-makers should be instructed to do so will appear on the ballot in 52 legislative districts, including the entire City of Cambridge, part of Newton, such typical towns as Norwood and Canton and such barometric areas as West Roxbury and Roslindale.

The question reads: "Shall the Representative from this district be instructed to vote to approve the passage of a constitutional amendment reducing the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 240 members to 160 members?"

While the vote on this matter will have no binding effect on the legislators, a law-maker who did not vote in accordance with the wishes of his constituents undoubtedly would find that refusal used against him as a campaign issue when he sought reelection.

Nine questions will appear on all the ballots in the coming election. The most important is Question No. 6 which asks if the State Constitution should be amended to permit the adoption of a graduated state income tax in Massachusetts.

The summary which appears on the ballot under the question, which is worded in a confusing and meaningless manner, says:

"The proposed amendment would authorize, but not require, the Legislature to modify the Massachusetts income tax laws by the use of graduated rates instead of the present flat or uniform rates. The Legislature could do this in any one of three ways:

"1. Apply a uniform rate or percentage to an individual's federal income tax liability; or

"2. Apply graduated rates to an individual's federal taxable income; or

"3. Apply graduated rates to income determined to be taxable under Massachusetts law.

"The Legislature would also be authorized to provide for reasonable exemptions, deductions and abatement and make the definition of any term used in the state law automatically the same as it is under federal law."

While there are many legitimate objections to this proposed change in the income tax law, which would hit many wage-earners a resounding wallop in their pay checks, the indications are this constitutional amendment will be adopted because of the lack of a really effective state-wide fight against it.

Question No. 7 on the ballot asks if all judges should be compelled to retire at the age of 70. That suggested change in the State Constitution also seems headed for approval by the voters.

Here Is List Of Questions To Appear On All Ballots

In all, seven proposed changes in the State Constitution will be listed on the ballot for acceptance or rejection by the voters. In the order in which they will appear on the ballot, they are:

Common Cause Candidates Quiz

(Editor's Note: This letter was sent to all candidates for the state legislature with a copy forwarded to the Newton Graphic.)

Dear Candidate:

Common Cause, a national citizens' lobby, believes that your stands on major questions facing Massachusetts such as taxes, transportation, and pollution control, are critical for the voters to know. However, just as critical are questions that deal with basic changes of the political procedures which control decision-making at the State House.

Unfortunately, money in the form of campaign contributions and lobbying expenditures, as well as legislative secrecy, increase the power of special interests at the expense of the public. To remedy this situation, Common Cause filed five bills in the 1972 session of the Massachusetts Legislature regarding conflict of interest, lobbying controls and open meetings. All were defeated.

Common Cause intends to refile similar reform legislation in the 1973 session. We are, therefore, asking each candidate to reply to the following questions.

— Will you support legislation to open all legislative committee meetings to the public?

— Will you support legislation to have legislative committee votes recorded?

— Do you favor an end to the practice of public officials using testimonial and campaign contributions for personal use?

— Do you favor public financing of most election costs?

— Do you favor the full public disclosure of the activities and expenditures of lobbyists, those seeking to influence legislative and executive decisions?

— Will you support legislation requiring annual, public disclosure of financial holdings and interests of state legislators and high officials of the executive branch?

These are nonpartisan measures designed to benefit the public.

The National Democratic Party platform calls for open meetings and recorded votes in nearly all congressional committees, public financing of campaigns, and strong lobbying disclosure laws, and the disclosure of financial interests of public figures.

The Massachusetts Republican House leadership voted unanimously in favor of these measures whenever there was a roll call vote in 1972.

In order to permit voters to be informed on these important questions, we urge you to make your views known publicly at the earliest opportunity.

Rev. Paul S. Schweitzer S.J.

Candlelight Service Unites Miss Paul-Mr. McMullen

In a pretty six o'clock ceremony by candlelight recently, Miss Jacqueline Paul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Paul of Stoneham, became the bride of Mr. John J. McMullen, son of Mrs. Ruth McMullen of West Newton.

The Rev. Paul Hurley, of St. Patrick's Church in Lynn, performed the wedding rite in St. Patrick's Church in Stoneham which was followed by a reception in the King's Grant Motor Inn in Davers.

The bride, in a gown of white organza with chapel length train and re-embroidered bodice and sleeves in Alencon lace and seed pearls, was escorted to the altar by her father. She also wore a jewelled lace Camelot cap with a veil of silk illusion and carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations.

Honor attendant for her sister was Judith Young of Melrose ad bridesmaids were Cathy D'Arcy of Hingham, orraine Kearney of Framingham, Joan Gliel of Boston, Judy Ardizzoni of Peabody and Pat McMullen of Wayland.

The best man for his brother was Thomas P. McMullen of West Newton and ushers included MICHAEL McMullen of West Newton, Brian Pollock of Brighton, Richard Smoth of Canada, Gene Kearney of Framingham and James McMullen of Wayland.

At home now in Framingham, the couple honeymooned in Hawaii.

MRS. GARY C. duMOULIN

Pretty Fall Wedding For Miss Molta-Lt. duMoulin

The marriage vows of Miss Barbara Ellen Molta and 1st Lt. Gary Carl duMoulin were solemnized recently in a pretty six o'clock ceremony at the Sidney Hill Country Club with Rabbi Manuel Saltzman and Cantor Michael Hammerman officiating.

The couple, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Molta of Chestnut Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Charles duMoulin of Newton Centre, honeymooned in Bermuda following their reception in the country club.

Mrs. Bruce Kline was matron of honor for her sister and the groom's brother, Mrs. Peter duMoulin, was the best man. Another brother, Mr. Barry duMoulin, Mr. Bruce Kline, Mr. Laurence Lasoff and Mr. Gregory Schlueter were ushers.

For her wedding the bride chose a gown of white silk organza with Venice lace applied on bodice and short sleeve. Appliques of Venice lace also enhanced the wedding band collar, hemline of the A-line skirt, and the full length mantilla which was draped over a matching pillbox. Her bouquet was of pink and white roses with baby's breath.

Amicangioli Burns Wedding In Auburndale

The Corpus Christi Church in Auburndale was the scene of the seven o'clock candlelight wedding ceremony which united Miss Donna Marie Amicangioli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Italo J. Amicangioli of Auburndale, and Mr. John Joseph Burns, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Burns of Quincy.

The Rev. William Hamilton presided at the double-ring service Friday evening (Sept. 29th) which was followed by a reception in the Marriott Hotel in Newton.

The bride's gown was of organza in empire line with A-line skirt, and trimmed at the waist, neckline and on the sleeves with daisies. She wore a white picture hat and carried a nosegay of daisies and carnations.

Miss Karyn Ann Amicangioli, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and Miss Lisa Marie Amicangioli of Auburndale was the junior bridesmaid. Robert W. Hookway of Quincy was the best man.

Following a wedding trip to the Berkshires, the couple are at home in Framingham.

Mrs. Burns is a graduate of Lowell State College in music education and is currently in the master's degree program there. Her husband is a graduate of Stockbridge College of the University of Massachusetts.

PHYLLIS GELLER

Phyllis Geller Is Engaged to Robert Shulman

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Geller of Newton Centre announce the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis Barbara, to Mr. Robert M. Shulman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Shulman of Scarsdale, New York.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Newton South High School and received her B.S. in Education from Northeastern University this past Spring. She is presently teaching in Sudbury.

The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of Scarsdale High School and received his B.A. degree magna cum laude from Yale University in 1971. He is presently attending the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City.

A summer wedding is planned.

Sara J. Sloane Is Married to Rostrom Kershaw

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Sloane of Newton announce the marriage of their daughter, Sara Jane, to Mr. Rostrom John Kershaw. He is the son of Mrs. Rostrom Kershaw of Chelmsford and the late Mr. Kershaw.

The wedding took place in "The Library" at the Framingham Motor Inn, with the reception following in "The Regency Room". The bride wore a full-length white velvet wedding gown decorated with blue lace. Her only attendant, Miss Hope Teller of Philadelphia, Pa., wore a gown of white and shades of blue.

The best man was the bride's brother, James Sloane.

Mrs. Kershaw graduated from Emerson College in '68. Her husband, also a graduate of Emerson College, is now doing graduate work at Boston University.

After a wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec city, the couple are residing in Brighton.

Chairman of the tea committee is Mrs. Irwin F. Stuart. She will be assisted by Mrs. Clayton L. Henderson, Mrs. Prescott Richardson and Mrs. Edgar M. Holmes. Mrs. Malcolm N. Jackson and Mrs. Ralph E. Keyes will serve. Flowers will be arranged by Mrs. R. Emerson Sylvester.

Oak Hill PTA Botique Today

A Botique Unique will be sponsored by the Oak Hill PTA today from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Items appropriate for the holiday gifts will be on sale. Among the articles displayed will be social stationary, greeting cards, toys, children's pictures and paintings, jewelry, cosmetics, beaded flowers, crochet, and knitted items.

Oppenheim-Toll Wedding Held In Chicago

Rabbi David Graubart of Chicago presided at the 8:30 o'clock wedding there last Saturday in which Carolyn Ruth Toll of Chicago, became the wife of Jerrold Norman Oppenheim, formerly of Newton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Toll of Trenton, N.J., and her husband is the son of Mrs. Ruth S. Oppenheim of Newton and the late Mr. Lloyd B. Oppenheim. He is the grandson of the late Joseph Oppenheim, founding financial secretary of Temple Emanuel here.

Presented to the groom by her father, the bride wore a Mexican provincial gown and carried gardenias. Mr. Eugene P. Oppenheim of Brookline served his brother as best man.

Following their wedding reception, the couple honeymooned in the Middle East.

The newlyweds are at home in Chicago where the bridegroom, a former "Nader's Raider", is associate editor of Chicago Journalism Review; and is counsel for Citizens for a Better Environment. He is a graduate of Harvard College and of Boston College Law School. Mrs. Oppenheim, a graduate of the University of Michigan with a Bachelor and Master's degree is a reporter for the Chicago Tribune.

TRAVEL TRAILS

"Rent-an-Irish-Cottage" is a scheme devised by the Shannon Free Airport Development Company aimed at providing comfort conscious visitors with some instant Irish ambience... in picturesque locations in tiny West-of-Ireland villages, the company built new cottages that are scrupulous replicas of traditional country houses, right down to the thatched roofs and flagstone floors... They've been selling like Irish coffee on a wet afternoon!... The price alone would probably ensure that... Depending on size, the cottages sleep five to nine persons, and are fully equipped with cutlery and bedding... Weekly rent ranges from a low of $31 from October to March, up to $98 for July and August... Reaction to the "Rent-an-Irish-Cottage" scheme has been enthusiastic!

For exciting vacations at home or abroad let the well traveled staff at REGENCY TRAVEL INC. take complete charge of your trip. There's free parking available or we will deliver tickets free of charge. For your convenience we are open Mon. thru Sat. 9 A.M. - 5:30 P.M., Evenings by Appointment. There are six qualified agents to give personalized service at REGENCY TRAVEL INC., 1330 Boylston St., 731-4271.

"I was in Israel in May and June and no one there thought that a cut of some $10 billion for each of three successive years would jeopardize Israel or the Middle East."

Father Robert Drinan
WBZ-TV
October 21, 1972

"We don't want to see the instrument of deterrence in the Middle East - The Sixth Fleet - eliminated or weakened."

Lt. Gen. Yitzhak Rabin
Israeli Ambassador to Washington
Congressional Record
May 24, 1972

"I do not question Father Drinan's honest concern about the security of Israel. Unlike him, however, I believe that a reduction of American aircraft carriers from 16 to 6 - as Father Drinan proposes in the next three years would emasculate the Sixth Fleet, effectively eliminate American presence in the Mediterranean, and thereby threaten the security of Israel."

Martin Linsky
Address to Senior Citizens Group
McCarthy School, Framingham

MARTY LINSKY SPEAKS ON THE MIDDLE EAST

WHY IS THE UNITED STATES COMMITTED TO ISRAEL?

"I believe that the United States commitment to the State of Israel is based upon both moral and strategic grounds. Morally, America must bring its strength to bear in support of a people whose homeland is surrounded by nations sworn to its destruction. Strategically, the integrity of Israel is essential to preserve American interests in the Middle East, the Mediterranean and Europe. For over twenty years, conflicts in the Middle East have threatened to erupt into major confrontations between the Great Powers. Historically, the Soviet Union has regarded the Mediterranean as a chief sphere of influence. Not only has the Soviet Union provided enormous supplies of the most sophisticated weapons to the Arab countries, it has also maintained a formidable naval presence in the Mediterranean."

HAS THE SOVIET DEPARTURE FROM EGYPT CHANGED AMERICAN INTERESTS?

"I do not believe that the recent Soviet departure from Egypt has changed American interests. There has been no reduction in the Soviet naval presence in the Mediterranean. There has been a substantial increase in the quality and quantity of arms shipped to Syria."

"As Israel's Ambassador to Washington has stated: 'If there is a threat to Israel's existence, it comes from the danger of the Soviet Union's participation with its own forces in the conflict against us.'"

WHAT POLICIES SHOULD THE UNITED STATES FOLLOW IN THE MIDDLE EAST?

"I believe American policy should be based on these principles: (1) Military Support of Israel. (2) American Presence in the Middle East. (3) Settlement Only through Face To Face Negotiations."

MILITARY SUPPORT

"The United States should continue to provide Israel with military assistance and should liberalize the terms on which such assistance is made available. I am pleased that the United States has supplied Israel with over one and one quarter billion dollars in credits since June 1969, over one-half of all credits granted by this country since the founding of Israel in 1948."

"American support of Israel is consistent with the broad principle of participation that requires American allies to accept their share of responsibility. America has no ally more responsible or more dependable than Israel. Continued American military support assures not only the security of Israel, but also stability within the Middle East as a whole."

AMERICAN PRESENCE

"Moreover, the security of Israel requires a strong American presence in the Middle East. The Sixth Fleet has created a balance of power which has limited Soviet influence, stabilized potentially explosive conflicts and reduced the likelihood of Arab aggression against Israel. Nothing is more essential to Israeli security than maintaining a balance of power with the Soviet Union."

NEGOTIATED SETTLEMENT

"In addition, the United States should encourage Israel and the Arab nations to engage in direct negotiation, but under no circumstances should the United States attempt to dictate the terms of a settlement or to prescribe territorial boundaries."

IS FATHER DRINAN'S VIEW OF AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY CONSISTENT WITH ISRAELI SECURITY?

"I do not question whatsoever Father Drinan's honest concern about the security of Israel. I do, however, question his judgement about whether the emasculation of the Sixth Fleet would affect Israel's security."

"I believe that the security of Israel cannot be guaranteed by moral commitment or good will on the part of the United States. Israel can only be secure if it is an integral part of America's international defense posture - and if America's policy-makers see her security as a key element in our own security."

"I categorically reject Father Drinan's approach."

"Despite his denials, I believe that it is totally illogical and inconsistent to maintain that a reduction of American aircraft carriers from 16 to 6 - as Father Drinan proposes in the next three years - would not emasculate the Sixth Fleet, effectively eliminate American presence in the Mediterranean, and thereby threaten the security of Israel."

"Father Drinan's position is remarkably short-sighted. The Sixth Fleet stands both as a key element in America's defense posture to maintain the 'big power' balance in the Middle East, and as a symbol of American determination to protect and defend Israel."

"I believe that American policy toward Israel and the Middle East cannot - and must not - be divorced from American foreign policy toward the rest of the world. Without a commitment to a critical balance of power elsewhere and the visible means to support it, assurances about the integrity of Israel mean nothing."

DOES MARTY LINSKY BELIEVE DEFENSE SPENDING SHOULD BE CUT?

"I strongly believe that the level of American defense spending can and should be cut. The technological leadership of the United States can be maintained without spending vast sums of money on weapons systems which are technically sophisticated but strategically and conceptually obsolete. Congress has abdicated its responsibility to make certain that all funds spent on defense are absolutely necessary."

"I believe that a reordering of priorities must take place. The domestic problems facing our country - the problems of health-care, welfare, housing and the environment - must be faced and funds made available for their solution. But defense cuts cannot be made and a reordering of priorities cannot occur in a vacuum. Careful consideration must be given to the effect of such actions on our overall foreign policy."

"More than anything else, this principle demonstrates the inconsistency of Father Drinan's defense proposals. They divorce defense spending from the strategy of foreign policy and fail to appreciate the POLITICAL significance of our military posture. Defense is an instrument of our foreign policy. It is a signal to both our allies and potential adversaries of our intentions and interests. For this reason, defense reductions which appear to make sense from a strict economic point of view are often strategically and politically unwise."

We, speaking for ourselves and a lot of other concerned citizens, urge you to vote for Marty Linsky on November 7.

Organ Recital Sunday At Congregational C.

One of three major musical events commemorating the centennial of the Newton Highlands Congregational Church will be an organ recital at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon (Nov. 5) at the church. In the recital Mr. Carrol Hassman will feature the 1924 Hook and Hastings organ of the church in a program of music by Buxtehude, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Franck and Alain. Mr. Hassman received his Bachelor of Music degree in theory-composition and organ from Wichita State University, Wichita, Kansas, in May, 1970. In September, 1971, he became organist-choirmaster at Newton Highlands Congregational Church and organist at Needham's Temple Beth Shalom. He was awarded the degree of Master of Music in organ from Boston University on May of this year, and in June he also became an Associate of the American Guild of Organists.

Mr. HASSMAN HAS PLAYED A NUMBER OF RECITALS IN New England, including a program for the Northern New England Convention of the American Guild of Organists and two recitals in summer series at the Methuen Memorial Music Hall.

Authentic Greek Cooking Feature of "Boutique"

The aroma of authentic Greek cooking will permeate the auditorium of St. Demetrios Church in Weston Friday and Saturday (Nov. 10 and 11) for the "Holiday Boutique and Taverna" by the ladies auxiliary of the Church.

Most of the Newton ladies of the Philoptochos and many outside of the Church have been busy preparing for this event since November of last year.

There will be "something for everyone" with hundreds of handcrafted items which have been made by the parishioners and the Wellesley Artisans at the "Boutique". The Attic Treasures, old and new, are a major attraction and a children's activity room will be conducted throughout with many fascinating and educational things for the youngsters to do while parents browse.

Coffee, Greek Pastry, Loucoumades, and Greek Coffee will be served from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. both days at the "Taverna". From 4 to 10 p.m. mezethakia, wines, ouzo, and many other delicious foods will also be served. Plan to have an authentic Greek supper at the Church.

PULL LEVER 8A
ON ELECTION DAY

FACING US IN 1972 are the new problems of today's ever-changing society coupled with many old problems which we have been unable to satisfactorily resolve. These are the problems, both new and old, to which "Bob" Tennant addressed himself.

He opposes the Graduate Income Tax because he feels it favors big business and suggests possibly taxing business property at a higher rate. For those people of low and moderate incomes, he would favor any proposal if it would help those making less than $10,000.

2
He sponsored "Operation Identification" through the Insurance Agents' of Newton Association in conjunction with the Newton Police to curtail the raising rate of crime in the City.

He favors state financing of education as a cure for the autonomy of local school committees, with local communities permitted to supplement, but the state and federal governments contributing the larger portion. He suggests busing to achieve equal educational opportunity, on a purely voluntary basis without pressure.

He favors increased benefits to the elderly. He hopes to keep taxes at a reasonable level or gain higher tax abatements for those who need them. He hopes to prevent a large exodus of elderly people from the City of Newton.

SUPPORT FROM "ALL WALKS OF LIFE" ...

ALDERMAN ROBERT TENNANT

5
He is opposed to legalization of abortion where some of his opponents favor abortion at will. Being the father of seven children he favors the "Right to Life".

6
Being the only veteran running in the 12th Middlesex District, he is in favor of more benefits for veterans. He is extremely concerned with the present Legislature's "power play" tying up veterans' bonuses and increased benefits.

He is opposed to the legalization of marijuana where some of his opponents favor it. He can not see where legalization can be of any value to the individual, only to his detriment. Medication not Legalization.

He is in favor of halfway houses and work-release programs for those convicted of lesser crimes, saying that the present rehabilitation system groups hardcore criminals and first time offenders into one closed society which encourages crime, rather than deters it. Segregation by classes of crimes and more humane conditions should be used in the prison but halfway houses and work-release programs are beneficial for the individuals convicted of lesser crimes.

He favors mandatory retirement of judges at 70, but says they should be consulted on an advisory basis after retirement. He feels that judicial appointments and review of judicial performance should not be the governor's privilege, nor the legislature's responsibility, but given to an independent commission comprised of members of the bar association, representatives of the judicial system and other citizens.

10
He is in favor of welfare but only to those that need it and can not work. He supports local controls to prevent people from "bleeding the welfare system". He is against the idea of giving away money to people who are unable and don't want to work.

IT IS TO these problems which "Bob" Tennant is concerned, and it is this concern which is another good reason WHY YOU should make him YOUR State Representative.

From The Inside

By FRANK VAN DER LINDEN

When the White House press corps was cross-examining Henry Kissinger upon his return from secret peace talks in Paris, one newsman whispered to another: "Who's that guy standing behind Kissinger — the man in the brown suit?" "That's General Haig," came the reply.

Who's he?"

Kissinger's deputy."

Never heard of him."

Today, the White House reporters have all heard of Alexander Meigs Haig, Jr. He has emerged from the shadows of the West Wing Situation Room and popped up beside Kissinger at the latest Paris parleys with North Vietnam's negotiators, Le Duc Tho and Xuan Thuy. Only a few days before, Haig had conferred at great length in Saigon with South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Inevitably, the general has found himself in the spotlight of speculation, amid rumors that he is the discreet and quiet go-between seeking to halt the Vietnam war — a plan that might call for Thieu to step down and make way for a neutralist regime in return for a cease-fire and a prisoner exchange.

In the past few days Haig has exchanged his civilian suit for the uniform of Assistant Chief of Staff of the United States Army, resplendent with six rows of decorations. In a mere three years, since he joined the Kissinger staff, he has zoomed upward in rank from chicken colonel to four-star general, in one of the fastest advances ever made by an American military officer.

Haig will stand just behind the incoming chief of staff, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, former commander of all U.S. forces in Vietnam.

President Nixon reached over about 240 senior generals when he moved Haig, who is 47, from two-star to four-star status in a single jump, comparable only to the swift promotion of Gen. George C. Marshall.

Haig, a Philadelphia native and 1947 West Point graduate, served as an infantry officer in Vietnam in 1966-67 and came to the White House as military assistant to Kissinger in early 1969. In long days and nights of work and sometimes all-night sessions in times of international crisis, the general has shown the qualities which the President likes best: competence, coolness and courage.

Haig, who filled various Pentagon staff positions in the Kennedy and Johnson regimes, has worked closely with Nixon during the crisis over Cambodia, Laos, the Jordanian civil war, the decisions to mine Haiphong and resume the bombing of North Vietnam, and many more.

"I've seen the President's firmness in every crisis," the general told one interviewer. "he makes lonely decisions, sometimes after receiving contrary advice. . . thoughtful decisions based on intellect, not emotions. He contributes the extra ingredient of personal leadership."

When crises warm up to white-hot temperatures, and Nixon comes to the Situation Room to talk with Kissinger, Haig and Co., he is not only calm but considerate in listening to others' views. Haig has said: I've seen three Presidents in action at close range. Nixon is the most considerate."

Income Tax To Be Discussed At Chamber Of Commerce Meeting

"The Graduated Income Tax: Pro or Con?" is the subject matter for the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce's 18th Government & Business Forum meeting at Holiday Inn in Newton today (Thursday, Nov. 2) at noon.

Speakers for the forum will include William Speers, Boston attorney and former President of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce as a proponent representing the Coalition for Tax Reform and Edward King, Republican state committee member from West Roxbury, representing the Committee for Jobs and Government Economy, and opponent of the graduated income tax.

The widely-disputed question of the graduated income tax will appear on the Nov. 7 election ballot for the voters to approve or disapprove.

John L. Vaccaro, C.P.A. Chairman of the Government Committee of the Chamber will be moderator for the luncheon. Tickets are available from committee members Bernard Maher, Gestetner Corp.; Robert Platt, Platt Nursing Home Management; Robert Feely, Feely Chevrolet; John Connolly, MacIntyre, Fay & Thayer and Paul Duncan, New England Telephone Co. or from the Chamber of Commerce office (tel. 244-5300).

Liquor in Utah is sold through state-owned agencies.

Local Grandmother's Work In Brockton Art Exhibit

An exhibit of the "primitive" oils of Newton artist Maude Lederman is in progress now through Nov. 19th at the Brockton art Center, Oak street on Upper Porter's Pond.

Mrs. Lederman, a grandmother who began painting seven years ago at the urging of her husband, the late Dr. Bernard Lederman, paints in a native manner reflecting a natural talent according to curator at the Brockton Art Center, Marilyn Friedman Hoffman.

Hours at the center are 1 to 5 p.m. daily and Thursday evenings until 10. The center is closed on Mondays.

The showing of Mrs. Lederman's paintings coincides with Golden Agers Month. Senior citizens will be granted half price admission.

Temple Emanuel Couple's Club "Crystal Ball"

The Social Hall of Temple Emanuel in Newton is the setting for the Crystal Ball by the Temple Couples Club to be held this Saturday (Nov. 4th) at 8 p.m.

Jimmy Stella, tenor and entertainer, and his orchestra will host the evening and a delicious supper will be served by the Glickmans and company. Chairmen for this event are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schechter and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Safton.

Membership in the Couples Club is open to all members of Temple Emanuel and all couples of Jewish faith nor already affiliated with a Synagogue.

Couples are urged to save the following dates for upcoming functions being planned by the club: Sunday (Dec. 16); Sunday (Dec. 31); Sunday (Jan. 28); Saturday (March 24); Sunday (April 29); and Saturday (May 26).

Proceeds from the luncheon will aid the nonsectarian hospital's programs for patient treatment, medical research and professional training in chronic respiratory diseases. These programs, which are not available locally, serve as an extension of medical facilities in MASSACHUSETTS.

Physicians from Massachusetts refer patients to the hospital for treatment of severe forms of asthma, drug-resistant tuberculosis, cystic fibrosis, and other chest diseases. Children and adults are admitted regardless of their race, faith or ability to pay.

Tickets for the luncheon can be obtained from Mrs. Dominine P. DiMaggio, 74 Albion Road, Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts.

CRYSTAL BALL CHAIRMEN — Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schechter (left) and Mrs. and Mrs. Gerald Safton have completed arrangements for the annual Crystal Ball to be held Saturday (Nov. 4) in Temple Emanuel Social Hall. Festivities will begin at 8 p.m. with Jimmy Stella and his orchestra host for the evening.

Induction Set For New B'nai B'rith Members

The annual member-induction convocation for members of the Bay State Region B'nai

with Girls will be held at Camp Hadar, Clinton, Conn., over the weekend of Nov. 10-12. Joyce Jacobson, regional vice president, is coordinating the program designed to give new chapter members an orientation in the BBG program which includes Jewish heritage, service, recreation, fellowship, culture and creative events. Dawn Colcia, regional president, will preside at the business session. The entire Regional Executive Board will be involved in seminars, workshops, Sabbath services, and induction ceremonies.

The staff for the weekend will be headed by the New England Regional Director Mrs. Herman Newman, and will include field supervisors and chapter advisors.

Activities of the Newton Community Service Center are continuing "at a rapid pace," Anthony Bibbo, executive director, said this week.

There are still a few openings remaining in children's activities and a number of adult programs. Bonnie Algeri, coordinator for girls activities, stated that registrations for the sewing, cooking, crafts classes, crocheting and knitting and open activities will continue as long as vacancies remain.

The same is true with the boys open activities and boys clubs according to G. Michael Gardner. HE added that the nursing school for preschool boys and girls can also accommodate more youngsters as a result of this increased staffing.

Baton twirling, offering young people the opportunity to participate in an increasingly popular, healthy and enjoyable activity, lists a number of openings - in particular among the junior and senior high school age groups.

Mrs. Gilbert, who leads this program, stresses poise, bearing, grace, and physical dexterity.

Registrations for adult activities are also continuing. The women's Tuesday morning craft class, featuring decoupage, holiday crafts, and others, lists a few openings.

The same is true of sewing classes which are scheduled one two-hour session per week with choice of a Tuesday, Thursday or the Wednesday evening class.

There is always a warm welcome in Lodin physical fitness class which is held at the Newton Community Service Centers Wednesday mornings under the tutelage of Barbara Goldfinger. "Weightwatcher", also held at the center facility, is designed to teach the overweight to eat sensibly.

Yoga which promotes harmony of mind and body through asanas, special breathing techniques, relaxation, and increased awareness is available on Tuesday mornings and Tuesday evenings.

This is also the season to begin to think about getting into the "swing" by enrolling in one of Mr. Dan Meany's golf classes scheduled for Wednesday and Friday evenings depending upon enrollment. Classes are kept small and provide the beginner with full instructions from basics and advanced with an opportunity to improve or practice their skill.

To register for any of these activities or additional information, contact the centers at 969-5906 Monday - Friday 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Newton High Eleven Wins Big One From Medford

Connolly, Dion Lead Way To 32-15 Win; Line Glitters

BY DAVID CUTLER

Rain had been falling all morning, but by game time on Saturday, October 28, the precipitation had ceased. Nothing would interfere with Newton on this day as they romped convincingly over Medford, 32-15.

Last year's confrontation had been a close defensive battle. Medford broke it open, though, with a lucky fourth period touchdown and added another to win 14-0. But this season's contest belonged to the Tigers. They out did the Mustangs in every category, first downs, 18-13, offensive plays, 56-52, and most impressively rushing yardage, 323-162. Even with super running back Mike Colonna's 30 carries for 129 yards, medford couldn't keep up.

For the Tigers everything went well. They never lost the ball through a fumble or interception and did not have to punt once. On offense Mark Connolly and Peter Dion led the charge with 117 and 85 yards rushing, respectively. Ken Billings, Gerry Keliher, Robert Hoover and especially Quarterback Cal Maffie all enjoyed a great day in the backfield, thanks to the offensive line. Big holes and air-tight protection were provided throughout the game. Tackle Lee Levinson had a particularly outstanding afternoon. On offense he blasted the hole to run through, and on defense he kept the Medford running game on the other half of the field.

Newton continued their habit of scoring the first time they get the ball. On this occasion it resulted from a 73 yard drive capped by Billings' one yard plunge. Bill Steinberg, who was to have an off day with a hurt neck, booted the conversion wide.

The 6-0 lead was increased to 12-0 the next time the Tigers got possession. Keliher put the finishing touches on a seven play drive which originated from Newton's 44, with an 11 yard scamper.

Medford came right back with a 65 yard march of their own culminating with Art Ventresco's keeper around left end. The Mustang quarterback also kicked the PAT to cut the lead to 12-7 at halftime. In the long run this may have been beneficial to Newton.

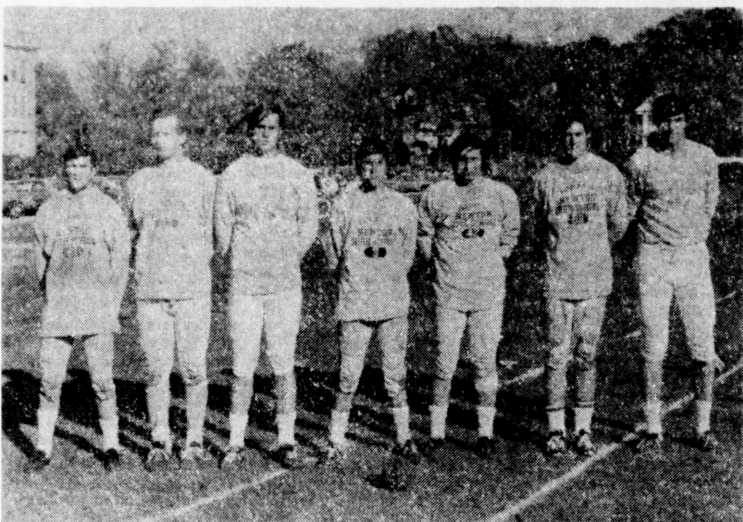

"It could have been dangerous to be winning 12-0 at the half against a team as good as medford," said Offensive Coordinator Norman Walker. "We could have come back out over-confident and been blown off the field in the second half."

The 12-7 lead did not last long. Cal Maffie directed the Tiger attack downfield following Medford's kickoff. On a fourth down from the three Maffie ran it himself. Steinberg was back on target to make it 19-7.

Newton's defensive line stopped Colonna on a fourth and two from the Newton 30, and once again the Tigers drove for a touchdown. Mark Connolly's 57 yard run moved the ball to the Mustang five. Connolly carried again, but was hauled down inches short of the goal line. Keliher got tyhe six points busting straight ahead. Steinberg boosted the lead to 27-7.

The two teams traded touchdowns in the final quarter. Colonna scored from the five at the 6:23 mark, and Newton countered with an 18 yard Maffie to Pete Laskaris aerial. Final score: 32-17.

Before the game Medford had been ranked number two in Class A and Newton seventh. Thus Ronayne's reaction: "I was surprised by how easily we won."

Stoughton Streaks By South High Eleven 47-12

By Lewis H. Freedman
Asst. Sports Editor

There was some pre-game speculation about how good Stoughton High really was.

The Black Knights were 4-1, but had beaten the likes of Mansfield, Oliver Ames, Foxboro, and Sharon — not exactly powerhouses. Last Saturday, Newton South found out how good the unknown enemy really was.

Stoughton unleashed an awesome ground game and a timely passing attack to pile up 361 yards and smash South, 47-12, at Stoughton.

The Lions were blitzed like Americans at Pearl Harbor. Stoughton started bombing South off the map early with 20 points in the first period, and continued at almost the same clip through three quarters before coach Jerome Cullen cleared his bench.

South played in a fog and before the first 10 minutes were up Stoughton was up 20-0 on a two-yard run, a 17-yard interception return of a Kevin Hoban pass and a 27-yard pass play, compliments of the Mark Abramowicz to Paul Abramowicz brother act.

The second period was more of the same. Quarterback Abramowicz astonished his home fans with a mind-boggling 94-yard touchdown pass to halfback Ralph Pollillo. And then Pollillo, who touched the ball only five times all day on offense but rushed for 121 yards and tallied three touchdowns, scored on a two-yard run.

With the score 33-0 and the Newton South coaching staff wishing it was home doing something sensible like watching Harvard-Dartmouth on the tube, the Lions' offense started to roar.

South took the ball on its own 37 and unveiled its secret weapon — fullback Steve Bucavales. Bucavales, who sat out the entire first quarter for some unexplained reason, ripped off consecutive bursts of three, 12, four, and 15 yards.

Some of Newton South's regular-season competition really took off in the state class championships, last Saturday, at Franklin Park.

Acton-Boxboro, which finished third in the Dual County League with a 13-3 record, won the Division 4 title with a low score of 98 points. Rich Smith, sixth, and Bernie Putnam, 10th, were Acton's leaders. Dual County champ Jim Kelly recorded the biggest victory margin of the day 14:53 to 15:01 in notching his second state crown. Wayland freshman Dave Salazar was also a factor in the race, placing ninth.

League titleist Weston, competing in Division 5, finished third to Apponequet and Ashland. Tom Phillips led the Wildcats with an eighth-place finish.

Tiny Apponequet emerged as a cross-country power three years ago when it won its division with a junior, two sophomores, and two freshmen. Not surprisingly, Apponequet now had three straight titles.

Mike Kelley, Frank Kelley, Ker Costa, and Calette, finished second, fourth, fifth and seventh, respectively.

Other individual champions were: Division 1-Mike Conley, Attleboro, 14:39; Division 2-Jeff Campbell, Weymouth South, 14:54; Division 3-Kevin Crowley, Wakefield, 14:51; Division 5-Keith Whitaker, Norwell, 14:45; Division 6-Dino Hoban's extra-point pass was intercepted.

The intermission rest did Newton little good. Stoughton started the third period by breaking Pollillo loose for an 80-yard touchdown scamper and then came back with another quick score. Cullen called a moratorium on scoring when it was 47-6.

South won the fourth period, 6-0.

Stoughton punted to the South 15 and Hoban ran it to the 35. Bucavales carried four times in the drive for 20 yards, but South's key asset was penalties, though it takes some deciphering to see how they benefited.

The Lions were the recipients of five free yards on their own 39. Four plays later they got five more yards. Then they got 15 more. A South penalty negated that. A Hoban six-yard running play followed, but another South penalty brought the ball back 15 yards. Stoughton returned the favor and it was advanced 15 more. In the end, substitute quarterback Tony Lombardo plunged over from the one.

Bucavales was the key man in the Newton South offense, rushing for 66 yards. Ned Moan had 36 yards in seven attempts, all in the first period. Lombardo suffered the embarrassment of a 33-yard loss, resulting from a fumble and had a negative 27-yard total as a result. He did complete South's only pass of the day—an eight-yarder to Paul Pattison — as Hoban suffered through his worst day as a passer. He was zero for five with two interceptions.

Stoughton rolled up 240 yards rushing on 25 plays, a remarkable 9.6 average per carry. Because of their opportunistic play and use of the big play, the Black Knights totaled surprisingly few first downs — three.

The Lion casualty list continues to mount. The 150-pound Hoban was shaken up in the fourth period and had to leave the game. Tri-captain Andy Moynahan missed the game with a pinched nerve in his neck and may be through for the season.

The South Jayvees, which are only 0-3-1 on the year, (a 0-0 tie with Weston was the squad's best effort.) are making just like their big brothers — they're getting physically massacred, too. Fullback Mark Aaronson has a broken finger. Mike Penzo has a torn ligament in his knee.

Punter Scott Groper has a broken hand. Jeff Lawson has a broken wrist. And lineman Paul Torney has a hyperextension of the left elbow.

There were only two conference games in the Dual county League, last week. Weston, 4-0 in the league, belted Westwood, 32-8, and Bedford, 5-0, creamed Lincoln-Sudbury, 28-0.

Steve Shaw was the Weston success story. Shaw is a sophomore who used to be a tackle. Saturday, he became a fullback and made his season's debut. He churned out 106 yards and scored two touchdowns to compliment Wildcat regular Jim Butler who tallied once and rushed for 141 yards.

Four different players scored for the Whalers as they maintained a half-game lead over Weston.

South faces a rugged Lynnfield squad this Saturday at Dickinson Stadium. Starting time is 1:30 p.m.

St. Sebastian's Eleven Wins Behind McGuire

St. Sebastian's end Bob McGuire scored on both offense and defense to account for eight points and help the Arrows end a three-game losing streak with a 17-12 victory over Thompson Academy, Saturday.

McGuire tackled Thompson quarterback Chuck Smith in the end zone for a safety in the first period and then caught a 40-yard bomb from his own quarterback, Tom Giblin later in the quarter, for a touchdown.

Halfback Mark Caravan tallied St. Sebastian's other TD on a two-yard run in the third stanza to give the Arrows a 17-0 lead. Thompson made a game try in the last period, but the Arrows held off the charge. (L.H.F.)

Newton High Soccer Team Defeats Somerville 1-0 For State Tourney Berth

BY DAVID CUTLER

The stage has been set. At stake was the Suburban league Championship and a berth in the EMass Schoolboy Soccer Tournament. The successful outcome of a grueling 18 game schedule rested on this game: Newton at Somerville, October 25, 3:30 p.m.

Somerville had nothing to lose. They had been eliminated from post-season play by losing to once beaten Medford two before. Medford held a piece of the League Title with their 12-1-5 record (29 points). B.C. High was close behind with 28 points. Prior to the Somerville encounter Newton had 27 points.

The two top teams in the League qualify for the Tournament. Medford was assured of a spot. A Newton tie (1 point) would result in a playoff between the Tigers and B. C. High. If Newton lost it would mean a third place finish and the end of a long, hard season. The pressure was colossal.

The contest was a tightly played affair. The two teams amassed a meager total of 13 shots, but the outcome was decided on one of them.

The lone tally was hardly worthy of the importance of the game. At 19:44 of the first period, the ball was rolling harmlessly past the Somerville goal mouth. In his haste to clear the ball, a Somerville defenseman booted the ball into his own net. Newton's luck held up for the remaining 50 minutes as Somerville shots struck the goalpost on two occasions. Final score: 1-0.

"We hadn't much luck all year," said a delighted Mike Buzzi, "today we had it. We deserved to win."

Luck wasn't the only reason Newton won, although it sure helped. "Our passing was much better today than it has been," added Buzzi. "We got a great effort from everyone in the game, and everyone on the sidelines."

Newton's 14-3-1 record is one of the poorest in the Tourney. But because they were finalists a year ago, they received a fairly good draw (placing in the Tourney pairings).

"The BYE (no game) we have in the second round could be very good for us," commented Buzzi. "But right now we can look no farther than our first round game against Nauset."

These pairings for the Eastern Mass. Soccer Tournament:

Lincoln-Sudbury
Rockport vs. Lynn English;
Needham vs. Wilmington.
Masconomet
Duxbury vs. Westport;
Braintree vs. Lexington.
Boston English
Hingham vs. Concord;
Quincy vs. New Bedford.
Diman Vocational
Medford vs. Falmouth;
Nauset vs. NEWTON.

NAA Lions Bow To Waltham Devils 12-8

BY LEONARD HOLT

The Newton Athletic Association Lions were defeated by the Waltham Devil Dogs, 12-8 in a hard hitting, rainy and muddy, football game at Waltham on Sunday, October 29, 1972. The game, which was delayed a good half hour due to continuous rain, was anybody's game up till late in the 4th quarter. The scoring went as follows: First period Waltham, Mike Healey, 12 yard end run. Point after failed. Second period Newton, Joe Pepper, 11 yard from Mike Mosca.

This play came from an 8) yard 9 play drive starting on Newton's 20 yard line. Quarterback Mike Mosca showed good poise as he hit Lions with passes consistently all over the field. Bobby Lipson had three great catches, covering 48 yards and on the play before the touchdown No. 43 Mark Rothman who caught hold of a 44 yard Mike Mosca pass.

The points after were scored with the same play, Mike Mosca pass top Joe Pepper. At the half, the score was 8-6 Newton. Late in the 4th-Waltham's Bill Stuart ran 15 yards for the touchdown. The points after failed and the score stayed 12-8.

All in all, the Lions are showing improvement and as the organization has finished re-organizing we are looking for two well played end of the season games. Next week the Lions will host the Wayland Chargers at the Newton Highlands field in Newton. Game time 1:00 p.m.

No flag, no parade
SEATTLE, Wash.
There's a law on Seattle's books that makes it illegal to stage a parade on city streets unless the procession is headed by a flag at least 52 by 66 inches in size. The flag, of course, must be the Stars and Stripes.

Newton's George Gardner Star Lineman At Curry; Rated As Pro Material

Curry College, an institution of some 900 students, may be sporting its first genuine professional football player-prospect.

He is George Gardner of Newton, probably the finest linebacker ever produced at the Milton college. Only a sophomore, he has made a phenomenal 115 tackles in the team's first six games this season.

In two years at Curry, George has led a defensive unit which has allowed less than five points per game in 14 contests and has helped the Colonels to register an 11-3 record.

The 6-1, 220-pound linebacker evokes high praise from his defensive coach, John Riordan, who believes he is a definite pro prospect. Says Riordan, "George has it all — aggressiveness, desire, speed and strength. He is entirely dedicated to the game. Off the field, he is very pleasant; but when he steps onto the turf, his mind is only on beating his opponent."

Gardner had never played linebacker before arriving at Curry. He was a unanimous All-Scholastic center at Newton North High School, but was moved to linebacker when he arrived at Curry last fall.

Coach Riordan cites Gardner's "instinct for anticipating where the play is and his great ability to hit" as the reason for his successful switch to the linebacker post.

Gardner is not just an expert tackler. In his first year at Curry, when he was selected to the New England College Football Conference all-star team, he blocked two field goal attempts in crucial games. This year, he has fallen on a blocked punt in the end zone for a touchdown; recovered two fumbles, and made a key interception which set up a touchdown.

George traces his football interest to his father, who played the game himself. "My father used to take my brothers and I out to the backyard to play football. My interest in the game has kept growing ever since and now, I would like to play professional ball, if possible, after graduation."

says the husky linebacker. Gardner especially likes small college football because, he says, "the pressure isn't so bad, and the coaches treat you as an individual." He praised Head Coach Tom Stephens and his defensive coach, John Riordan.

George feels the Colonels should be undefeated at this stage of the season. The team's only loss came in the final minute of play in the opening game against Maine Maritime Academy, 6-3. He believes the present team is much more experienced and mature than the 1971 unit, which recorded a 6-2 record, best in the College's history.

His coaches and teammates alike would agree that George Gardner has played a key role in whatever success Curry football has enjoyed these past two years. As to his chances at making the professional ranks — well, if his 19.2 tackles per game average this season, his fumble recoveries, blocked kicks and interceptions are any indication, he just could be Curry's first contribution to the National Football League.

South X Country Team 7th In Dual County Meet

By Lewis H. Freedman
Asst. Sports Editor

After winning three out of its last four regular-season meets the Newton South High cross-country team looked ahead to the Dual County League meet with some optimism and a little bit of revenge in its runners' hearts. This was a chance to surprise some of the teams who beat the Lions earlier in the season.

It didn't work out that way. South reverted to its early form and finished seventh in the nine-team race. Weston, 15-1 in dual meets, won easily with 39 points.

Captain Jack Ferreri was the Harriers' top finisher in the 60-man race, placing 25th over Weston's 2.6 mile course. Dave Lein, 29, Byron Rens, 36, Dave Robinson, 38, and Chris Capeless, 45, were the other Newton South point-scorers. Charley Horoika was number 48.

Westwood's Jim Kelly, one of the top runners in the state, captured the individual title in a record-setting 12:57 performance. Kelly set the previous record of 13:14 this year.

The final team totals were: Weston, 39, Acton-Boxboro, 57, Westwood, 91, Bedford, 99, Lincoln-Sudbury, 135, Wayland, 150, Newton South, 171, Lynnfield, 192, and Maynard, 230.

Acton-Boxboro swept the top three places in the junior varsity meet to romp over the rest of the field. Dave Hoover was the individual winner in 14:37. Acton had a low score of 24. The winners were followed by Bedford, 63, Weston, 67, Wayland, 102, Westwood, 161, Lynnfield, 198, Lincoln-Sudbury, 211, Maynard, 215, and Newton South, 220.

St. Sebastian's harriers topped two out of three meets, last week, to up their season's slate to 7-3 behind the impressive running of seniors Rich Mulroy and John McGoldrick.

Mulroy and McGoldrick ran together all the way and came across the finish-line in the same fashion to smash the Belmont hill course record of 13:28 with identical 13:01 timings. The top five runners in the race were under the old standard.

Dave Walsh, fifth, 13:26; Bob Murphy, seventh, 13:58; and Steve Gandolfo, eighth, 14:22, were the other Arrow placers. The Arrows crushed the Brooks School, 17-42, but lost to Lawrence academy, 23-32, in their other meets. St. Sebastian's was short handed, running without McGoldrick.

Mulroy placed third overall over his home 2.7 mile course, in 13:37. His time was a St. Sebastian's school record. Lawrence's Tom Warner established a new course record of 13:32. Warner, Rich Johnson, also of Lawrence (13:35), and Mulroy, were all under the old mark of 13:38.

Sophomore sensation Dave Jones of Newton, competing for the Rivers Country Day School, romped to a 12:58 victory in a tri-meet with the Middlesex Greenough and Noble and South, despite the fact that Rivers lost both meets.

Some of Newton South's regular-season competition really took off in the state class championships, last Saturday, at Franklin Park.

Acton-Boxboro, which finished third in the Dual County League with a 13-3 record, won the Division 4 title with a low score of 98 points. Rich Smith, sixth, and Bernie Putnam, 10th, were Acton's leaders. Dual County champ Jim Kelly recorded the biggest victory margin of the day 14:53 to 15:01 in notching his second state crown. Wayland freshman Dave Salazar was also a factor in the race, placing ninth.

League titleist Weston, competing in Division 5, finished third to Apponequet and Ashland. Tom Phillips led the Wildcats with an eighth-place finish.

Tiny Apponequet emerged as a cross-country power three years ago when it won its division with a junior, two sophomores, and two freshmen. Not surprisingly, Apponequet now had three straight titles.

Mike Kelley, Frank Kelley, Ker Costa, and Calette, finished second, fourth, fifth and seventh, respectively.

Other individual champions were: Division 1-Mike Conley, Attleboro, 14:39; Division 2-Jeff Campbell, Weymouth South, 14:54; Division 3-Kevin Crowley, Wakefield, 14:51; Division 5-Keith Whitaker, Norwell, 14:45; Division 6-Dino

South Soccer Team Has Best Record In History

By Lewis H. Freedman
Asst. Sports Editor

With one game remaining on its schedule the Newton South High Soccer team is assured of its best record in school history.

The Lions have never experienced a winning campaign, or a break-even season. The squad's best record is 5-6-2, compiled both in 1970 and 1971.

South faces Acton-Boxboro this week in its final obstacle to an over .500 season. On October 7, the Lions won a 1-0 encounter between the teams so Acton will be a tough foe to close with.

Newton south split two decisions, last week, to set up the last game do-or-die effort.

Find-of-the-year Ron Berman, whose only experience with high school soccer prior to this fall was as a manager, notched his fifth shutout of the season to give the booters a victory over Weston.

The Wildcats peppered Berman with 13 shots, but he protected the goalmouth with acrobatic actions.

South's offense, not exactly reminiscent of Pele and company, was making absolutely no headway in trying to beat Bill Pekston — until the fourth quarter. Junior Paul Linn, whose brother Roy started for the Lions, last year, came off the bench to best pekston on a shot off a scramble in front of the net.

Wayland delivered a blow to South's hopes of a solid winning season by upsetting South later in the week. The Warriors, only 4-7-1 on the year, were spoilers in a frustrating game for Newton.

The Lions finally got their offense into gear, but were thwarted by a fired-up Warrior defense. The Lions came out kicking the first period, slacked off in the middle two, and opened up again in the final stanza. The end result was a big, fat, zero. Fourteen saves on Ken Kruger. Fourteen saves by Ken Kruger.

Berman was mighty fine in the Newton nets, but that wasn't good enough. Berman stopped 11 Warrior shots, but one got by in the second quarter.

Review Of Football, Hockey Basketball, Baseball Action

There is so much going on in the world of sports these days that it is hard to keep up with everything — even if one reads the daily papers every day. Right this very minute we are being inundated by high school, college and pro football; the NBA and ABA; the NHL, WHA, and AHL; not to mention, schoolboy and college soccer and cross-country. (Don't blink twice — college basketball kicks off in a month.) Funny thing — you can't tell the players without a scorecard these days.

BASKETBALL — Isn't it a beautiful thing to see Paul Silas in a Boston Celtics uniform? Silas is the latest real-life, animated tribute to the endless storehouse of Red Auerbach resourcefulness and brilliance.

The Celtics are unbelievable and seemingly unbeatable. 9-0. What a start! This year's squad is incredibly well-balanced, much tighter and deeper than last year's eastern division champs.

I'm kind of sad to see Rex Morgan go. After seeing him play about five times in college I've had a soft spot for him. He was a hustler, and a great passer and exciting to watch in his Jacksonville days. I don't miss stiffs like Clarence Glover and Garfield Smith, however.

One league Bostonians don't hear much about is the American Basketball Association, which has some pretty strange games recently.

Last week, on the same night, Virginia crushed Denver, 155-111, and Utah destroyed Memphis, 151-98. Virginia, with traveling Julius Erving in the line-up, had eight men in double figures and went to the free throw line 94 times — a league record. There were 86 fouls in the contest — another loop mark.

HOCKEY — The Bruins have been playing like third graders without the aid of Bobby Orr. However, the loss of Gerry Cheevers seems to have weakened the Stanley Cup champs more than anything. With his defense falling down all around him Eddie Johnston has been like a puppet in the nets. And he hasn't been stopping them like he used to.

The New England Whalers are threatening to become the best hockey show in town — and one plus is their abundance of local color in ex-Boston University and Boston College icemen. They also have solid ex-National Hockey League talent in players like Tom Webster, Larry Pleau, and Gary Smith.

Whatever happened to the super Philadelphia Blazers? At last look they were 1-7 and Johnny McKenzie had a broken arm, Bernie Parent and cracked foot, and Derek Sanderson a discombobulated shoulder. Which all means that there are a lot of anonymous hockey players skating around in the City of Brotherly Love.

Last year's phenoms — attendance record-breakers in the AHL — the Boston Braves, have played in relative obscurity this year. With added competition for the hockey dollar from the Whalers, the Braves are now playing before normal American League crowds of 2-3,000.

FOOTBALL — While the Patriots have rolled over and died for the year, the New York Giants have come to life. Norm Snead, who was expected to fade quickly and finally by the season's second game, is still leading the National Conference in passing. He's throwing to a corral-full of fleet and talented receivers like Bob Tucker, Don Herrmann and numerous others. Even the running game is working, with Ron Johnson and Charley Evans.

Boston University authored one of the most amazing college upsets of the year two weeks ago by beating back Temple, 17-14. Temple, a strong team, was coming off a big surprise of its own, a 39-36 decision over West Virginia. The Terriers, who were 0-5 before that game, made it two in row by toppling Rhode Island, 31-13, last week. Tomorrow night at BU's Nickerson Field, the Terriers face Northeastern. Tom Rezzuti (Newton South, 1969) will be attempting to break the NCAA career interception record of 26 — set by BU's Harry Agganis, and tied by himself this week.

OTHER SHORTS: Harvard is tops in both the New England soccer and cross-country poll, and, as usual, is in the top ten in the nation in soccer.

Muhammad Ali should be back at the Boston Garden on December 13 to fight local heavyweight Jack O'Halloran. O'Halloran beat Ali's brother in a fight before the elder Ali retired and Muhammad wants to avenge his brother's loss.

Even baseball made the news again, last week. The Braves traded 10-year veteran Rico Carty to the Texas Rangers, straight up, for pitcher Jim Panther. Carty, who has had some exceptionally bad luck, still managed to compile an enviable .317 lifetime mark with the Braves. However, his banishment to the Siberia of major league baseball may be the worst luck he's had yet.

The Newton Athletic Association fields 7 teams, four of which are Pee Wee teams. These four Pee Wee teams feed the two Jr. Midget teams and the one Midget team. These teams teams comprise only of boys who live on the south side of Newton (Commonwealth ave. and on south). The teams, Newton Centre Jets, Waban Warriors, Highland Huskies, and the Oakhill Raiders are all fed by various elementary schools on the south side of Newton. These boys range from the age 8-11 years old, and weigh up to 95 lbs, although most of them average about 70 lbs. There are 85-95 boys now in the NAA Pee Wee program. The coaching staff for these teams are usually made up from the community from which the team originates.

There are usually 3-4 coaches per team. The coaching staff of these teams, because of the age element, must know a little bit about football but mainly be a type of person who has patience and is willing to instruct young interested boys. The primary concern is the boys, and not winning the game at this level. These Pee Wee teams play one another during the season at least twice. This year for the first time the Pee Wees are playing two teams from outside Newton. This the boys enjoy and the coaches hope there will be more of in the future. This also stretches the boys playing season out to eight games per team, rather than six.

Last Saturdays game was between the Newton Centre Jets and the Oakhill Raiders, both undefeated teams in the NAA Pee Wee standings. It was a very fast moving game, the first half being dominated by the Jets who scored their 22 points that won the game. In the second half the Raiders really came out firing but were only able to manage 14 points from the strong Jet defense. And that's how the game remained 22-14, a Jet win.

The standings in the Pee Wee division with three games remaining in the season are First, The Newton Centre Jets; Second, the Oakhill Raiders; Third, The Waban Waban Warriors; and Fourth, The Highland Huskies. Next weeks games in the Pee Wee Division will be Jets vs Warriors; Huskies vs Brookline Blue; and Oakhill Raiders vs Brookline White.

The NAA Lions dropped a 26-12 decision to the tough Brookline Rams, Sunday Oct. 22. The win enabled the Rams to stay in first place. The lions who were in the ball game until late in the fourth quarter played without the services of four starters due to injuries and weight problems, which hurt their game considerably. The Rams scored 16 points in the fourth quarter to tie the game. The scoring went as follows: Lions-first quarter-Barry Gale plunge for two yards, the points failed. Rams-ensuing punt by Brian Cockerin downed on the Lions 3 yd. line and on the fourth down a bad snap led to a safety for the Rams. Rams-second period-Brian Cockerin sweep-40 yards for TD. Ram QB Phil Kelly threw to Mike Sinelli for the extra points making it a 10-6 Brookline lead at the half. Lions-third period-QB Mike Mosca pass to Joe Pepper (Sensational Catch!) covering 12 yards, again the points failed. The Lions then had a 12-10 lead which lasted well into the fourth quarter. Rams-fourth quarter-Brian Cockerin rush-40 yds. for TD and the points were good for an 18-12 lead. Rams-fourth quarter-Bobby Ward broke away for TD 39 yard run, the points were good and that's how the score remained 26-12. Outstanding jobs were done by QB Mike Mosca, Brian Kinsella, Frank Tarrantino, and Joe Pepper.

Also, the lions plan to travel to Lansdale, Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving weekend for a game with the Lansdale Pop Warner Team. Future info will be available soon.

And in the Jr. Midget Division, The NAA Tigers who played the Brookline Rams B Team, lost 24 to 0 and The NAA Mustangs who played the Arlington Spynobers also lost by the score of 12-0.

Young Back With Lions . . .

THE NEWTON NOTEBOOK

Without a doubt Mark Young is the greatest ever produced by Newton South High. Young departed in 1964, but his accomplishments in football and track still stand as monuments to his athletic prowess.

Young long ago recorded his last high school feat, and his last college exploit was achieved before Nixon came into power. But there is a continuing chapter being written in the Mark Young athletic story — his post-graduate sports career.

Since his graduation from Yale in 1968, young has been coaching on the high school level. For the first three years he coached track in Maryland, and then last fall he returned to his alma mater to become an assistant football and assistant track coach — curiously under George Winkler and Don Sutherland, the same coaches who tutored him in high school.

Young, who was an all-state end for the Lions, (He still owns a share of the school single-season pass receiving mark of 26.) and captain of the Eli 11, is primarily an end coach for South in football.

He basically concentrates on teaching the middle distances during the outdoor track season.

Young enjoys coaching, but doesn't know which sport he prefers teaching the most. They're two sorts of sports," he said, I can't say really which one I like to coach better. You're asking me which sport I like best, which I can't choose. I just like working with kids."

Besides his teaching duties, Young finds that coaching two seasons is more than enough to keep him occupied. The thought of coaching during the indoor track season interests him, but — I'm not broken up about not doing it. Indoor track has its problems at Newton South."

Young specifically referred to the competition for bodies from four other sports, the lateness of the team's practice hours, and the fact that the squad has to be bussed to Newton High for the use of an indoor facility.

It's hard to get kids interested when you have obstacles like that," he said.

The lanky, 170-pounder was a fantastic track star at South. He still owns school records for 220 yards, (21.9), 440, (49.7) the mile, (4:25.1) and 2 mile, (9:58.0) and legs on two record-setting relays. He was the Massachusetts champion in the mile as a junior and New England titlist in the 440 as a senior.

At Yale he recorded a 1:09.6 600, then only six-tenths of a second off the world record, and he was the ICAA champ in the 440 and 600. His best quarter was 46.5.

Since his college days Young has competed three winters for the Washington, D.C.-based Sports International Track club. Young was one member of that club's world-class mile relay tandem, and the squad has included the likes of world 600-yard record-holder Martin McGrady and former NCAA medalwinner Tommie Turner.

Young is leaning towards retirement this winter because of his heavy teaching and coaching schedule and his family obligations, but his coach, Brooks Johnson, is trying to talk him out of it.

Young's thoughts on the 1972 edition of the Newton South football team are similar to those expressed by head coach Winkler.

"We're a young team," he noted. "We're 1-5, but we haven't been particularly lucky. We should be 3-3. We're not that bad a team and we should be good in the future. We could even win the rest of our games." (Lewis H. Freedman)

Chess Tournament Winner

Jason R. Arbeiter, a student at Newton South High School, won first place in the high school division of the Greater Boston Open Chess Tournament that was held recently at the Prudential Center.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Arbeiter of 99 Truman Rd., Newton Centre, Arbeiter won with a score of 4-0 in the regular tournament and 4½-½ in the playoffs.

He is the vice president of the Newton Free Library Chess Club which meets every other Wednesday evening at the main branch library.

If approved, the project's outline would be sent to the State Department of Education's School Building Assistance Bureau, where determination would be made of precisely how much state aid would be allotted to Newton for the center.

John Jodgen, administrator of the bureau, stated that the timing of the aldermen's approval is important. Newton would be eligible for 65 per cent reimbursement for the center if the City appeared on the "Area Trends" publication issued by the U.S. Department of Labor. This book contains names of cities and towns considered to be in high unemployment categories, and dictates eligibility for an extra 15 per cent reimbursement by the state for any public building construction, including school facilities.

"At the moment Newton is still on the list," says Jodgen, and "would probably be eligible for the additional reimbursement." However, there is the chance that Newton might not be on the list at the time of project approval by the Assistance Bureau.

If this is the case, the city would receive 50 per cent reimbursement of the funds. If Newton appears in either October's or November's edition of the Federal publication, it will get back 65 per cent of their capital outlay. "It's just a question of timing," stated Jodgen.

At any rate, if the Alderman approve the new center, it would allegedly cost the City a maximum of $42,000, and would enhance an increasingly popular program.

Just how popular was indicated in an answer given to a query by School Committee Member Francis P. Frazier, who asked if girls would be allowed to take the Automotive Course and to perform manual labor in the projected workshop.

A resounding "yes" was given in reply by Mrs. Rosenblum and Mr. Geer, among others.

Highlands Writer's Poetry Is Published

A new volume of poetry by Newton Highlands writer Maxine Kumin was published at the end of October.

"Up Country," focusing on rural New Hampshire, with ink drawings by Barbara Swan, was critically well-received. Mrs. Kumin's book was described in Kirkus Reviews as "a continuing pleasure;" and by Stanley Kunitz as "a spontaneous outgrowth of the natural universe that she inhabits with wonder and cherishing."

Mrs. Kumin, born in Philadelphia, Pa., is a Radcliffe graduate. Her previous works include novels "Through Dooms of Love," "The Passions of Uxport," and "The Abduction."

Her poetry and short stories have appeared in Harper's, The New Yorker, Atlantic Monthly, Saturday Review, the Southern Review, Hudson Review, and Story Magazine. She is also the author of about a dozen children's books.

From 1958 to 1961 she was an instructor in English at TMUFTS University and subsequently a scholar at Radcliffe Institute for Independent Study from 1961 to 1963. FROM 1/4% + 3/4% — SHE WAS A LECTURER IN English

Voters Can Purchase Bowen Recipe Book

Voters will be able to purchase a recipe book, offered by the nursery school, at Bowen School on Election Day, Nov. 7.

The book will be sold for $1.

The recipe book began as a fund raising project in September at a get-acquainted Pot Luck Supper for apprentices of the nursery school children.

Parent supplied recipes for the dishes they brought to the event and Trudi Cronin and Myrna Guterman compiled the cookbook.

Mrs. Kumin, her husband and three children live at 40 Bradford Rd.

Jacques Brel Slated For Theater Opening

"Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," one of the longest running combination musical-revues, is the first offering of the new Ramada Inn Smorgasbord Theater at the Ramada Inn on Route 1 in Danvers.

The case features Heather Lipscher, completing a successful engagement on Broadway in "Man of La Mancha," and Jack Drummey, Michael Wingerter, Kathy Knowles, Mark Syers and Anne Ungar.

Songs of French poet-philosopher Brel evoke the dimly lit cabarets of Paris and the Edith Piaf style of singing.

With The Candidates

Robert F. Drinan
Congressman Robert F. Drinan, who is seeking a second term from the Fourth District said this week that his attendance record in Congress — present 97 per cent of the time — "speaks for my commitment to my work."

The Democratic candidate said, "A man should prove his worth on the floor of Congress, not on public platforms seeking votes back home... and I think I have done that."

In other action Drinan said that he has asked Gavriel Shapiro who was recently released from a Russian prison, to testify before Congress about the problems of Soviet Jewry. Drinan called the granting of an exit visa to Shapiro "a wonderful development."

Martin A. Linsky
The Republican nominee for Congress in the Fourth District, Martin Linsky of Brookline, says he does not favor unilateral troop withdrawals from Europe and the removal of the Sixth Fleet from the Mediterranean.

"Such a policy," Linsky said, "would create further instability in the Middle East."

This week Linsky said he had received individual endorsements from Joseph A. Scerra of Gardner, past Commander-In-Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Nicholas P. Gentile of Newton, Commander of American Legion Post 440.

Linsky, in talking about unemployment facing the Route 128 area, said the district "needs an effective Congressman able to work within the administration to procure government contracts for new industries."

John T. Collins
The Independent-Conservative candidate for Congress from the Fourth District, John T. Collins of Newton, says that his campaign "is picking up steam at such a rate that we can now expect support of those who would like to see evidence of probability of victory."

Robert L. Tennant
Newton Alderman Robert Tennant, Republican candidate for State Representative from the 12th Middlesex district, said this week "that for too long those on Beacon Hill have danced to the tune of various pressure groups, approving program after program for which the people are being taxed heavily."

Tennant has also come out for the abolition of county government. He said such a move "would result in tremendous savings to the taxpayers."

Barbara Schiller
Republican candidate for state representative from the 12th District Barbara Schiller has called for an end to county government and the creation of smaller "regional districts". She would like these regional districts to correspond to election districts "to insure that spending agencies are responsible to the voters."

Sherry H. Jenkins
Mrs. Jenkins, a teacher from Weston who is running for Middlesex County Commissioner said she would devote full time to the position if elected.

The Republican candidate said that what is needed is "a responsible, businesslike approach to the reform of county government."

George A. Muldoon
The independent candidate for State Senator from the 13th Middlesex District, George Muldoon of Watertown, said today he is in favor of a Special Commission on Procedures for the state legislature.

He said the changes needed include making the budget available two weeks before a vote, the announcement of all votes and public hearings on the state budget.

Lois G. Pines
Newton Alderman Lois Pines has testified against Boston Edison's rate increase. The Democrat who is running to be a state representative from the 13th District told the Department of Public Utilities at a recent hearing that the public should not have to pay for advertising designed by Boston Edison to enhance its corporate image.

The Alderman also asked that the DPU reappraise street lighting Rate E.

Michael Antonellis
The Republican candidate for state senator, Alderman Michael Antonellis, this week reaffirmed his opposition to paying aldermen a salary. The candidate voted against the measure when it came up for a vote two weeks ago and stated that he would waive the salary if it was passed. Tuesday, he announced his support of the mayor's veto of the measure and said he will vote against it again if a vote to override the veto is taken.

Diabetes Lecture At Waltham Club

Dr. Lawrence I. Stellar, Chief of the Diabetes Dept. of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Associated with the Boston City and Beth Israel Hospitals will be guest speaker at the Waltham Area Diabetes Club next Wednesday (Nov. 8) at 8 p.m. in the DeVeber Auditorium of the Waltham Hospital.

Dr. Stellar's subject will be "Diagnosis of Diabetes: how does one arrive at the diagnosis?" The meeting is open to the public.

STARS — The Nonesuch Players under the auspices of Rivers Country Day School and Dana Hall, begin their season this weekend (Nov. 3-4) with three one-act plays. "The Pelicans," "Debit and Credit," and "The Trysting Place" will be presented at 8 p.m. in the Rivers Haffenreffer Gymnasium. (Left to right) John Patch, Alan Nexan, David Lilienthal, Steve Gruberman, Kenny Ferestein, Nathan Smith, Tom Klett and David Kriedberg are in the cast of "The Pelicans."

New Environmental Teacher Group To Sponsor Workshop

The need to incorporate environmental pollution information into educational curricula sparked the initial meeting of N.E.T.A. attended

Day School Holds First PTA Meeting

The Solomon Schechter Day School, located in Newton Centre, held its first open P.T.A. meeting recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gann.

Michael Wolf, a third grade teacher in the school, demonstrated and discussed the use of cuisinaire rods in the study of mathematics. Parents had the opportunity to handle the rods themselves and in this way could understand how they help convert abstract mathematical principles into the practical skills of addition, multiplication and fractions.

Mrs. Paula Blumberg, president of the Solomon Schechter Day School P.T.A. chaired the meeting.

by high school and junior high science teachers from Newton, Dedham, Wellesley, Quincy, Dover and Westwood.

The first program will be a workshop on water pollution, "The Charles River, an Outdoor Classroom" to be held at Dover Sherborn High School Saturday morning (Nov. 4) from 9 a.m. until noon. Coffee will be served from 8:45 to 9:15 a.m.

Thomas Plati of the Dover Sherborn High School and Chairman of N.E.A.T. is in charge of this program. He will be assisted by Harold Wiper of the Newton High School and Don Smith from the Environmental Protection Agency. Students from Dover Sherborn High School will also assist.

Participants will collect their own samples from the nearby Charles River and then test for coliform bacteria, algae, phosphate content, oxygen, pH and bottom organisms.

Science teachers in this region are invited to attend. Advance reservation must be made with Tom Plati, Dover Sherborn High School, Junction St., Dover 02030, or with the Norfolk County-Newton Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, 745 High Street, Westwood, 02090 (Phone: 326-4081).

B'nai B'rith Leaders Will Go To Meeting

More than 200 B'nai B'rith youth and adult leaders are expected to attend a conference on the Jewish family beginning with a breakfast Sunday (Nov. 5) at the Edward Devotion School in Brookline.

A distinguished group of community and B'nai B'rith leaders will serve as moderators for the 15 area workshops designed to plan local conferences on the Jewish Family: Peter Rosedale, Providence; Mrs. Harris Tarlin, Worcester; Eli Factor, Brockton; Mrs. David Lipsky, Randolph; Charles Ginsberg, Roslindale; Alan Bass, Hull; Mrs. Rachel Popkin, Brookline; Dr. Philip Richmond, Newton; Howard Joress, Framingham; Mrs. Bea Samuels, Waltham; Mrs. Milton Kaufman, Winthrop; Benjamin Averbook, Medford; Alan Greenberg, Peabody; Mrs. Charlotte Gross, Manchester New Hampshire; and Miss Anita Simon, Brookline.

In addition to the moderators, each seminar will have the benefit of the skills of the following resource persons: Rabbi and Mrs. Richard Israel, Robert Lapidus, Richard Goldberg, Eli Richman, Mrs. Frances Toye, Isaac Tarmy, Lester Macketz, and Sylvia Feit.

Irving Matross, Newton, and Jack Levy, Framingham, are co-chairmen of this pilot program. Anyone interested in reservations, may contact the BBO Office, 325 Harvard St., Brookline.

the charter provision that "no change in salary will take effect during the current term of the mayor in office at the time of the adoption of the ordinance making such a change."

Mann told reporters that he received between 300 and 400 letters in opposition to the salary and "numerous" telephone calls. One or two letters "at most," he said, were received in favor of the aldermanic action.

Asked if the Taxpayer's Association campaign had influenced his veto, the mayor said that he thought the association "caused a lot of people to be informed on the matter and gave them a chance to notify this administration as to how they felt."

The mayor was also asked if he thought aldermen would muster the votes needed to override the measure, and he replied that he knew of "no concerted action on their part to override."

Defending his position, Mann also pointed out that, by law, the School Committee is an unpaid organization.

"The School Committee also spends an enormous amount of time on its work," he said. "The real criteria is what kind of government the city has had over a period of years compared to cities that do pay their aldermen."

The mayor also said he would not "look happily" on any proposal to increase the mayor's salary either.

over to the state.

If the MBRC accepts the offer, it must still be appointed by the Mass. legislature before the Junior College can become part of the state's regional Community College System.

"In any event," continued Dudley, "it is necessary for the Board to come through with a strong endorsement" for the proposed affiliation. "There must be a tangible commitment on their part," before the incorporation becomes a reality.

The Board meets again later this month and may or may not approve the project at that time.

In tabling the motion, the MBRC also suspended the fate of the old F.A. Day, whose buildings reportedly impressed two officials of the State Board late in September.

"We hoped that the F.A. Day School would satisfy the state requirements," said Dudley. If a transfer is not accomplished, the old Junior High buildings would revert to the jurisdiction of the School Committee.

For the moment, however, both the Day and Newton Junior College still lie under the aegis of the City, which can only wait for the final decision by the Community College Board.

New look STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The uniforms and guns are out and blazers and slacks are in for Stanford University's security officers.

The new look is part of a reorganization of the campus police services. Even the name has been changed—from security men to community service officers.

But just in case a tougher arm of the law is needed, the new style officers carry walkie-talkies so they can call in special deputies.

Simon's Club To Hold Two Holiday Boutiques

The Charles Rive Valley Simmons Club is opening to the public two Holiday Boutiques in Weston and Wellesley to support scholarships for local Simmons College students according to Mrs. F. Roy Carlson of Newton Centre, chairman of the Boutique parties.

The coffee-time boutique in Weston to be held on Monday, Nov. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at the home of Mrs. Michael De Bartolomeis of 91 Sherburn Circle, Weston, will feature the sale of plants.

Included in the sale will be: African Violets, grown by Flower Show Blue Ribbon Winners, gardenia plants, terrariums, made from Maine woodland materials in interesting containers and hand-made decorations, gifts, crafts and Colonial candles. Assisting at the boutique will be Miss Dorothy Colburn of So. Natick, Mrs. William Pease and Mrs. George Coker of Weston.

The dessert boutique in Wellesley Hills will be held on Monday evening Nov. 13 from 8 to 10 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Charles Dixon, 32 Laurel Ave., Wellesley Hills. It will feature the sale of home-made foods, pies, breads and jellies, along with hand made gifts, crafts and candles. Assisting Mrs. Dixon will be Mrs. Louis Fessie of Wellesley Hills, Mrs. Ralph MacGilvra of Wellesley Hills, Mrs. Frank Cuetara of Wellesley, and Miss Dorothy Colburn of So. Natick.

Sponsor Party Country Players Rehearsing Production Of "Anything Goes"

Mrs. Stanley Gaffin of Newton Centre and Mrs. Edward Cutler of Newtonville were co-chairmen of the annual Halloween Party sponsored by Mayflower Lodge and Chapter of the B'Nai B'rith recently at Boston City Hospital.

More than 80 children were treated to goodies and were given "trick or treat" bags containing hats, masks, coloring books, crayons and other things. About 20 youngsters waiting in the emergency ward were surprised too when they became part of the festivities.

Entertainment was provided by Izzy Doveburd, Sarah Daniels and Jamie Gainsboro. Bernie Goldberg of the lodge appeared as "Happy the Clown."

Other Newton women who participated were: Mrs. Lester Bovernick, Mrs. Herbert Cohen, Mrs. Matthew King, Mrs. Alvin Waterman, Stanley KMAFLAN and Louis Needel of the AZA Haym Salomon BGG, youth groups sponsored by Mayflower Lodge and chapter also helped out.

Henry Austin is chairman for MAYFLOWER Lodge. Mrs. Annette Ross of Newtonville is president of the chapter.

Sphinx moths vary from bumblebee-size to giants with eight-inch wingspreads.

The Newton Country Players will present "Anything Goes" on Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18, at 8:15 p.m. at Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton Corner.

William Taylor of Ent'Actors Guild of Worcester is directing the production. During the last eight years, Taylor has been a director, musical director and choreographer for more than 60 shows, including "Sweet

Corny history
CHICAGO (UPI) — Nobody knows when native Americans began using corn, but there is a precise date and place of its introduction to Europeans.

The modern history of corn, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, began November 5, 1492, when two Spaniards whom Christopher Columbus had delegated to explore the interior of Cuba returned with a report of a grain which was "well tasted."

Later explorers of the New World found corn being grown by Indians in all parts of America where agriculture was practiced, from Canada to Chile. Eventually scientists established that corn was growing in North America at least 80,000 years ago, long before the arrival of the first man.

The city of Jackson, Miss. is named after Gen. Andrew Jackson.

Election Day Cake Sale

The Ward School PTA will hold a cake sale in the school gym on Election Day.

A variety of home baked goods will be available for sale while the polls are open. There will also be coffee and doughnuts.

AS in past years, the Ward School mothers will be preparing some of their own specialties for the sale.

3 GREAT STORES TO SERVE YOU

Two Drinan supporters who won't be voting for him this Tuesday.

When a Congressman has done the kind of job Robert Drinan has done, he gets a lot of attention, even beyond his own district.

So it's not just people who vote in the Fourth District who are impressed with his record.

It's also people like Sen. Ted Kennedy and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff.

They won't be able to vote for Congressman Drinan on Tuesday. But you can, so think about what they have to say.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy

"I have the highest respect and admiration for Congressman Drinan.

"In the past two years, I have watched him compile a record as perhaps the finest and most effective first-term Congressman in the House of Representatives.

"I believe that Fr. Drinan can truthfully say that he has done more for more people in less time than any other freshman Congressman.

"That is why you elected him two years ago, and that is why I hope you will elect him again."

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff

"Robert Drinan has repeatedly been a leader in the efforts to help Israel, to force more than lip service to the plight of Soviet Jews, to provide Israel with funds for the resettlement of new immigrants, and to bring about an end to Arab terrorism.

"I urge you all to do everything possible to return him to Congress. Because Robert Drinan is one of a kind and we can't afford to lose him."

Re-elect Congressman Drinan.

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

1. This provides for the taxation of land devoted to agricultural and horticultural purposes on the basis of its use rather than its full fair market value.
2. This gives 18-year-olds the right to vote and ratifies a change already made.
3. This would remove a long-ignored provision from the State Constitution which prohibits paupers from voting.

China report: woman's roles

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
UPI Foreign Editor

CANTON, China (UPI)—"Women support half the sky. We earn together, and we spend together."

This is the idea of "women's lib" in China today, as expressed by Cheng Sung-Ken, a leading member of the Revolutionary Committee at the Hsinhua (New China) commune near Canton.

And on a 19-day tour of the country this summer a group of UPI executives did come to the conclusion that women in China are equal—at least in the working area.

The vast majority do the same jobs as men, in the factories and on the vast communal farms. Women even dress as men—or vice versa—in the universal unisex outfit seen everywhere in the country.

Factory-Worker
Fang Kui-mei is a factory worker. She has worked in textile mills since the age of 12, under the old regime and under the new. She is now 42 and makes 78 yuan ($31) a month, two yuan ($80) more than her husband at the Peking No. 3 Textile mill in the Chinese capital.

With their three sons of 14, 12 and 9, she and her husband live in an apartment of two rooms, plus shared kitchen and a flush toilet, on the top floor of one of the three-story apartment houses on the factory grounds.

Mrs. Fang works the middle shift beginning at 2:30 p.m. Her husband, Yang Shu-tung, works days. Most of the time she cooks at home for the family, although they can easily and cheaply eat at the factory canteen.

Both came to the factory in 1956 from Shantung province in northeast China where they met and married. They have taken their children back several times.

A pleasant, brown-faced woman, Mrs. Fang has decorated her living room with scenic pictures of mountains and streams along with the picture of Chairman Mao Tse-tung and one frame of family snapshots.

The room has couches and chairs, but doubles as a sleeping room. The bedroom has a bed, two wardrobes, a small dresser and a sewing machine. The kitchen has a two-gas burner and a sink supported by bricks. She shares it with another family.

The building and the apartment are clean, although the floors are of cement.

What will her children do?

"Some want to be soldiers, others workers. It will depend on where they are needed." Women factory workers can retire at the age of 50 if they wish. Men retire at 55 or 60. Pensions run up to 70 per cent of the salaries, depending on length of service.

Maternity leave is eight weeks with full pay, and the new mother gets time off to nurse her baby.

At least in theory, men share the household tasks.

Woman Doctor

Prof. Ling Chiao-chi is a noted woman doctor, head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Peking Capital Hospital, a leader in the birth control movement and a member of the standing committee of the National Peoples Congress.

She started at the hospital as a medical student in 1921 when it was the Peking Union Medical College run by the Rockefeller Foundation and was graduated in 1927, one of two women in a class of 16. She was at the University of Chicago in 1939-40, and her English is excellent.

A wispy, energetic woman of 71, she has 44 doctors on her staff and all but five are women, a far different situation than when she began studying medicine and women were barred from leading positions. About half the doctors in China are now women, she said.

"The women in New China are much better off," she says, her eyes sparkling. She has maintained contact with a few colleagues outside China—"More are writing me now."

Interpreter

In Soochow, one of the garden cities of China, 30-year-old Chen Yu-ling and her five-year-old son live with her parents. She is an English interpreter for the China Travel Service. Her husband is an engineer in Wuhan, and they have lived apart for five years.

The correspondents of the official Hsinhua (New China) News Agency often do not take their wives when they are sent abroad.

Wei Shu-lin runs a factory. She has headed the Revolutionary Committee of 11 members at the Peking Arts and Crafts factory for the past six years. A businesslike woman in her 40's, she wears the usual white blouse and trousers. The factory makes fine art objects—jade and ivory carvings, makes lacquer ware and cloisonné and does traditional paintings.

Commune

Most of China's women are among the 80 per cent of the population which live in the countryside outside the cities. Traditionally, they have worked but now things are better. No longer are poor peasant girls sold in the cities as prostitutes nor are they the concubines of rich landlords. The landlords are gone.

Tung Shiao-mei, 44, lives on the Tang Wan Peoples Commune half an hour's drive from Shanghai. There are 5,400 households there and 23,000 persons.

Mrs. Tung works in the rice fields from 7 a.m. until 11. In the afternoon, she goes back from 1 until 5:30. She remembers how it was.

Before the Communist victory in 1949, she said, her husband, Wang Chin-shu, 48, owned half an acre of his own land. They lived in a hut in the fields, she said, and often had to eat the pumpkin mush now fed to the hogs.

In 1949, they were given another sixth of an acre, but it was all merged into the commune when communes were formed throughout China in 1958.

They have two large rooms divided into four in a long whitewashed building on one side of a lane. A kitchen and two other rooms are in another directly opposite. Their 23-year-old son has a room of his own, and their three daughters, 16, 13 and 10, share another.

"We live much, much better now," she said, standing outside their house. Her husband works in the commune brick factory.

In Politics

For all these things, it is doubtful if women yet share real political power in China. In the Communist party political bureau, there were two women out of 25 members. One was the wife of Mao Tse-tung, Chiang Ching. The other was the wife of Defense Minister Lin Biao, Yeh Chun.

Mao has revealed that Lin was killed last September in a plane crash seeking to escape to Russia after trying to establish a military dictatorship. Yeh Chun has not been seen since then either.

Only 12 members of the Politbureau remain, and Chiang Ching is now the only woman.

More spice in our life

NEW YORK (UPI)—

Americans are putting more spice in their lives.

The American Spice Trade

says consumption of spices, herbs and seasoning vegetables totaled 386 million pounds in 1971, an increase of nearly 42 per cent in less than 10 years.

Figuring in the growth are two new to most United States consumers and two old-fashioned ones whose distribution is increasing.

Growing interest in Chinese cooking has created a market for star anise, available largely in specialty stores and food departments of large department stores. It comes from a type of magnolia tree and resembles a small brown star with many points. Its licoricelike flavor is stronger than that of regular anise, which is the seed of an herb related to parsley and dill.

Whole green peppercorns, or unripe Piper nigrum, also are increasingly available in a wine vinegar pack in fancy food stores. They're suggested for seasoning dips and cocktail snacks, meat, fish and poultry saucers, stuffings and salad dressings.

Juniper berries and gumbo file are the old-timers more in British special stamps

LONDON (UPI)— Britain is issuing three special stamps this fall to mark the 50th anniversary of the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC).

One stamp shows a selection of microphones used by BBC, another a home-type wooden horn loudspeaker receiver used in the 1920s and the third the latest color television camera.

Another special stamp commemorates the 75th anniversary of the first radio transmission across water by Marconi and Kemp in 1897.

And even in the most properly executed, legally correct will, people are constantly finding fresh ways to express plain and simple affection.

A few months ago the following will, only 18 words long, was admitted to probate in a New York courtroom:

"Dearest George,
All I have is what you gave me. So everything I have is yours.
Lovingly, Helen."

Don't be fooled by the Graduated Income Tax!

Here's how much you'll pay. Let's assume you're single, and take the standard deductions:

If your earnings last year were —	you paid state income taxes of —	but next year your state income tax will be —
5,000	146	167
8,000	296	355
12,000	496	609
15,000	646	821

As usual, the lower and middle income wage earners will end up shouldering this tax. The very people it's intended to help. The simple fact is, there are just far too few high income bracket taxpayers, and they have far too little income to shift much of the burden on them.

More specifically, the table above shows exactly how much taxpayers will have to pay under the proposed graduated income tax. The table is based on an income tax of $1 billion — a tax increase that is inevitable. Here's why.

Using the flat rate tax, the state raised $700,000,000 last year. Most elected leaders agree they want an added $300 million next year. Therefore, they will have to raise their income tax take from $700 million to a minimum of $1 billion. That's 30% of the $3 billion the Federal Income Tax raised in Massachusetts last year.

The last thing we need is a tax increase.

Waban Woman's Club To Meet On November 6th

The Waban Woman's Club will meet on Nov. 6th at 12:30 for dessert and coffee, with Mrs. William Harney, Jr., Mrs. William Hadley and Mrs. John Long as hostesses, and Mrs. Andrew Nesdall and Mrs. Robert McWilliams as pourers. Mrs. Joseph Morog will conduct the 1 p.m. business meeting, and Mrs. Melvin Chalfen as a representative of ACT will report on the aims and accomplishments of Action for Children's Television, an organization that has received wide-spread attention.

The program will deal with Consumerism, and the speaker will be Miss Susan Horwitz of the Boston Gas Company. She will discuss Massachusetts laws, shopping in the supermarket, purchasing appliances, and other relevant subjects.

Mrs. Don Fawcett will introduce Miss Horwitz and will head a panel of club members who will present questions and problems they have encountered.

The Newton Federation recently sponsored card parties and raised funds for the proposed YMCA building and also for Medic Alert. Waban club members of the Newton Federation are Mrs. Don Fawcett, Mrs. Robert McWilliams, Mrs. James Mitchell, Mrs. Andrew Nesdall, and Mrs. Alfred Weaver.

Waban members of the Massachusetts State Federation are Mrs. Don Fawcett, Mrs. Henry Lambert, Jr., Mrs. Joseph Morog and Mrs. Robert McWilliams.

The Federation announces the availability of $91,688.63 for scholarships and urges interested persons to apply. Frequently these scholarships are not used because of lack of publicity.

The Fall meeting of the Federation will take place on Oct. 31st at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Mrs. Salvatore Staulo has been appointed chairman of Veterans Service Committee of the Waban Club. Knitters are urged to contribute 6 inch squares for lap-ropes.

Mrs. R. Laning Humphrey, chairman of Home and Heritage Committee, plans to focus attention on members' reports of visits to historic homes and places of interest. Booklets are now on sale through the libraries and Jackson Homestead on the historic background of most of Newton's villages.

Plans are under way for the Phanthropic Party at the Waban Club Dec. 4th to raise scholarship money for eligible Newton students. Without charge, everyone is invited to patronize the gift boutiques and kitchen donations of cooked and frozen foods; and tickets for luncheon and entertainment may be procured in advance.

barbara Schiller
for state representative

Barbara Schiller believes in a trite political platitude:
That government belongs to the people

Running on a record of experience and involvement in the community which needs her representation, Barbara Schiller pledges herself to be a representative of all the people all the time. Barbara Schiller believes Newton deserves a full-time job from a full-time representative on Beacon Hill.

Being a good state representative is more than just filing bills. Anybody can do that. And it's more than voting on bills. Anybody can do that, too.

Being a good representative means seeing that bills get turned into programs—effective programs that make life a little easier. At the lowest cost to the taxpayer.

That's why Barbara Schiller should be your state representative. She has the energy and imagination to make programs work. And if they don't work, she has the courage to send those bureaucrats back to the drawing boards.

CAMPUS NOTES

Mark L. Friedell, son of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Friedell of 122 Temple St., West Newton, graduated cum laude from Beloit College in Beloit, Wis. at the end of the summer.

He received a Bachelor of Arts degree in chemistry.

Michael Rendish of Cabot St., Newton, Chairman of Boston's Berklee College of Music Electronic Music Laboratory, will give a special demonstration of the school's electronic synthesizer to students from Quincy High School next Wednesday (Nov. 8).

Rendish teaches courses in electronic music, and is an instructor in arranging, acoustics, and harmony at Berklee, where he also graduated from. He is a recipient of the Downbeat Hall of Fame Scholarship.

Samuel Z. Goldhaber of 56 Devonshire rd., Waban, has been accepted and registered as a member of the class of 1976 at Harvard Medical School. Samuel received his A.B. degree from Harvard.

John Crimlisk of 4 Pembroke st., Newton recently received certificate from the New England Appliance Service School in Boston, following completion of a 22-week course.

As a major appliance service technician, Crimlisk will be qualified to go into business for himself or accept a position in one of the many branches of industry in this field.

Richard Gurry, son of John W. Gurry of 57 Hunnewell ave.,

Newton, senior in the teacher education curriculum at Shepherd College in Shepherdstown, W. Va., is serving in a supervised teaching assignment in Brunswick, Md.

A graduate of Newton High North High School, Gurry is completing requirements for graduation and a B.A. degree. He is teaching language arts with the supervision of the regular classroom teacher.

Karen Lane, daughter of Mrs. Barbara C. Lane of 228 Wiswall rd., Newton Centre, was a member of the cast of a one-act play by the Jean-Claude van Itallie at Ottawa University in Ottawa, Kansas.

Miss Lane is a sophomore at the University.

Alan L. Braunstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Braunstein of 67 Prentice rd., Newton Centre, is a program director of the new Skidmore College Radio Station in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

He is a member of the class of 1975.

Debra A. Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ross of 652 Sawmill Brook parkway, Newton Centre, and a 1971 graduate of Newton South High School, has been accepted as an in-residence student at the Geological Institute of America in Los Angeles.

She will study for a career in fine jewelry, gem appraisal, and identification of precious stones. Upon completion of the course, Debra will qualify as a registered gemologist.

G. David Noonan, a Newton resident, has enrolled in a special course in salesmanship at Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston. Conducted by Sales and Marketing Executives of Greater Boston, this ten-week course is being taught by eminently qualified members of the association.

It is but one of several educational seminars offered to raise the standards of the profession in this area.

Henry Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Price of 30 Sur Hill lane, Newton, has been named to the Dean's List for the 1972 spring term at Babson College in Wellesley. He is a junior at Babson, and an alumnus of Newton South High School.

Donald J. Gentile, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Gentile of 50 Wildwood Ave., Newtonville, has been appointed to the athletics committee of Colby College in Waterville, Maine.

The committee consists of administrators, faculty and students and advises the president on matters of athletic policy, intramural and intercollegiate, and approves all intercollegiate athletic schedules.

Gentile, a graduate of Newton High School, was appointed to the committee by the Colby student government. He is a freshman.

Susan C. Joliff, daughter of Audrey C. Joliff of 19 Crosby Rd., Chestnut Hill, has been accepted for admittance to Northeastern University.

She is among 3,700 freshmen who entered Northeastern this fall. Her mother is an instructor of modern languages at the university.

Eight Newton residents attended the 111th Alumnae Council at Simmons College recently.

They were Mabel Yeo Wheepley of 66 Lincoln Rd., Harriette Gordon Ellis of 45 Claremont St., Barbara August Moskow of 47 Wayne Rd., Minna Cofman Katz of 46 Winston Rd., Mae Wachtel Dolby of 280 Parker St., Marion D. Wheller of 66 Warren St., Jane McCormack Childs of 16 Rowndwood Rd., and Catherine Fitzgerald Backer of 45 Cragmore Rd.

Over 100 officers of Simons' regional and class organizations attended the Leadership workshops and a multi-media presentation, "Trilogy", presented by the American Alumni Council.

In addition, the weekend also included the dedication of Simon's new $6 million Science Center and the college's annual Honors Convocation.

Lucretia S. Gruber of 30 Shaw

St., West Newton, has been appointed Instructor in French in the Department of Romance Languages at Tufts University.

Mrs. Bruber graduated with an A.B. degree from Wellesley College in 1962 and an A.M. degree from Harvard University in 1963. She formerly was a teaching fellow at Harvard University.

Wooden utensils should be washed in sudsy lukewarm water and dried thoroughly. They should never be soaked or put through the dishwasher, nor should they be left standing in foods, for they will stain and absorb odors.

One of the most popular items in the home is the wooden salad bowl. It comes in a wide assortment of sizes, shapes and woods. Make certain the bowl is in the natural state or is a sealed wood, which is a special process and not just varnished.

have come into their own once more. From measuring spoons to butcher blocks, they make today's kitchen glow with the warmth of wood.

There are many advantages to using wooden kitchen utensils. Their handles do not get hot when stirring hot foods and they will not scratch pans and bowls. They are lightweight and will not melt out of shape if exposed to heat. The most practical wooden kitchen utensils are made from a hardwood, such as white ash, with a smooth finish for easy handling.

Community Day Theme Is "Coming Of Age"

"Coming of Age" is the theme for World Community Day which will be observed by Church women United in Newton Friday November 3 at Mary Immaculate of Lourdes Church Rectory, 270 Eliot street, Newton Upper Falls, at 10 a.m.

The program which has been arranged by Mrs. Harold A. Pulley, chairwoman of the day, will consist of a panel of two speakers, Mrs. Irving Williams and Dean Nossek, who will explore the topic "Coming of Age."

Mrs. Williams, who has done graduate work at the University of Wisconsin, is the Metro Coordinator in Wayland and is chairman of the Newton-Wellesley area of the health Planning Council of Greater Boston. She is also on the Board of Directors of the YMCA.

Nossek is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and is studying for his Th.M. degree in Biblical Studies at Boston University School of Theology. He is an intern at Myrtle Baptist Church.

The program will be opened by Mrs. Fernand Boudreau, president of Church Women United in Newton, who will conduct a short business meeting. Mrs. William C. Lowe, Spiritual Life Chairman, will lead the devotional services based on the continuing theme, "Coming of Age."

Following the speakers, refreshments will be served.

The hostess of the day, Dorothy Marietti, president of the Guild of St. Elizabeth, will be assisted by Bertha Arsenault, Dorothy DeMichele, Joan Goodwin, Mary Hosmer, Katherine Murphy and Mary Smith.

Parking is available on Linden street in back of the rectory and, as usual, child care services will be furnished. All women in Newton are cordially invited to celebrate this World Community Day.

Rabbi To Speak At Temple Reyim

Dr. Andre Ungar, Rabbi of Temple Emanuel, Westwood will speak to the Combined Temples Adult Education Program at Temple Reyim, Newton, Tuesday, November 8. His topic will be "The Jewish Stake in Africa."

Dr. Andre, who is also an associate professor of Comparative Religion at the State University of New Jersey, has done extensive research on the Jewish communities of Africa. He came to England after surviving the Wecond World War in his native Hungary. He graduated from the Leo Baech School of Theology in London as an ordained rabbi and received his Ph.D. degree in Philosophy from the University of London.

The combined Adult Education Prgram consists of both classes and lectures. The classes commence at 8 p.m. and the lecture begins at 9:15 p.m. The cost of a single lecture is $1. Participating temples in the Combined Program are Temple Emanuel, Temple Emeht, Temple Mishkan Refila and Temple Reyim. The lectures take place at 1860 Washington st., Newton.

Baha'is Observe U.N. Day

The Baha'is of Newton observed United Nations Day with an international buffet supper and a program of music and slides.

The event was held at the home of Mrs. Nancy Desatnick of 12 Cotton St. The supper menu included Chinese, Italian, French, Armenian, Persian, and Hungarian dishes with an American dessert topping the feast.

The program consisted of a talk on the meaning and significance of World Unity, an ideal shared by the United Nations and the Baha'is, music, and a slide show of Baha'i Shrines in Haifa, Israel.

Temple Thrift Shop Is In Its 21st Year Now

Old fur coats and vintage army uniforms are among the clothing offered for sale by the Thrift Shop of Temple Shalom, 175 Temple St., West Newton.

This is the 21st year the Thrift Shop has offered to the public second-hand clothing and small household things at drastically reduced prices. The Temple Sisterhood runs the TMHTRIFT Shop which is in a small building on THe Temple grounds and turns the proceeds over to the Temple operating fund.

The Thrift Shop is open only on Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. until mid-November. It is under the operation of Mrs. Isabel Shain, Mrs. Samuel Stearns and Norman Hollis.

This Week's Best Buys

Courtesy Massachusetts Department Agriculture

Excellent and varied selections of native flowers are at hand to make your home gay and colorful this season, says the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture. You'll find plenty of potted plants and cut flowers to brighten your home and your spirits.

How long has it been since you adorned your dinner table with a fresh floral centerpiece? There is an abundance of fresh brightly colored carnations, roses, chrysanthemums and snapdragons, all grown here to last longer.

There are many locally grown potted plants available also, including potted mums, African violets and gloxinias. If you would like something a little larger or more exotic, you may select from rubber plants, flowering pepper plants and beautiful green philodendrons, in several varieties.

Apple time continues in the Bay State. MDA says this is an excellent time to buy any of the several varieties grown here. Even some of the rarer varieties you don't see too often are available at most roadside stands now. All are fresh from nearby orchards.

Best buys this week include the ingredients of two of New England's favorite dishes, stew and New England Boiled dinner. In good supply and very reasonable are native cabbage, carrots and parsnips. A New England boiled dinner wouldn't be the same without fresh cabbage. Fresh cole slaw adds variety as a side dish to both.

Locally grown potatoes are very reasonable when purchased in 50 pound sacks at your nearby farm stand. They will keep very well if you store them in a cool, dark place.

For even more flavor in your stew, make it the day before and store it in the refrigerator over night. You can even freeze it for future use. Stew is a most hearty meal for the cold weather and with all the vegetables you use, it's packed with vitamins.

The average retail price of meat has advanced about 35 per cent in the past 50 years.

Drug fighter tells how to help addict

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Clifton J. Alexander received a letter recently from a former patient.

Dr. Alexander had been treating the man for drug addiction at his Tucson, Ariz., clinic, but for romantic reasons, the man decided to leave the state.

There, he applied to a drug treatment center, but was told there would be a waiting period of several months. He resumed using heroin, committed a robbery to finance his habit. His letter was written from a prison. He was beginning a 12-year term.

"If only I could have been treated, I wouldn't have to spend my 20s in the pen," he wrote to Alexander.

There are an estimated half million heroin addicts in the United States today. In the past three years, Alexander has treated 700, and he says 80 per cent of the treatments have been successful.

"I define that as people who are able to carry on normal activities with normal family lives," Alexander says.

He and his sister, Sandy, a freelance writer, have written a book called "How to Kick the Habit," which includes suitable diets for addicts and advice on how to seek treatment.

Alexander says it is "absolutely impossible and useless to try to treat anyone who doesn't want to be treated" for drug addiction.

"They have to be motivated to come in and to stay away from their old friends," he says.

He recommends that those who want help see their family physicians or seek a drug treatment clinic. He says such clinics are required by law to keep records of their patients, but will not turn over the information to authorities without a court order.

At his clinic, Alexander uses Methadone "as a mechanical device to stop the craving and to promote a feeling of well-being."

He is a firm believer in Methadone.

"There had been a lot of criticism of Methadone," he says, "but my patients say it helps them. Even if it is addictive, how much better for them to be addicted to it than roaming the streets, looking for a connection, arrested. They are functioning as normal human beings on Methadone."

He said a heroin habit costs from $40 to $200 a day, and usually is financed through criminal activities. Two dollars will buy enough Methadone to keep most addicts functioning and on their jobs for four days.

"The oldest way of withdrawing is cold turkey," Alexander said, "and many places still believe in it. But the percentage of cures hasn't improved from the three per cent it has always been, and most people lack the physical and moral stamina to go through that torture."

"Most addicts won't voluntarily cold turkey twice. They'd rather go to jail."

"And the most important thing is to find them a job or get them back in school."

"There's no universal panacea. We need more education, particularly by those who have learned the hard way. We need to get up far more treatment and counseling centers so addicts won't have to wait months to get help."

Temple Beth Avodah Plans Sabbath Meal

The Jewish day is measured from sunset to sunset, thus the Sabbath arrives on Friday evenings. Traditionally, the Sabbath is considered the "Queen" of all holidays. . . and is welcomed joyfully into the home with the lighting of candles, the chanting of the Kiddush or blessing over the wine, a special chale (bread) . . . fancy dishes and delicious cooking.

Friday (Nov. 3) the Temple Beth Avodah family will share a Sabbath meal prior to the worship service. The third year Hebrew calls will recite the blessings over the candles and wine. Joyous songs will greet the Sabbath Queen, and a traditional Friday night mael will be served in the social hall.

Then the group will move into the Sanctuary for the worship service, conducted by Rabbi Robert M. Miller. This is a first for the

Temple Reyim Totem Pole Dance Nov. 18

The Brotherhood and Sisterhood of Temple Reyim, 1860 Washington St., Newton, will present "An Evening at the Totem Pole," featuring Baron Hugo and his orchestra of the big band era, on Saturday night, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m. in the Ordis Social Hall.

A late evening supper will be served for $15 per couple.

For table arrangements and reservations contact either Mrs. Howard Gordon at 244-5928, or Mrs. Arthur Kaufman at 332-0829.

Organ Recital Sunday

An organ recital will be given Sunday evening (Nov. 5) at Central Congregational Church, 218 Walnut st., Newtonville, at 8 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the recital, sponsored by the Goethe Society.

Hans-Joachim Bartsch will perform.

Bartsch, a native of Schreibersdorf, Germany, studied church music at the Music Academy in Detmold. He was tutored in organ by Michael Schneider and in harpsichord by Irmgard Lechner. He continued his studies in Paris, Amsterdam and Zaandam in Holland; and has been the choirmaster and organist at Weissfrauenkirche in Frankfurt am Main since 1955.

Among the awards he has received are the Belgian Government Prize (1963), and first prize in the International Organ Competition in St. Albans, England (1965).

He has taught organ and harpsichord since 1965 at the Institut fur Musikerziehung, University of Frankfurt; and also at the Church Music School in Frankfurt.

In March, 1970, he toured South Africa and conducted lectures at the University of Bloemfontein.

Makes a list

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two-thirds of working women in one study said they go to the store with a shopping list. They make up their lists by checking their supplies on hand (86 per cent), checking advertising for specials (79 per cent) and asking the family (58 per cent).

The study was done for the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Rec. Dept. Plans For Winter

Plans for the upcoming winter indoor program schedule were discussed at a recent staff meeting of the Newton Recreation Department. Recreation Commissioner, John B. Penney reported that a combined School and Recreation Department program in the neighborhood schools is set to begin on Dec. 4. The program of informal gym activities for boys and girls will be operating at the Hyde, Carr and Burr Schools. The instructors will be physical education majors from Northeastern University working under the cooperative education program.

Commissioner Penney also reported on projects completed or underway under a capital-improvements program. He said that the contract had been let for construction of new hard surface basketball courts at the Auburndale Playground, a new surface for the Hamilton School tennis courts and the rebuilding of the hard surface basketball court at Burr park in Newton Corner.

The Little League diamond at the Pierce School, the home of the Newton Central Little League will be remodeled in the next few weeks. Earlier this year, a chain link fence was installed for the Little League diamond at the Richardson Playground in Waban. The Newton South Little League plays on that diamond.

Also undertaken was a drainage project for the baseball field at Newton South High School. This should solve the flooding problem which exists in this area each spring, Penney said.

Newton's Pop Warner teams will be able to practice after sundown due to the installation of lighting at Newton Centre, Oak Hill School playground, Burr Park in Newton Corner and Hawthorn in Nonantum. The work is either in process or scheduled to begin soon.

Many pieces of playground equipment has been installed at various playgrounds during the past few months. The playground included those at the William School River Street, Stearns School, Franklin School, Memorial School and Hyde School. A major playground apparatus area will be installed at Auburndale Playground next spring. An estimated 2,600 young people participate in the limited Halloween program sponsored jointly by the Recreation Department and the PTA's. A group of city officials including Mayor Theodore D. Mann, Recreation Commission Chairman Paul J. Burk, Police Chief William F. Quinn and Mrs. Robert Tober, general chairman, for the program, toured the school ending up at the Warren Junior High School.

Recreation Supervisor, Robert E. Doherty and William J. Barry report that the young people at the eight parties consumed 15,000 cookies and 3,000 cans of orange drink.

Recreation Supervisor, Fran Towle said that there are registrations still being accepted for the Recreation Department Swim Team. Those interested and who are between the ages of 8 and 18 should contact her at the Newton Recreation Department.

Camp Fire Girls Hold A Fly-Up Ceremony

The Camp Fire Girls held a Fly-Up Ceremony in the Meadowbrook Junior High School gymnasium recently in which 71 fourth grade Blue Birds were accepted as new members.

Acting as mistresses of ceremony were members of the Camp Fire Horizon Club, Heidi Blau and Linda Willis.

The traditional lighting of candles representing Work, Health and Love was performed by Suzanne Ferner, Cathy Seasholes and Rebecca Bullen. A fourth candle, for "Things to Come" was included in the Fly-Up Ceremony, and was lit by Julie Perkins.

The program included an explanation of the three Camp Fire ranks and a display of the Camp Fire service costume, ceremonial jacket and gown. A skit explaining to honor beads earned by all Camp Fire Girls was given by the Fifth Grade Camp Fire Girls from the Horace Mass School, led by Mrs. Henry Pambookian.

The highlight of the ceremony was the presentation, by her leader, of the Camp Fire tie, handbook and certificate, to each girl flying up. The flame colored tie was then put around the girl's neck and tied by an older Camp Fire girl; and the Camp Fire Law was sung.

The ceremonial candles were extinguished by Cathy Waud, Dawn Framson, Cynthia Bucks and Carolyn Butterworth. Taps was played by Janet Shiffman, trumpet, and wung by members of the Junior High Discovery Club girls.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Laura Seasholes, flute, and Mrs. Moselio Schaechter's sixth grade Camp Fire Girls from Mason Rice: Rachel Camber, Pam Ferris, Carolyn Hall, Jessica Kovar, Judy Schaechter and Patti Suyemoto. Banner Bearers were Jessica Kovar and Judy Schaechter.

The ceremony was under the direction of Mrs. Henry Hall, program chairman of the Newton Camp Fire Girls. She was assisted by Mrs. Robert Edwards, grand marshal, Mrs. Edward Murray and Mrs. Harlon Willis.

Blue Birds flying up and their leaders were:

Angier School: Mrs. Leslie Blicher, leader; Melissa Calder, Deborah Blicher, Katherine Conley, Suzanne Julian, Laura Miller, Ann Moncure, Marjorie Moy and Lisa Stults.

Bowen School: Mrs. Stephen Werbinski, leader; Rosella Carrelli, Rachel Feldman, Jamie Renick, Lisa Richmond, and Julia Werbinski.

Burr Williams, Auburndale: Mrs. Henry Norland, leader; Carolyn Butterworth, Janice Carten, Deborah Chaisson, Martha Malloy, Kathleen Norland and Susan Woodworth.

Clafin School: Mrs. Robert Greene, leader; Andrea Feingold, Tracy Greene, Beverly Hiltz, Susan Holtzman, Pamela Klinicki.

Countryside School: Mrs. James Hendrix, leader; Nancy Borelli, Jean Hendrix, Linda McMullen, Mary Nealon and Cheri-Ann Wong. Mrs. Melvin Clayton, leader; Karen Clayton, Daryl Conviser, Laurie Conviser, Wendy Hahn, Juliana Perkins, Ellen Yanofsky and Tonne Shore.

Horace Mann School: Mrs. Clifford Clason, leader; Cheryl Chiasson, Danielle Fraser, Deirdre Jordan, Debra Karel, Karen Lochiatto, Ellen Wilson, Diane Hamilton, Nancy MacNeil and Jennifer Rako.

Hyde School: Mrs. William McLaurin, leader; Janet Loewenstein, Kim McLaurin, Virginia Nickerson, Deborah Sachs, Carol Tennant, Carie Wallace and Clea Zolotow.

Activities Hit New Peak For All Newton Libraries

Activity hits a new high at the Newton Free Library and its branches this month with varied programs and exhibits aimed at the interests of library patrons and at enthusiasts.

At the Main Library, "En Garde," a fencing demonstration is the special family program scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 14, at 7:30 p.m. MIT fencing coach Eric Sollee will discuss fencing techniques and strategy.

A group of nature photographs by Cambridge artist and photographer Eliza McFadden is the current featured exhibit at the Main Library.

Case displays include an exhibit celebrating "Jewish Book Month," plus a collection of ancient as well as new, fencing weapons, photographs, and books relevant to the art of fencing. Free films are screened every Tuesday at noon, every Thursday at 7 p.m. and every Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the Main Library. Annotated film listings are now available.

Programs for Senior Citizens continue at Highlands branch, reports Joan Nolan, branch librarian. On Wednesday, Nov. 8, at 2:30 p.m., Mrs. E. Graham Bates presents a slide-talk-show "Country of Contrasts." Simple refreshments will be served.

"Have you Really Seen New England?", a coffee hour-slide-talk with Mrs. Laning Humphrey of Waban, is scheduled for Waban branch Thursday, November 16 at 10 a.m. Arlene Lynde, Waban branch librarian cordially invites interested patrons to attend.

Talented artists are exhibiting at several NFL branches during November. Barbara O'Neal, exhibits her paintings at Waban. Mrs. O'Neal, currently studies with artist George Dergalis. Previously, she studied for five years at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln. She works with oils and acrylics and uses a variety of techniques including double canvass, collage, and texturing with modeling paste and marble dust.

Mrs. Fran G. Dana of Newton Centre has a one-woman show of her paintings at West Newton.

"Textures formed by mixed media are my most exciting endeavor," Mrs. Dana explains. Varied moods and feelings are expressed in such paintings as "Work Corner," "Cloth Painting," "Moods," and "Distressed Clown." Mrs. Dana has been painting for more than 20 years. She has studied painting with Priscilla Ordway, Ely Kiss, and George Dergalis, and is a member of the Newton Art Association.

Paintings by Mrs. Nancy Campbell of Newton Lower Falls are on view at the Newton Lower Falls branch library. Mrs. Campbell studied with Xenia and Charles Lipson and at the Creative Arts Workshop. Her paintings have been on exhibit at the Copley Society, Boston University, the Creative Arts Workshop, and at the Jamaica Pamaica

Plain and Framingham Public Libraries.

Emilie C. Sheehan's paintings can be seen at Newton Highlands branch through November. Ms. Sheehan, of Newton Centre, studied with Davis Carroll and at the Charles River Art Center. The exhibit includes landscapes and flowers done in both watercolor and oil.

Other Newton Free Library activities include:

the celebration of National Book Week, Nov. 13-19, highlighted with a party hosted by Paula Carrier, Nonantum branch librarian. Walter Lorraine, designer, discusses graphics at a meeting of the New England Round Table of Children's Librarians, Tuesday, Nov. 21 at Nonantum.

Puppet Show At Church Of The Messiah Nov. 4

The Children's Cooperative Nursery School at the Church of the Messiah, Auburndale, is holding a puppet show this Saturday (Nov. 4) at 2 p.m. as part of a fund-raising project for the school's first year. Featured in the program is Puppeteer Susan Linn with her talkative companions, puppets Audrey, Cat-A-Lion, and Rabbitha, a new star.

Miss Linn has been a frequent guest on Mr. Roger's Neighborhood and has made several appearances on other local T.V. shows. Her performances reveal an understanding and sensitivity to young children, particularly from pre-school age through grade four.

The puppet show will be held in the Church Auditorium. Tickets will be $1 for adults and 75 cents for children. For further information call Janet Hillel at 332-7566.

Major Work Of Sculptor Grippe On Display At Simmons College

A major work by sculptor Peter Grippe of Brandeis University, is now on permanent display at Simmons College.

Entitled "Figure in Movement," the seven-foot-high laminated wood sculpture is being exhibited in the annu lobby of Simmons' new science facility. Grippe, a resident of Newton Upper Falls, was commissioned to execute the work for Simmons to honor a longtime, recently retired faculty member of that school and to celebrate the dedication of the science building.

"Figure in Movement" represents the realization of a technique long pursued by Grippe and never before used to this extent. It grew from a series of laminated cardboard constructions concerned with "space and movement" and begun 10 years ago. One of the earlier works in the series was shown at the Whitney Museum of Modern art in New York City.

While in Europe under a Guggenheim Fellowship for sculpture, Grippe collaborated with personnel of a foundry in Rome and successfully developed methods of casting his laminated cardboard constructions into bronze. A number of these pieces were later exhibited at the American Academy in Rome and also reproduced in "Art News" and the avant-garde art magazine, "It Is."

Grippe, the Lester and Joan Avnet Professor of Sculpture at Brandeis, has been associated with the Brandeis Fine Arts Department since 1953. At various times he has been a teacher in sculpture, painting, design, engraving or etching at the Art Institute of Buffalo, Black Mountain College, Pratt Institute and Smith college.

Prize of the Brooklyn Museum, a sculpture prize from the Whitney, and a Rhode Island Arts Festival sculpture award. His works are in the collection of the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney, the Metropolitan Museum and others. At Brandeis, he has executed several major works, including the design for the university's annual Creative Arts Awards medal, a portrait painting at the Slossberg Music Center and sculpture that stands at the entrance of the Shapiro Forum, in Olin-Sang American Civilization Center.

Peruvian Girl Is 'Adopted' By Newton Woman

Mrs. Paul E. Macusty of 23 Elliot st., Newton Highlands, has "adopted" Maria padilla, a seven-year-old Peruvian girl, through the Foster Parents plan, by contributing $16 a month for the child's care.

Maria was born in Chimbote, Peru, and lives with her mother, stepfather, and three half brothers. The combined total income of her parents is about $18.60 a month.

Mrs. Macusty's "adoption" of the girl provides maria with food, clothing and materials for her education. Under the Foster Parents Plan, Maria's whole family benefits from the sharing of her gifts.

Tattered McGovern Banner Flies High, Sen. Brooke Only Exception In Sweep

THE DECISION — Weather was no problem Tuesday and voters flocked to the polls — but in less than record numbers. The estimated voter turnout in excess of 90 per cent failed to materialize as about 10,000 registered voters did not appear at the polls. Nevertheless, precincts, as was true of this one in Nonantum, were crowded with people waiting to cast their ballots. (Tony Lupo Photo).

BY PHILIP M. KEOHANE

Newton voters gave a solid boost to the lonely McGovern-Shriver banner that made Massachusetts the only state in the Democratic win column in the national election Tuesday and then they turned around and voted heavily for the reelection of Senator Edward W. Brooke, a Republican, who polled the highest number of votes in the city.

Not a single precinct of the 33 in the city was carried by Nixon as the McGovern-Shriver ticket rolled up 27,470 votes as opposed to 18,133 for President Nixon.

As part of the winning reelection effort of Father Robert F. Drinan, Newton residents gave 23,752 hometown votes to the first Jesuit priest to sit in Congress. Drinan scored an impressive victory throughout the district with 11,686 to 9,230 for Brookline's Republican state representative Martin J. Linsky who received 92,310. Independent Conservative candidate John T. Collins, also from Newton, polled 11,135 district-wide.

Although the turnout of voters Tuesday was a record number for Newton—with 46,557 going to the polls—it was not the highest percentage of votes cast here.

The percentage Tuesday was 83 per cent. Back in 1944, about 94 per cent of the registered voters turned out but the total number of voters this time was a new high, about 1,700 votes higher than the previous total in the last presidential election.

State Senator Irving Fishman won reelection in the Eighth Senatorial District in his bid for a second term. The 51-year-old Democrat, who had also served in the house as a representative for eight years, received a total of 22,501 votes in Newton, nearly 4,500 more than the challenger, Michael Antonellis, a 44-year-old two term alderman, also of Newton.

Although Fishman outpolled Antonellis in Newton it was the other way around in Watertown with Antonellis receiving 7,612 votes to 6,703 for Fishman. In Watertown George A. Muldoon, an independent, received 2,149 in his hometown and only 937 votes in Newton.

In the two races for state representatives in Newton it was victory all the way for the Democrats.

In the contest for the Twelfth Middlesex seats in the house, Vice President of Newton's Board of Aldermen Peter F. Harrington scored a victory with 9,896 votes along with the successful reelection effort of Representative Paul H. Guzzi who piled up 12,171 votes.

Edit. Comment Appears On P. 4

The Democrats, Harrington and Guzzi, won out easily over Republicans Robert L. Tennant who received 6,261 and Barbara Schiller who polled 6,208 ballots.

In the Thirteenth Middlesex District the two Democrats also scored impressive victories. State Representative David J.

Mofenson received 14,703 while Alderman Lois G. Pines scored one of the most outstanding vote tallies of the day with 14,537 ballots in her column.

The Republican losers in the 13th District were Lawrence Applefield, who received 8,447 votes in his first try at public office and Vahe Sarafian, a history professor, who received 6,110 in his second bid for elective office.

Shortly before midnight, election night, Drinan said that his campaign workers predictions "were right on target" with early returns giving him Brookline, Newton and Waltham.

Linsky failed to carry his hometown of Brookline. The vote there was Drinan 14,173; Linsky 13,245 and 732 for Collins.

In a similar three-man race two years ago Drinan squeaked into Congress with 35.4 per cent of the vote. This time he won a majority and laid to rest notions that he was a "minority congressman." At 2:45 a.m. Wednesday, with about 75 per cent of the votes tabulated, Linsky phoned Drinan and officially conceded. In the Senate race Antonellis was reported badly beaten in Wards 7 and 8 but ahead on the north side of Newton.

In some communities voters paid little attention to the referendum on the ballot. But that was not the case in Newton where a heavy percentage of voters made their feelings known on the 10 questions.

Newton voters were against the graduated income tax by 25,000 to 16,500 and 28,000 favored retirement of judges at age 70 while 12,000 were against the mandatory retirement.

The abortion question found 16,000 in favor and nearly 7,000 against. And 12,000 voters favor reducing the size of the house of representatives while 3,000 voted against the cut.

The two persons favored in Newton for election as Middlesex County Commissioners were S. Lester Ralph with 21,582 votes and Paul E. Tsongas with 19,083. Ralph is from Somerville. ELECTION—(See Page 22)

Court Action Possible Over Public Works Appointments

BY CYNTHIA BLACK

Mayor Theodore D. Mann is considering taking court action to compel the Board of Aldermen to vote on his appointments to the Public Works Dept.

The board has had the matter pending since early October and voted Monday night to send it back to the Finance and Public Works committees. The city solicitor ruled Tuesday that the action was illegal, and said court action is being considered.

Mann has selected consultant Richard Dudman to succeed Willard S. Pratt as director of public works and named John Carroll of Dedham to the new post of assistant superintendent of Public Works. Pratt, in turn, would become water commissioner.

The Board of Aldermen is charged with the responsibility of funding the appointments.

The public works changes came up for debate at the board's Oct. 16 meeting and were ultimately delayed by a charter objection from Alderman Peter F. Harrington. The "charter objection" automatically cuts off debate and holds the matter over to the following meeting.

When it appeared Monday night that a move was on to delay action again, aldermen argued that because of the charter objection, a vote had to be taken at the meeting.

Board President Eliot K. Cohen ruled that a vote to send the matter back to committee was taking a vote on the matter and therefore within the specifications of the charter. No one challenged his ruling.

Cohen also cast the deciding vote in the matter, breaking an 11-11 tie at the end of the roll call in favor of recommitment.

City Solicitor Melvin J. Dangel said Tuesday that the board had "no legal right to recommit under our charter."

He cited section 2.9C of the City Charter which states: "On the first occasion that the question of adoption of a measure is put to the Board of Aldermen, if a single member objects to taking the vote, the vote shall be postponed until the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen whether regular or special."

Dangel said the city would consider seeking a writ of mandamus to require the board to take a vote.

He also explained that as stated in the charter, the "question of adoption of the measure" is what was held over by the charter objection to Monday's meeting.

The Board of Aldermen has 60 days in which to fund appointments made by the mayor. If they do not act within 60 days, the appointments automatically

Alderman Bullwinkle Leaves Mayor's Revaluation Panel

Alderman Richard J. Bullwinkle announced his resignation from the Mayor's Committee on Revaluation in a letter to Mayor Theodore D. Mann dated Nov. 2.

Mann organized the committee and asked Ald. Bullwinkle to serve last month after the Board of Aldermen voted to ask the mayor to submit three alternative plans for revaluation using city personnel, a private firm, and a combination of the two. He said they would act in an advisory capacity to him on the best ways to proceed within the law. Ald. Bullwinkle stated in the letter that he did not believe the committee "is representative of the Newton community at large."

"I happen to be the only member of this city-wide committee who lives north of Washington street," the alderman said.

"The senior citizen, the laboring man and those of very modest circumstances do not have specific representation on this committee to determine revaluation for all our citizens. "In addition, the Newton real estate people whose valued expertise in the field and particularly in our city are also noticeable by their absence."

The letter went on to say that it was not the intention to detract from the people serving but, rather called for a "wider circle of people to encompass this controversial subject."

"The Re-Evaluation Committee as a whole," Bullwinkle stated, "feels that closed sessions would be more appropriate and any press releases should emanate from the mayor's office."

"Closed sessions of any quasi-governmental agency should be open to public scrutiny. I am unalterably opposed to executive sessions whether it be the Board of Aldermen and its committees or this committee on revaluation."

"The people of Newton should be encouraged to participate and be made aware of any and all decisions that could affect their lifestyle."

Ald. Bullwinkle said he thought keeping the meetings open would be a strength and not a weakness.

Housing Authority Gives Offer For Land Parcels

A proposal has been sent to Newton Aldermen from the Newton Housing Authority indicating its bid on two parcels of land to be used for low income family housing.

Alderman David Jackson, chairman of the City Planning Committee, said Monday night the Authority offered to pay a price in the range of 25-57 cents per square foot for land on Curve and Crescent streets in Auburndale and for a portion of Victory Field in Nonantum.

Jackson indicated that the members of the Housing Authority would be invited to attend a City Planning meeting

Sunday Is "Leaf Day"

Newton will observe "Leaf Day" on Sunday (Nov. 12), marking the first season of operation for the city's leaf composting area.

In conjunction with the event, the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Ecological Affairs is sponsoring a leaf pick-up in certain neighborhoods of the city within the Pierce, Clafin, Williams, Oak Hill and Bowen school districts.

The Massachusetts National Guard's 164th Transportation Battalion is providing 20 trucks which will be manned by volunteers from the Boy Scouts, Jaycees, Boston College and the high schools to make the pick-ups.

The composting area is located in the Beaconswood Dump opposite Newton Cemetery on Beacon Street between Beethoven Avenue and Walnut Street. The compost area is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily and will remain open until Dec. 3.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann, announcing the event, said that discarded leaves have been "severely over-burdening Newton's incinerator at a time when an emphasis has been placed on reducing air pollution."

Putting The "S" Back Into The PTA

Newton High School parents have revived the "S" in the PTA and are now the Newton North High School Parent-Teacher-Student Association.

To break down the awesome bigness of the high school mini PTAs have been established in each of the six houses at Newton North, and the Murray Road annex. On Thursday, Nov. 6, the PTSA is again sponsoring a Back-to-School Open House at the North High School and all parents are invited to attend and meet the students and teachers and get a capsule look at a day in the life of a Newton North student. Teachers will also take this opportunity to describe the purposes and objectives of their courses, as well as reading assignments, booklist, special projects and grading practices. Parents are to report to their own child's home-room at 7:30 p.m. and teachers will provide a sample schedule for them to follow.

The 1972-73 presidents of the Board of Directors of NNHS PTSA are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Desouza of West Newton. The house chairmen serving as vice-presidents are Peter Scott of Newton Centre for Adam's House; Mrs. Leon Fentin of West Newton for Bacon House; Mrs. Tetsuo Takayanagi of Auburndale for Barry House; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewandowski of Nonantum for Palmer House; Mr. and Mrs. Champe Fisher of West Newton for Riley House and Mrs. James Botomley of Auburndale for Murray Road Annex. Along with the house masters and several teachers who serve as advisors are six students newly appointed to serve on the board.

Teacher vice-president is Richard Clark of Palmer House and administrative vice-president Richard Adams of Beals House.

Parents are generally better informed about their elementary and junior high school, no doubt due to the smaller community of parents and teachers involved. Hopefully the new mini PTSA's will produce a more active school-parent relationship at Newton North.

House masters and teachers have given enthusiastic support to the new structure and every Newton North High family is being encouraged to join the PTSA to help bring about the new goals. Special mailing sent this week will give each of them this opportunity to do so.

Parents and teachers have expressed strong opinions regarding current trends in education, both for and against. Discipline and behavior are also areas of discussion and great concern. Many parents would simply like to know more about the curriculum in the high school, other parents would like to have a better system of communication (teachers' too) to enable each of them to supplement what goes on in the home and the school to provide learning for the young adults at a critical period in their lives.

Social and educational needs many times are one and the same. Some members of the community feel their children are disadvantaged with respect to other Newton children.

The school has budgetary needs which cannot be met in the foreseeable future by an

Meeting Of Education And School Committees Nov. 16

There will be a combined meeting of the Board of Aldermen Education Committee and the Newton School Committee next Thursday night (Nov. 16) at 8 p.m. in the School Committee Room at Stearns School. All aldermen are welcome to attend.

The agenda will deal with current administrative problems common to the School Department and to general city government, as follows:

The new 1973-74 18-month budget, its impact and procedures.

—Equipment purchase, utilization, and retirement practices, including requisitioning and approval procedures.

League Meeting Mon., Nov. 13

The fall meeting of the Newton Circle of Florence Crittenton League will be held Monday, Nov. 13, at the home of Mrs. Charles J. MacDonald.

The luncheon chairmen are Mrs. Samuel L. Lowe Jr., and Mrs. William W. Paine II. The hostesses are Mrs. Alvin W. Dawson and Richard C. Schfield.

Following the business meeting conducted by the president, Mrs. Edwin Hawkrige, Mrs. Patricia Tucker, a member of the Wellesley Garden Study Group will talk on "The Fine Arts of Christmas Decorations."

Police Chief Bans Parking

Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department announced that all night parking is forbidden in all parts of Newton. He said, "We have had an all night parking ban for more than one hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. The purpose is to clear the streets of cars both for street cleaning and snow plowing. The ordinance actually is in effect year round, and does not create too much hardship, as most of our residents have driveways."

"At this time of year we must concentrate on enforcing this regulation, since the snow season will soon be upon us. We have tried to warn violators with courtesy tags. Of course, if we have a street that contains repeated violators or a citizen complaint, we tag and have been tagging," Quinn said.

"We would now appeal to all residents to keep their streets clear of all night parkers. Aside from legal penalties that the violator may pay, the entire street may be penalized if snow plows cannot get through. No one can drive until the streets are plowed, and plows may not get through if drivers do not cooperate and park off the streets. We are cooperating with the director of public works in this effort," Quinn concluded.

The Chief said, "It is amazing to me that we have citizens complaining about being tagged as we have been enforcing this ordinance for over thirty years."

Reporting in the American Journal of Nursing, official publication of the American Nurses' Association, Ms. O'Boyle said more and more persons are using hospital emergency services for primary health care.

Headstart Dinner Nov. 10

The Annual Headstart Thanksgiving Dinner will be held Friday, Nov. 10 at 11:45 p.m.

The event, which will be held in the multi-purpose large room of the Newton Community Centers, 429 Cherry St., West Newton, will bring together child, parent, staff and invited community persons who though their position and/or actions have shown an interest in the program.

Anthony J. Bibbo, executive director of the NCSC, Inc., the administering organization for the Newton program, said the meal is being planned and coordinated by Lola Merritt and reservations are being taken by Carol Robinson and Ginger Denham.

Newton's Headstart program is funded through the communities united which also includes: Waltham, Watertown, Brookline and Arlington. The communities united office is located at 74 Elderly St. on the second floor of the Rebecca Pomroy House, Newton. Its policy making body is comprised of parents of the Headstart children.

Elks Name Teens Of Month

Miss Marian C. Coletti and Thomas P. King have been named teen-agers of the month of Oct. by the Newton Elks Lodge, number 1327, B.P.D.E.

Miss Coletti, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Coletti, 46 Lenglen Rd., Newton. She is a senior at Our Lady's High School.

King, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. King, 19 Wildwood Ave., Newtonville. He also is a senior at Our Lady's High School.

The Teen-ager of the month program is sponsored by the Newton Elks Lodge in an effort to bring recognition to outstanding teens in the area and will focus in November on Newton High and in December on Newton South High.

Exalted Ruler Stephen O'Brien stated that Miss Coletti was honored because of diversified school activities and civic commitments and that King was also honored because of his school, Boy Scout and sports activities.

Resident Named To Star Club

Reuben Einis, 85 Withington Rd., Newtonville, has qualified as a member of the 1972 Star Club of New York Life Insurance Company.

Fink Calls For Public Help

By KENNETH MASSON

The School Department needs the public's help in order to do a better job, Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink said last week.

Fink, speaking before the Newton Council of PTA's at Newton South High School, said one of the department's mistakes is the failure to take the public into its confidence. He said, if it needs support, the public must have confidence in the department's integrity.

He said Newton needs a "Greater diversity of learning opportunities for our students." "The student should be able to relate what he is doing in the community back to the school and the city has not done that," he said.

Fink said another problem is that the schools are using "19th century tools." To change this, however, requires money and if we want to update, Newton must be prepared for the cost, he added.

The city's budget has risen sharply each year, and "most of the increase we have had no control over," Fink said. The School Department has still had less of an operating budget increase in the last nine years than the city has, he noted.

He said the operating budget for the department had an increase of 3.8 per cent over last year, which is less than that of the cost of living increase.

The problem is that the School Department is trying to keep the cost of the budget down while still having its need for equipment and school instruction supplies fulfilled, Fink said. "The school must maintain these basic needs."

He went on to say enrollment is declining in the Newton School system but the number of teachers cannot be reduced because the decline is spread throughout the system.

He said it is easier for a school department to increase their teaching staff, than it is to decrease it.

Another problem with the Newton schools is the condition of buildings, Fink said. Their needs were not taken care of years ago, he explained.

He said there are buildings that "haven't been touched in years" and his office is trying to conduct an investigation into nine of the city's schools.

Fink said Newton should adopt a school program that is "in style with learning."

"It is about time we wrote a time line in education," he said. "It is easy to point to apparent success and failures, but we also have to recognize that traditional practices are not always the right ones," he said.

The problem is, to "keep the pendulum of change from swinging back and forth from one brief period to another very brief period," Fink said.

He stated one problem area as being that of foreign languages. It spread out over too large an area, he said and it would be better to merge the students into a few months of intense language studies, he said. "It is a matter of intensity and exposure," he said.

He said that Newton has a very good interest in people, and Newton's schools are well-staffed with highly qualified teachers.

Norumbega Council Has New Chairman

Dr. Francis J. Kleeman of Newton has accepted the position of chairman of exploring for Norumbega Council Inc., Boy Scouts of America.

Exploring in Norumbega Council, which encompasses Newton, Wellesley and Weston, is a fast growing high school age program in the area. It is a coed, nonuniformed program for students ages 15-20 and focuses of special interest career exploration.

The program, which has grown from 67 Explorers in seven Posts in June, 1971, to 750 members in 37 posts currently, is projected to have well over 1,000 members in 40 posts by December, 1972.

Dr. Kleeman has the responsibility of providing leadership and direction to the Council Exploring Committee with subcommittees in finance, program, sales and service. Presently, Dr. Kleeman is coordinating over 250 adults now actively involved in the Council's Exploring Program.

Dr. Kleeman is a graduate of Yale College and Yale University School of Medicine in 1960. He completed his internship and residency in Surgery at New England Center Hospital. Dr. Kleeman then specialized in Urology and was a resident in Urology at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boston from 1963 to 1966. After serving as assistant chief of urology at the U.S. Naval Hospital in Oakland, Calif., he joined the staff at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Dr. Kleeman, his wife and son live in Chestnut Hill.

Homestead Board Hears Talk On "Early Newton"

The Board of Directors of the Friends of the Jackson Homestead, Newton's city-owned museum, will hear Mrs. Richard W. Husher of Waban on "Early Newton" following its meeting Monday night (Nov. 13).

Mrs. Husher, chairman of the museum's speaker bureau, is a member of the Committee on Older Newton. Houses and has assisted in the research of data for publication of the Homestead's brochures on Older Homes Built before 1855 in Waban, Auburndale, and Newton Upper Falls.

Reporting on other activities at the Jackson Homestead, Mrs.

William H. Cannard, its director-curator, indicated that classes of the Children's History Program were fully enrolled and now under way for children of the fourth and fifth grades in cooperation with the public and parochial schools of Newton.

Classes are held in various Colonial activities, including candle-dipping, butter churning, weaving, as well as in early community history.

Of special interest, Mrs. Cannard reported, was the instruction dealing with the itinerant peddlers, artisans, and artists of early New England. Taking part in this program and making history come alive for the children were Alex R. Miller, Eric Husher, and E. Graham Bates, who costumed as peddlers of the period, came to class with packets and wares.

Other sessions deal with Indian lore of the area, Civil War Days, Early American Cookery.

At the sixth and final session, to which teachers and parents are invited, diplomas are presented to the students who complete the series of courses. This is a gala event with cider and doughnuts.

In conducting the classes given over a six-week period, Mrs. Husher is assisted by Mrs. Ruth W. Bassett, secretary of the Jackson Homestead and Mrs. Jose R. Perez of Newton Upper Falls who gave special instruction on the Civil War Days.

The program is conducted by the Jackson Homestead as part of its cooperative educational activities. There is no charge for enrollment or instruction.

Mrs. Richard A. Winslow is president of the Friends of the Jackson Homestead.

No-Standee Rule Spawns Opposing Board Opinions

At a recent joint meeting of the Board of Aldermen's Education Committee and the Newton School Committee, opposing views on the controversial "No-Standee" ruling on the city's school buses were heard.

The meeting came three days following the School Board's passage of a motion which essentially raised the number of trips by school buses to 62, a change effected by changing the opening hours of Meadowbrook and Weeks Junior High Schools.

John E. Guilleland, Assistant Superintendent of Schools for Business Services, noted that the number of school bus passengers was increasing. During bad weather, experience has demonstrated that the pupil passenger total may swell greatly, he said.

To handle this problem the School Committee recommended at the meeting that the Mass. General Court be petitioned for permission for Newton to annul its acceptance of Section 7L, Chapter 90, which was approved last December. This permission would allow student standees in the school buses, but would not require standing except during bad weather conditions.

The School Board urged adoption of this proposal. The six members present said that it was almost impossible and certainly very costly to provide a seat for all potential riders under "worst case conditions of demand." They also noted that Section 7L is much more appropriate for rural areas of the state, that there have been no recorded injuries in Newton standing students.

A contrasting viewpoint was offered by Alderman Lois Pines, who emphasized that the "no-standee" rule should be strictly enforced. A new Federal law, she pointed out, penalizes states who don't adopt ordinances barring standees by limiting government grants for highway construction.

Mrs. Pines stated that the City should not wait for an accident to happen; she stressed that Newton should be concerned with safety right now.

Anything Goes Opening Night

Its opening night Friday at the Pomroy Playhouse in Newton Corner for performances of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes."

Curtain is at 8:15 p.m. for all four performances on Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18. The show is being staged "cabaret style" by the Newton Country Players. Ticket reservations can be made by calling Shirley Vitello at 332-7886.

Featured in the cast i Rolly WESTER AS Sir Evelyn. Wester last appeared with the players as Captain Boomerfield in "Sam Stiller, Private Eye." His other stage appearances include Bud Frump in "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," for the Sea Cliff Players in New York; and Giles Ralston in "The Mousetrap," for the Chattanooga Little Theater. He also was stage manager for "Night Must Fall" and "The Crucible."

A seasoned performer, Dona Thorman, is familiar to Newton audiences for her roles as Hedy in "How to Succeed in Business," the J.Melly Bean Kid in "The Dastard," and the society matron in Gold in the Hills." She directed "Little aryl Sunshine" for the players and has appeared in major motion pictures shot in Boston including "The Thomas Crown Affair" and "Charlie."

She will appear as Chastity in "Anything Goes;" and carrying on the players tradition of making theater a "family affair," her daughter, Lisa, will appear in a minor role as the second Chinese gentleman.

Making her third appearance under the Players banner, Soni Tick will portray Virtue in the current production. She played Beryl in "Everything in the Garden," and had a small part in "Gold in the Hills." A new resident of Chestnut Hill, Mrs. Tick has a varied background in song and dance, stemming from little theatre groups in New York and New Jersey. She and her husband Gene also appear as a folk singing duo.

Perennial favorite Mort Nesson will appear as the first Chinese gentleman. Nesson has performed in "Damn Yankees," "How To Succeed," "Bells Are Ringing," and more recently, "Catch Me If You Can," "Two Little Indians," "Everything in the Garden," and "Gold in the Hills."

Joe Colella, playing a dual role as purser and reporter, came to the players after a successful performance in "We Bombed in New Haven" for Newton Junior College. He was an entertainer in "Gold in the Hills," and has contributed much time and energy to constructing sets over the past two years.

Also appearing in the cast are newcomers Lillian Breen, Linda Lourie, Marcia Massimo, Barbara Role, Susan Sandberg, Barbara Siegal, Sandi Sklar and Marilyn Solomon.

Dick Blouin, Jack Glennon, Jim Kelly, Bill Martin, Edwin Riopel and Bill Ruggiere will also appear.

Arrest Five After Fight On Sidewalk

Five youths, three juveniles and two young men, were arrested by Newton Police yesterday on assault and battery charges stemming from an incident witnessed by officers late Tuesday morning.

City Detective William Fitzsimmons and officer Dennis Farrell observed a fight in progress at 11:35 a.m. Tuesday on the sidewalk at 1150 Beacon St., and arrested four youngsters after breaking up the melee. Turned over to their parents, but later charged with assault and battery, were three juveniles.

Charged with assault and battery after the fight was Mark A. Herlehey, 17, of 1169 Commonwealth Ave., West Newton. Also picked up on a warrant by Newton Police as a result of further investigation was Robert Bacon, also 17, of 24 Derby St., West Newton.

Both youths were arraigned in court yesterday morning: Herlehey on assault and battery charges only, Bacon on charges of assault with intent to rob.

The three juveniles were released in the custody of their parents. The cases of the two young men was continued for two weeks.

the hospital will bill the patient.

"As another example, a Blue Cross patient will receive a bill from the hospital if he has stayed in a private room. The bill covers the difference between the charge for a private room and the hospital's average semi-private room rate for which Blue Cross pays."

"The problem remains for the hospitals to obtain payment from Blue Cross. To date, there has been no reimbursement to the hospitals for services rendered to Blue Cross subscribers since October 1. The hardship which results cannot be underestimated. However, our hospitals belong to our communities and every effort is being made on their behalf to prevent hardship to those patients covered by Blue Cross."

Favor MDC Purchase Of Land On River In Newton Lower Falls

By HELEN HEYN

Representatives David J. UL F. Malloy of Newton and Representative Edward M. Dickson of Weston went on record recently in favor of purchase by the Metropolitan District Commission of all seven acres of the narrow strip of Charles River frontage owned by Thomas W. Gilligan at Newton Lower Falls.

The occasion was the public hearing which the MDC Park and Recreation Division holds annually as required by statute. Mofenson attended the hearing and indicated his continued interest in public ownership of this land and water to MDC Commissioner John W. Sears.

The Newton and Weston representatives are aware that the MDC is about to buy approximately four of Gilligan's seven acres. The four acres include two and one-third acres of flowed bed of the Charles River. The remainder of the four acres is a peninsula which extends northeasterly from Recreation Road bridge off Route 128 plus a 30-foot setback from the River along the Gilligan frontage.

The legislators consider this purchase by the MDC to be only a good beginning toward protection of this segment of riverbank which screens the Riverside MBTA terminal and the Jordan Marsh Warehouse from the MDC Riverside Recreation area on the Weston side of the River.

They point out that this expenditure of $55,000 of taxpayers' money will not give permanent protection to the trees up to the top of the riverbank slope nor to the pathway which runs from Recreation Road to the Penn Central Railroad bridge.

The MDC purchase would not prevent the Newton Board of Aldermen from permitting Gilligan to build in the future on his remaining acreage which has vehicular access only to the Recreation Road section of Route 128 which presently serves as access to the Massachusetts Turnpike, to Route 30, to the Department of Public Works District No. 4 maintenance depot, and to the Riverside Recreation area.

Gilligan was granted direct access to Route 128 on September 24, 1969 by DPW Commissioners Charles A. Bisbee, Jr., Peter E. Donadio, and Robert S. Foster.

When Gilligan attempted in 1964 and 1965 to have this access authorized and directed by the Massachusetts legislature, his bills, filed by former Representative Joseph G. Bradley, were rejected. The bills were actively opposed by former Newton Mayor Donald L. Gibbs.

Gibbs and the Newton Board of Park Commissioners also opposed the 1963 exchange of land and water between Gilligan and the MDC during Commissioner Robert F. Murphy's administration. Due to the opposition of the local Park Board, the exchange was appealed by the MDC to the Governor's Council which approved it in November 1963.

The exchange resulted in MDC loss of much of the scenic upland which the present Newton and Weston legislators want the MDC to restore to the public domain.

A Donation Easy To Locate

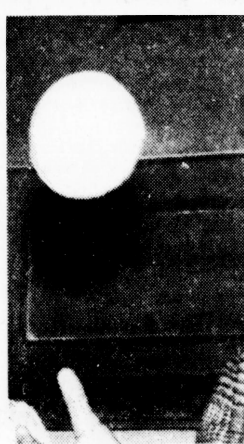

The local chapter of Telephone Pioneers of America recently donated a "beeping ball" to the Carroll Rehabilitation Center for Impaired Vision in Newton to be used as a training aid.

The pioneers is an organization for employees with 21 or more years of service.

To date, they have donated beeping balls to 46 institutions and individuals throughout New England.

Audio balls give off a high-pitched pulse, enabling the blind person to locate the ball. Retired telephone employees assemble the balls at Western Electric Merrimack Valley Works, North Andover.

More than 700 beeping balls have been made since June, 1971, when the Pioneers undertook the project. Less than 100 balls were produced in the seven years prior to pioneer participation.

BEEPING BALL

Each ball originally required 30 hours of production. Now a ball can be made in two hours and at half the cost. The balls are used throughout the United States and at schools in Beirut, Lebanon; and Dublin, Ireland.

The pioneers also donated a braillewriter to the Carroll Center. This machine, which resembles a typewriter in size, will be used in braille classes at the center.

The presentation of the ball and braillewriter was made by Dorothy Sullivan, president of the west council of the local Thomas Sherwin Chapter. Receiving for the Carroll Center was Executive Director Frederick Picard III.

Longevity Plus

One doesn't have to do much talking to rally a strong-voiced legion favoring the abolition of county government in Massachusetts. "So, who needs it?", many will pointedly ask. There's always those who are quick to observe — "Look at all the money we'll save."

On the other hand, most folks today don't realize that county government is still a heavily-budgeted, foing-concern until an election rolls around and names for county offices appear on the ballot.

Every now and then squalls and even storms blow up threateningly but the threats die down and the immediate cause of the disturbance is soon forgotten. Counties are the principal geographic and political subdivisions of the U.S. in most of our states, even though Rhode Island and Connecticut got rid of them and others have reduced them to minor governmental factors.

Counties go back to early England and they have the blessings that go with the years as far as survival is concerned.

At Boston College recently Chairman John W. Sears of the Metropolitan District Commission envisioned before a seminar six or seven prototypes of the MDC spread across the state.

Purpose of the proliferation would be to tackle some of the tough problems the state can't possibly reach, according to Mr. Sears. He lists problems like air pollution, commuter traffic, public transit, housing, solid waste, parkways, sewer and water supply. These are tough problems. For most of them solutions look far in the future.

Yet, an MDC-like agency up the Berkshires or on Cape Cod would be a long time in establishing itself and also a long time in coming up with any better answers than the state — or come to think of it — the counties.

Mr. Sears in his talk at B.C. took a look at MDC plans tentatively reaching to the year 2050. We don't know whether the state will be divided into six or seven MDC prototypes by that time. We would be willing to accept however, a forecast that out 14 present counties will still be in business.

Monuments to Waste

Nowhere in Greater Boston or in the entire eastern Massachusetts area will you find a more substantial man-built structure than the three miles of overhead steel bridging only recently completed outside North Station.

Originally, it has been hailed as wonderful link between Middlesex County cities and towns and the South Shore and Cape Cod.

Rising gracefully at regular intervals on this fine steel and concrete highway are aluminum light poles. From below commuters on the B. and M. can't tell whether workmen ever got as far as putting bulbs in the light fixtures. They are not needed now. No traffic runs over the structure. There's a serious question of whether it will ever be used for that purpose.

The new-born structure probably welcomes the black of night to brood in its shame.

State authorities don't know just what can be done with the sparkling new structure. It's part of a $100 million highway or was until it was discovered its actual commissioning would strangle all or most of Boston's traffic from the north.

Now, taxpayers will be called on to pay another $95,000 to determine what use, IF ANY, can be found for it.

From the new highway link one doesn't need binoculars to spot another disturbing temple to poor-planning, extravagant-spending and waste. It's the courthouse that was to give Middlesex County one of the finest facilities of its kind anywhere. During the present generation at least, that structure will be remembered not too happily with the cost and scandal associated with its erection.

Not too many years back when the nation went on a highway building spree a hard-boiled, old road builder complained — "They are obsolete before the ribbon is cut." That stretch on the edge of the Boston & Maine yards may well be denied the passing glory of even a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Woman Chosen For Board

Sally Naylor Swensrud, Newton, has been chosen to serve on the Common Cause advisory board, Boston.

She was one of eight active members of this citizen's lobby to be elected by its 12,000 members to serve on the Massachusetts Board. During her three year term, she will help guide the organization in its campaign for more responsive government in the state.

MRS. Swensrud has been active in many areas of the organization since it opened its Boston office in 1971. She set up the speakers bureau through which information about Common Cause is related to other organizations and interested citizens. She produced a 24-minute documentary film, which is in use throughout the country. She is active in educational innovation, network and public television, film production and day-care centers.

Gov. Sargent Seeks Job as Secretary of the Interior

Governor Francis W. Sargent is seeking the position of Secretary of the Interior in President Nixon's Cabinet.

If he gets the Presidential nod for that post, he will resign as Governor and turn the reins of the State government over to Lieutenant Governor Donald Dwight.

But while Mr. Sargent is striving to get into the Nixon Cabinet, Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe is using his influence in an effort to keep him out.

Relations between Sargent and Volpe long ago were strained beyond the breaking point.

Volpe exploded in an outburst against Sargent at the close of the Republican National Convention at Miami Beach in August, making crystal clear the low esteem in which he held the Governor.

Ironically, it was Volpe who lined up the votes which gave Mr. Sargent the endorsement for Lieutenant Governor of the 1966 Republican State Convention.

Without the help of Volpe and the effective work of Volpe's top aide, Anthony DeFalco of Needham, Sargent would have been defeated by Representative Francis W. Hatch, Jr., of Beverly at the '66 GOP State conclave for the No. 2 spot on the Republican State ticket.

After Volpe went to Washington and turned the Governorship over to Mr. Sargent, Sarge in his own inimitable fashion fired DeFalco who had saved him from defeat at the hands of Hatch and subsequently made Hatch Republican leader in the House, ousting Representative Sidney Q. Curtiss, who had backed him against Hatch, from that position.

Now Volpe, who really made Mr. Sargent Governor, is seeking to even scores with him by trying to blackball him for the job of Secretary of the Interior.

One of the complaints made against Governor Sargent by a number of prominent GOP figures is that he has ruined the Republican party in Massachusetts.

That really is not an accurate or fair allegation. The Bay State GOP was in a shambles before Francis Sargent became Governor. But he certainly has not built the Republican party into any political powerhouse.

The guessing in political circles is that Volpe will prevail in his power struggle with Sargent and that the latter will not get the job of Secretary of the Interior or any other post in the Nixon Cabinet.

Volpe's attempt to block Sargent from the Cabinet should not be a difficult undertaking since Governor Sargent never has really extended himself in trying to help President Nixon, and Nixon actually owes him nothing.

It is significant that Lieutenant Governor Dwight, not Governor Sargent, headed up the Nixon campaign in Massachusetts.

Dwight probably could have a high post in the Nixon administration if he wants one. But the likelihood is that he will prefer to remain as Lieutenant Governor and run for Governor in 1974.

There is almost a unanimity of political opinion that Francis Sargent, as matters presently shape up, could not be reelected two years from now.

Former Governor Volpe, according to well informed Washington sources, will resign from his post as Secretary of Transportation in the near future and will be named Ambassador to Italy by President Nixon.

That would leave only one Bay Stater, Elliot L. Richardson, in the Nixon Cabinet.

The political wheels are spinning in interesting fashion.

Maneuvering to Start Soon For 1975 Governor Contest

With the results of the 1972 Presidential election now recorded in the history books for future students to ponder, the maneuvering for the Democratic nomination for Governor will soon begin.

The potential contenders are Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, Attorney General Robert Quinn and House Speaker David M. Bartley.

Persons close to Mayor White differ in their opinions as to whether he will make another bid for the Governorship in 1974. Some of them are convinced he will. Others believe he will wait until 1975 and seek reelection to a third term as Mayor of Boston.

If White has made his own decision as to what he will do, he has not disclosed it.

He was the Democratic nominee for Governor in 1970 but was defeated by Governor Sargent when the latter was much more popular than he is today.

Friends of Attorney General Quinn and Speaker Bartley insist that both men have their eyes set on the Governorship.

However, it does not seem likely that they will become adversaries in a battle for their party's gubernatorial nomination.

Bartley was Democratic leader of the House and Quinn's top lieutenant when Quinn was Speaker. He succeeded Quinn as Speaker when the latter became Attorney General.

Quinn and Bartley might wind up running as a tandem, with Quinn seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor and Bartley the nomination for Lieutenant Governor and second place on the Democratic State Ticket.

White, Quinn and Bartley all have political muscle, and any one of the three could make a strong bid for the gubernatorial nomination.

There will be no comparable activity on the Republican side of the political fence.

Lieutenant Governor Dwight, who has been completely loyal to Governor Sargent, will be obliged to wait to learn whether Mr. Sargent will take a post in Washington or serve out his term and if he will retire from public life at the end of his term if he does remain on Beacon Hill or insist on standing for reelection.

Governor Sargent undoubtedly can have renomination for the asking if he wants it even though many Republicans are unenthusiastic about his administration to date.

Democratic leaders are hoping Mr. Sargent does seek another term. They are convinced that either White, Quinn or Bartley could defeat him if an election were held today.

One question, the answer to which will affect the fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is whether the law providing that a State Convention be held to endorse candidates for state-wide offices will be repealed.

The convention system of endorsing candidates has hurt the Democratic cause during the past 18 years and has helped the Republicans. The GOP has been able to invoke party discipline to make the convention endorsements stand up. The Democrats have been unable to do so. They have wasted time, money and energy on conventions.

A bill to repeal the pre-primary convention law was adopted near the close of this year's legislative session but was vetoed by Governor Sargent when it reached his desk. Had it been enacted earlier in the year, the measure might have been passed over his veto.

Another drive to remove the convention law from the books undoubtedly will be made next year. Whether it will succeed this time depends on how the top Democratic figures believe it will affect their interests.

Battle Looms in Congress To Oust Albert As Speaker

When the 93rd Congress convenes in January, fights probably will develop to revise the seniority system and to oust Carl Albert from the Speakership, according to some Massachusetts Congressmen.

Congressman Wilbur D. Mills, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee and popular with many of his Democratic colleagues on Capitol Hill, may be installed as the new Speaker.

If that happens, it would move Congressman James A. Burke of Milton a step nearer to the House Ways and Means Committee chairmanship — if the seniority system is preserved.

Considerable dissatisfaction apparently exists with the caliber of leadership provided by Albert during his two years as Speaker. Whether it will be great enough to result in his ouster as Speaker remains to be seen.

Congress, of course, traditionally resists change. Many members will be reluctant to remove Albert from the Speakership. The older and more powerful members will be opposed to any change in the seniority system.

The Massachusetts members are hoping Congressman Thomas P. O'Neill will retain the post he held temporarily in the closing stages of Congress as Democratic leader in the National House. But they say a Southern Congressman will make a hard fight against him.

Book Says JFK Named Lodge To Involve Him in "Mess"

The late President John F. Kennedy, who had a distinct distaste for Henry Cabot Lodge whom he defeated for the U. S. Senate in 1962, named Lodge as Ambassador to Saigon because he couldn't resist the idea of getting Lodge mixed up "in such a hopeless mess."

So declare Kenneth P. O'Donnell and David F. Powers in their new book, "Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye," which presents in interesting fashion their memories of John F. Kennedy.

O'Donnell and Powers were probably the two aides closest to JFK when he was President. They were in a position to know John Kennedy's thinking and why he did some of the things he did. This is what they report on the appointment of Lodge as Ambassador to Saigon.

"When Secretary Dean Rusk recommended sending Henry Cabot Lodge to Saigon as our ambassador, President Kennedy was astonished along with all of the Boston Irishmen of the White House staff.

"The President had an Irish distaste for the aloof North Shore Yankee Republican, whom he had beaten in the 1952 Senatorial race in Massachusetts and again in 1960, when Lodge was Nixon's running mate.

"When we were watching Lodge on television at the Republican convention the night he accepted the Vice-Presidential nomination, Kennedy said to us: 'That's the last Nixon will see of Lodge. If Nixon ever tries to visit the Lodges at Beverly, they won't let him in the door.'

The President told us that when Rusk suggested sending Lodge to Saigon, he decided to approve the appointment because the idea of getting Lodge mixed up in such a hopeless mess as the one in Vietnam was irresistible."

This explanation of why he was appointed Ambassador to Saigon may come as a bit of a shock to Henry Cabot Lodge.

JFK Would Have Withdrawn From Vietnam Had He Lived

O'Donnell discloses that President Kennedy had doubts about the war in Vietnam during his first year in the White House and planned to withdraw all U.S. military forces after he was reelected in 1964. Tragically, of course, he did not live to reach the '64 election.

Here is what the book says on that point:

"The President was anxious to be reelected by the biggest possible landslide vote and to start his second term with a strong mandate from the people because, as he told me privately before we went to Texas, he had made up his mind that after his reelection he would take the risk of unpopularity and make a complete withdrawal of American military forces from Vietnam.

"He had decided that our military involvement in Vietnam's civil war would only grow steadily bigger and more costly without making a dent in the larger political problem of Communist expansion in Southeast Asia.

"President Kennedy first began to have doubts about our military effort in Vietnam in 1961 when both General Douglas MacArthur and General Charles de Gaulle warned him that the Asian mainland was no place to be fighting a non-nuclear land war.

"There was no end to Asian manpower, MacArthur told the President, and even if we poured a million American infantry soldiers into that continent, we would still find ourselves outnumbered on every side. DeGaulle said the same thing in Paris that spring, pointing out that the French had shown us the hopelessness of trying to fight in that country."

Speculation on 1976 Fight For GOP Presidential Nod

As the 1972 Presidential campaign came to a close, talk already had started about the battle which will be waged in 1976 for the Republican Presidential nomination.

The guessing now is that the principal adversaries for the right to carry the GOP banner in the Presidential campaign four years from now will be Vice President Spiro Agnew of Maryland and Senator Charles H. Percy of Illinois.

Agnew would have the support of the conservatives and moderates of the Republican party. Percy the backing of the liberals. There do not appear to be any other major GOP Presidential possibilities at this time.

Age probably will eliminate New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller by 1976. California's Governor Ronald Reagan could not take the conservative vote away from Agnew.

Bitter, disillusioned George Romney, who will soon bow out of the Nixon Cabinet, has eliminated himself as a Presidential prospect. Speculation is rife, incidentally, as to whether former Boston Mayor John F. Collins will succeed Romney as Secretary of HUD.

Riot Outside GOP Dinner Cost Sen. McGovern Votes

The complaints by spokesmen for the hoodlums who demonstrated outside the Commonwealth Armory, while a Republican dinner was being held last week, that their civil rights were being violated, are intriguing, indeed.

The basis of the protest seems to be that the police did not warn them through bullhorns before forcing them to disperse.

These were demonstrators who hurled bricks, attempted to storm into Commonwealth Armory, burned an automobile, caused that section of Commonwealth Avenue to be closed to traffic and generally trespassed on the right of everyone else in the area.

And they have the gall to complain about their civil rights being violated. It would seem that the only civil rights which concern them are their own.

The riot outside the armory evidently hurt the cause of Senator McGovern and made votes for President Nixon, whose wife the demonstrators were seeking to embarrass.

Many fair-minded people felt that Mrs. Nixon should have been shown the same courtesy that was extended to Senator McGovern when he came to Boston to speak and to attend a Democratic fund-raising dinner.

Petitioning Mayor To Curtail Expenditures,

Editor, Newton Graphic:
In the Nov. 2 issue of the Newton Graphic, Mr. and Mrs. Stephan Ross of Newton Centre capitalized and presented the feelings of the Newton Citizens for Action on Taxes.

Our primary purpose in the past has been to obtain signatures on our petition for eventual presentation to Mayor Mann, the aldermen and Newton department heads. The petition basically says that we should hold spending by the City of Newton at the September 1972 level; no new expenditures, no more unnecessary or unwarranted expenditures. In other words, hold the line!

There is no reason why we cannot seize new spending. Any public official who cannot assert this opinion should be removed from office. Our committee is convinced that the only way to solve the rampant tax increases is not to spend. The services in the City of Newton leave MUCH to be desired. This is not due to lack of workers or unwillingness to work and do a good job but is simply due to poor - very poor - administration at our city hall.

I mention earlier that the primary purpose of the committee was to obtain signatures for our petition to hold the line on new expenditures. It seems now that aside from signature gathering, we must band citizens together for a direct confrontation with city hall. Aldermen have voted themselves pay and proposed supplementary budgets with revaluation spending. They also have a taxpayers' suit pending against them. We call it poor planning when the Aldermen are forced to revalue the city under threat of legal action.

Did you know that the Newton tax rate already has at least a $10 increase earmarked for next year? We haven't even paid the 1972 bill!

As the Ross' article says, "We trust that this letter will give you some indication of the extreme distrust and dissatisfaction with which we view our elected officials." I could not have said it more accurately.

In summary, if the Ross' article, or this position by the Newton Citizens For Action On Taxes seems reasonable to you, call your alderman and point out to him (or her) exactly how you feel. We intend to evidence our feelings in writing in the form of a petition so there is no question as to who agrees or disagrees with increased and uncontrolled taxation. It is a very sad time in Newton's history when it is too expensive for the young to move in and when the elderly are forced to move out.

Transportation Problems

Editor, Newton Graphic:
Recently the MBTA published a schedule of bus service for the area formerly serviced by the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company. Since the MBTA took over responsibility for this line, there has been no late evening service provided on the route along Routes 135 and 16, connecting Framingham, Natick, Wellesley and Newton Corner with the Riverside MBTA trolley line at Woodland Station. As the schedule now stands there is service only between 6:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. The fact that there is no service beyond 6:30 p.m. from the Riverside line to the surrounding towns creates great problems for commuters using this bus and trolley to go in and out of Boston every day. Many passengers on this line need to remain in Boston for shopping or other personal reasons during the evening. If one is delayed at work or school, or wishes to remain in Boston beyond 5:45 p.m., getting home is a real problem. There are many students using this bus line who need to remain at school or jobs during the evening. Some people have no one available whom they can call for a ride from the Riverside stations. The alternatives are a taxi, which costs, for example, $3.50 from Riverside station to Newton Corner or hitchhiking, which is only for the desperate. It seems to me that the MBTA is showing little regard for the needs and safety of people in this area by neglecting to provide late evening service.

The rationale for cutting back service is normally low patronage and high costs for the MBTA. However, public facilities have an obligation to provide the services necessary and subsidies for this are accepted practice. Public transportation which pays for itself is practically unknown. I do not feel that the excuse of poor patronage is adequate. Public service must come first. The people of our area should be provided with service equivalent to that provided other suburban areas in the MBTA district.

Most commuters in the Newton area do rely on their cars and for good reason. But, car owners must be concerned with public transit. The day inevitably comes when the car is not available and they see how it is for the less fortunate who do not have the means of owning a car. There are many such hard-working, not-affluent, people in our area. Routes 135 and 16 are already jammed with traffic and motorists must consider the future which will require better public transit. There is talk of extending the Riverside line on the old railroad beds but that day is in the future and commuters need better service today.

The MBTA is still making plans for our area. We must get together and demand better service. The least the MBTA should do is provide service duplicating that provided by the old M&B, i.e. buses from Riverside station hourly after 7:30 p.m. and service on Sundays. Please get involved. Now is the time to contact the MBTA, your town officials, the governor.

Don't Override Veto

Editor's Note: This letter was sent to the Board of Aldermen with a copy to the Newton Graphic.

Dear Mr. English:
This letter is written to the Board of Aldermen in the wake of Mayor Mann's veto of the aldermanic salary. We applaud those Aldermen who saw fit to vote against salaries, and we appeal to them to maintain their position in the face of efforts being made to override the mayor's veto.

We appeal to those aldermen who are giving their support to a veto override in the name of the taxpayers of Newton. We ask you all to consider the welfare of the people you represent, who must not be forced to pay the cost of salaries plus pensions and additional benefits, because we honestly can no longer continue to carry the burden of Newton's skyrocketing tax rate.

We want to make it clear that we are not against the aldermen receiving a salary for the work that they do. Our opposition lies with their additionally receiving pensions and benefits at the expense of the taxpayer. And, if the citizens must pay the bill for this ordinance, should not they be given the opportunity to decide the issue for themselves?

Perhaps an alternative at a future time might be to consider paying the Aldermen on an expense account basis. We should also give some thought, as many have suggested, to changing the size of the Board if a salary is to be instituted.

A time when the Newton Tax Rate has risen 83 percent in five years is no time for our elected officials to vote themselves a salary. We urge you to reconsider the Newton taxpayer by reconsidering your decision.

Beethoven School To Hold Annual Book Fair

The Beethoven School will hold its annual Book Fair in conjunction with grade level meetings, Nov. 20 and 21.

The Book Fair will have for sale an extensive selection of paperback books covering all subjects from chess to Charlie Brown. The latest fiction and non-fiction books for kindergarten through sixth grade will be on display plus posters, records, calendars, items direct from the Boston Bruins, science projects, activity books and crossword puzzles.

There will also be a table of current and popular paperback books for adults. A bake sale will be held at the same time as the book sale.

Mrs. Rima Burroughs and Mrs. Marilyn Finger are co-chairmen of the bake sale and Mrs. Shanie Rabinovitz and Mrs. Donella Lewis are book fair co-chairmen.

The hours of the Book Fair will be 12:30 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. The grade level meetings which will be held the same evening as the Book Fair, will be from 8 to 9 p.m. These meetings give parents the opportunity to visit their children's classroom and to meet with the teachers. On Monday night, parents with children from kindergarten through third grade will meet and Tuesday evening parents with children from grades four through six are invited to attend. In charge of the grade level meetings is vroom chairman Mrs. Carol Mayer. Refreshments will be served on both evenings.

Shea Party At Ward School

A party for Mrs. Kathryn Shea, secretary of the John Ward School from 1951 to 1972, for her 21 years of service to the school and the community, will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 15. The party will be held at the Ward School, 10 Dolphin Rd. at 8 p.m. Anyone who did not receive an invitation and wishes to attend is welcome. For further information, call Edna Krims, 332-5676.

B'nai B'rith Tea Wed., Nov. 15

A Membership Tea for new and prospective members plus sponsors of Mememayflower Chapter B'nai B'rith, will be held at the Youth Room of Congregation Beth El E. Atereth Israel, 561 Ward Ward St., Newton Centre, on Wednesday, Nov. 15 at 8 p.m.

Helen Eagerman is membership chairman and Evelyn Leventhal is membership co-chairman. Charlotte Rivetz is vice president in charge of membership.

President Annette Ross announces the following committee for the tea: vice president Mildred Silver, vice president Shirley Horblitt, Phyllis Briskin, Charlotte Swartz, Rachel Popkin, Pearl Levine, Evelyn Kagno, Phyllis Finkelstein and Gloria Michelson.

Medicine. Mrs. Robert Fulton of Wellesley and Mrs. C. Daniel Gallegan of Newton, membership chairmen, will receive inquiries from those interested in serving their community hospital. At the next meeting the group plans to announce a date for a gala fund raising.

Hospital Jr. Aid Association Meets

The home of Mrs. Carl L. Recco, 25 Cliff Road, Weston was the location of the first fall meeting of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital Junior Aid Association. A tea was given for current and prospective members.

President, Mrs. Leonard H. Chatel of Wellesley explained the purpose of the organization which is to supplement the needs of the Hospital and to engender interest in the projects sponsored by the Association. Currently this group manages the book cart service and newspaper delivery, and conducts hospital tours. Newton-Wellesley hospital is a teaching affiliate of Tufts University School of

600 Attend Halloween Dance

Approximately 600 Newton teenagers attended the Newton Youth Center Benefit Dance at the Warren Junior High School, on Halloween evening.

The affair was made possible through basic funding from the Newton Recreation Commission. Music was provided by "Daddy Warbux" through Music Productions Incorporated.

Youth Coordinator, Karen Wright pointed out that this was the largest attendance at a Youth Center Dance in over five years.

This dance was planned as a benefit for the Newton Youth Center in an effort to raise funds to help in continuing the program until the neighborhood centers begin late this year. Thanks to Newton's Recreation Department, the Youth Center was able to achieve its goal. Those youth interested in attending future events should contact Richard Stomberg, student chairman of Karen Wright, coordinator at 969-5908.

Sinclair Weeks Plaque Given To N.H. Hospital

A memorial plaque to the late Sinclair Weeks was recently dedicated at a Hospital in Lancaster, N.H. by two of his old friends from World War I days.

John E. Corcoran of 30 Moulton St., Newton Lower Falls, and Thomas L. Barry of Newton, served in Battery B, 101st Field Artillery, Yankee Division, during World War I, which Weeks commanded. The two men, and other surviving members of the unit, decided recently to present a plaque to the Beatrice Dowse Weeks

Hospital in Lancaster, which Weeks gave to the town in memory of his wife.

The plaque states: "In memory of Sinclair Weeks. He devoted his life to the welfare and happiness of his fellow men and to the service of his country. This tablet erected by the men who served under his command 1917-1919 Battery B, 101st Field Artillery YD, World War I.

Barry is chairman the unit's survivors Association, and Corcoran is Secretary-Treasurer.

Resident Receives Ph.D.

David M. Benjamin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Benjamin, West Newton, recently received his Ph.D. degree in Pharmacology from the University of Vermont College of Medicine.

David is a 1968 graduate of Boston University. He received his M.S. degree in Pharmacology from the University of Vermont in 1970 and immediately began working on his doctorate.

While at the university, he authored several papers on the

BUSY PROSPECT BEST

Once you list your home with a Realtor, it's up to him to find a buyer fast. Normally, he'll arrange appointments to view the home which are convenient to both parties. That's always nice.

Sometimes, however, prospects are on tight schedules, requiring your Realtor to make last-minute appointments. Don't get annoyed. I'd like to have a dollar for every sale consummated on a last-minute appointment. Believe me, these are the best ones. Why?

Often, prospects who are transferring into your area, are on short househunting visits. They don't have the luxury of time on their side. And they want and need a house now — not in a year. The busy prospect is also more apt to make an immediate offer to buy than one who has all the time in the world. So, if you really want to sell your house in a hurry, treat the last-minute appointment as an opportunity — not an inconvenience.

Chamber Of Commerce Forms Public Relations Committee

Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce President Gerald A. McCluskey has announced the establishment of a Public Relations Committee, to be headed by Lewis M. Sherer, Jr., General Manager of the Marriott Motor Hotel in Auburndale.

The Committee will be charged with developing a new program incorporating the assets of the organization and the Newton-Needham community, both among Chamber members and the general public, in promoting better understanding of the organization and its programs. So far this year the Chamber has redesigned and reprinted 50,000 individual maps of both cities for widespread distribution. It has also disseminated 32,000 copies of the 1972 Consumers' Guide and Membership Director to businesses and households.

The Public Relations Committee will develop a broad-based program to gain public participation in identifying community goals and interpreting the Chamber to government, citizens, and business firms alike. An initial step will be the formation and distribution of a membership attitude survey.

Named to the new Committee are: Martin Daley of the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company; David Dominie, Polaroid Corp.; Paul Duncan, New England Telephone Co.; James Langway, Community National Bank; James P. Miller, Boston Broadcaster, Inc.; George Goodman, Nettie Greene, Inc.; John McQuillan, Taylor's Stationery, Inc.; and Douglas T. Wilson, Jr., of Friendly Ice Cream, Needham.

Rec. Dept. Sets Up Teams

Girls' Street Hockey

Recreation Supervisor, Fran Towle said recently, the playoffs in both divisions of the Newton Girls' street hockey league have been completed.

In the younger division, girls 12 to 15, the Late-Corners finished first, followed by the Sesame Street Gang, the Pink Panthers and Vito's. For the girls over 16, F Troop came out on top of the BBradley Eleven. The older division is planning an invitational street hockey tournament with the two Newton teams meeting their counterparts from Cambridge and Waltham. The tourney will conclude on November 16th.

Swim Team

The Newton Swim Team begins practice at the Brighton-Allston YMCA this afternoon from 5 to 6 p.m., according to Mrs. Towle. She asks that those who have forgotten their registrations to bring them to the practice.

If further information is desired, please call her at 969-3171.

Women's Volleyball League

Final details were ironed out at the recent organizational meeting of the Newton Women's Volleyball League for girls 18 years and up. The League will play on Monday 7:15 and 8:15 p.m. at the Day Junior High and the Carr and Burr Elementary Schools. Clinic sessions will begin Nov. 13 at Day and Burr at 7 and 8:30 p.m.

Women interested in playing in the League should contact Fran Towle at 969-3171.

The league, now in its fourth year, started with six teams and now has expanded to two divisions of six teams each with about 150 women participating.

A division teams are the: Y-ettes, Set-Ups, Bouncers, Late Bloomers, Carr Blues and Burr. The teams in the B division are: Independents, Bell Telephone, Smiles, Jumping Jills, Highland Carpenters and Nameless. League play will begin on December 4th.

Neighborhood Recreation Program

The Newton Recreation and School Departments are conducting a neighborhood recreation program at the Lincoln-Eliot School beginning Monday, November 13.

The girls will attend sessions Monday and Wednesday on the following schedule: 6:30 p.m., 4th to 6th graders; 7:30 p.m., Junior High and 8:30 p.m., Senior High.

A similar program will be conducted for boys on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Details will be announced later.

Boys Street Hockey

Recreation intern Austin Moore, reports that the boys street hockey semi-final playoffs begin at 4:15 p.m. Nov. 9, at Cabot Park. The semi-finalists, who will be engaged in a round robin series are the Cabot Swamp Rats, the Auburndale Seals and the Newton Centre Warriors.

The finals will be a two out of three affair at Cabot on Nov. 14 at 4:15 p.m. Austin says the league has caught on and next year play will start earlier and expansion of the league is possible.

National League Basketball

National League Basketball play for high school age boys will begin January 1. Rosters are available and for further information, call Austin Moore at 969-3171.

Halloween Program

Mrs. Robert G. Toher, general chairman of the Halloween celebrations sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department and the PTA's of the participating schools, reports that this year's program was extremely successful and there was a large turnout of children and parents.

She says that she has never seen so many fathers participating and that they all seemed to be having a "ball".

Mrs. Toher also commented on the excellent organization of the parties and commended the Fun House operated by the fathers at teh Hyde School.

Officials who visited the school parties were as follows: Lincoln-Eliot and Carr School, recreation commission members Frank Fitzpatrick and Howard Ferguson and commission chairman, Paul J. Burke, Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Police Chief William F. Quinn.

Recreation commissioner John B. Penny visited the Memorial, Hyde, Countryside and Lincoln-Eliot Schools and the Newton Youth Center Dance at the Warren Junior High School.

The following members of the recreation commission and the school parties they attended were: Francis Rice, Hamilton; Joseph Selden, Countryside; Mrs. Worthing L. West, Hyde, with Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Toher; G. Nicholas Dawson, Warren Junior High and Dr. Burton D. Levine, Memorial School.

Senior recreation supervisor, James E. Murphy, visited the Davis School, Hamilton School and the dance at Warren, while recreation supervisor, Robert E. Doherty visited the Countryside, Hyde, Davis and Warren. Recreation supervisor William J. Berry viewed the festivities at Hamilton and Warren, and recreation supervisor Fran Towle, the Carr and Lincoln-Eliot.

Two Residents Appointed To Nat. Alumni Council

Two Newton residents have been appointed to a three-year term as a member of the National Alumni Council of Boston University.

Emmanuel Goldberg, 85 Hyde Ave., Newton, president of Arthur Monk Associates, a Boston publications firm and Dr. Alan Sostek, 28 Turner Terrace, Newton, president of University Center Inc. received the appointment.

The National Alumni Council is a group of prominent graduates who agree to accept varied assignments on behalf of the university and its alumni affairs program. They serve as placement counselors, as chairmen of special events and fund-raising campaigns and in leadership positions in various alumni programs.

Goldberg received his B.S.

Miss Doucet, Mr. Aitchison Are Married

In a pretty wedding by candlelight last Friday evening Miss Margaret Marie Doucet and Mr. Edward Aitchison were married. The Rev. Larry Martineau performed the double ring service in St. Joseph's Church in Waltham which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Doucet of Waltham and the son of Mrs. Eleanor Aitchison of Dalby St., Newton, and the late Mr. Chauncy Aitchison.

For her wedding the bride wore a full length white gown applied in lace with a full length veil of illusion attached to a matching headpiece. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Attending her as matron of honor was Mrs. Mary Ethel Bastarache of Waltham. Mr. Robert Aitchison was best man for his brother, and ushers were Mr. Victor Doucet of Waltham, brother of the bride, and Mr. John Griffen of Newton, brother-in-law of the groom.

A bridal reception followed the ceremony in Waltham after which the couple left for a wedding trip to the White Mountains. They will live in Newton.

The bride came to this country from Nova Scotia in 1964 and her husband, who is a lifelong resident of Newton, graduated from Newton High School in 1968 and is a mechanic for a firm in Sudbury.

SALLY ANN BRENNER
Miss Brenner is Engaged to Wed Robert Willis

A June wedding is planned by Sally Ann Brenner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Brenner of Chestnut Hill, and Robert Edward Willis of Portland, Maine, son of Mrs. Lester Willis and the late Lester Willis.

The bride-to-be graduated from the Brimmer and May School and is a senior at Lesley College. Her fiancé attended Hebron Academy and is a member of the Class of 1973 at Tufts University. (Photo by Ellis Gale Studio)

MRS. GEORGE L. DEMAMBRO

Fiji Honey-moon Follows Duane-DeMambro Bridal

A wedding trip to the Fiji Islands and Honolulu, Hawaii, followed the ceremony in Our Lady of Victory Church recently when Miss Janis Elizabeth Duane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Turner Duane of West Hyannisport, and Mr. George Lucian DeMambro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. DeMambro of Chestnut Hill and Centerville, were married.

The Rev. Francis Connors performed the pretty two o'clock service in which the couple exchanged rings.

Escorted to the altar on the arm of her father, the bride wore a sleeveless gown of organza on silk with Swiss appliques on English Net. Her Juliet cap and full veil of illusion were enlaced also with Swiss appliques and she carried white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Marion of honor for her sister was Mrs. Carol Duane Olson of New York City and another sister, Miss Joan Marie Duane of Hyannisport, was the maid of honor.

Bridesmaids included Miss Elizabeth Ann Duane of W. Hyannisport; Miss Mary Elizabeth DeMambro of Chestnut Hill; and Miss Virginia Jean Callan of Old Brookville, N.Y. Miss Heather Ann Leonard of New York was the flower girl.

Mr. John Patrick Murphy of Newport Beach, Calif., was the best man and groomsmen were Mr. James Turner Duane Jr. of Hyannisport; Mr. Jon Richard Duane of W. Hyannisport; Mr. A. Peter Castoldi of Newton; Mr. Stephen Paul Spenninhaber of Osterville; and Mr. Joseph Francis Antonelli of Somerville.

A wedding reception was held in Hyannisport Golf Club.

The bride is a graduate of Ursuline Academy and of Garland Junior College in Boston and is employed as a stewardess for American Airlines. Her husband, a graduate of St. Sebastian's Country Day School in Newton and of Providence College, is personnel director for DeMambro Electronics.

"Milk and Honey" Student Show Nov. 16 At Temple Emeth. Gala Nov. 18-19

The 25th anniversary of Israel's Independence will be celebrated by the Sisterhood of Temple Emeth, Chestnut Hill, with the production of the play "Milk and Honey" on November 18 and 19. A gala opening is planned that will include a champagne reception at the Temple for patrons who will have seats in a reserved section for the performance.

In addition to patron tickets and regular admissions, student tickets will be available for the evening of Thursday, Nov. 16 when a special performance of the play will be given only for students in the Greater Boston area. Further ticket information may be obtained from the ticket chairman, Mrs. Sidney Beldon, (332-3583) and from the Temple office.

The cast for "Milk and Honey" is comprised principally from talent drawn from groups in Temple Emeth. Their director, Harriet Wilson, well known to Greater Boston audiences, has written new material for the play. Choreography is by Sue Ronson who has come to Boston from the New York stage. The music will be arranged and conducted by Dini Levine who also will provide the musical accompaniment for the performance.

Chairman of the Play Committee is Mrs. Benjamin Perlmutter who also has one of the leading roles. On the scenery and Props Committee are Mrs. Mervin Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Feinstein, Milton Lipson, Robert Ross, Mrs. Daniel Smolens and Louis Wilogren. Costumes are by Mrs. Bertram Budd. Mrs. Morris Sher is Stage Manager and Mrs. Arthur Bass is Production Manager.

According to Sisterhood President, Mrs. Ronald Glickman, "the play 'Milk and Honey' is especially appropriate as a tribute to Israel on the occasion of this important milestone in its history."

Supper At Aquinas J.C.

A spaghetti supper will be held at the Aquinas Junior College, 15 Walnut Park, Newton, on Nov. 5.

There will be two servings, which will take place at 6 and 7:30 p.m. The menu will consist of: wine, rolls and butter, salad, home-made meatballs and sauce, spaghetti, spumoni and coffee.

The price for adults is $2 and $1 for children. Tickets can be reserved at 224-8134.

CHRISTMAS MARKET CHAIRMEN Mrs. Hollis Plimpton, Jr., Mrs. George P. Baker, Jr., and Mrs. Robert H. Sturdy, Jr. prepare for bazaar November 11 at Church of the Redeemer in Chestnut Hill. Good news for shoppers is that the popular market will resume after a two year lapse.

Miss Strazzulla Is Bride Of Mr. Leo P. Leahy, Jr.

A pretty wedding by candlelight took place on Saturday (Oct. 21) in S.T. John's Episcopal Church in Newtonville as Miss Beverly Ann Strazzulla and Mr. Leo P. Leahy, Jr. exchanged their vows along with wedding rings. Officiating for the ceremony was the Rev. William C. Lowe.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Dominic J. Strazzulla of Page road, Newtonville, and Mrs. Harold Whitman of Melrose, and Mr. Leo P. Leahy of Malden.

Escorted to the bridegroom by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory peau de soie, in simple cut with wide ruffled hemline and cuffs, designed with a chapel length train. Her face was framed in an Alencon lace mantilla also chapel length and she carried a bouquet of ivory miniaturae roses and carnations in a cascade.

Miss Carmine Pasquarosa of Newton was the maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Mora Leagy of Melrose, sister of the groom; and cousins of the bride, Miss Anna Marie Strazzulla of Medford, Miss Noel Jacobian and Mrs. Karl Johnson both of Wellesley. All wore gowns of ruby red velvet with ivory satin collars, cuffs and ruffled hems, and carried mixed bouquets.

Miss Patrice Andrews of Arlington, in a pink velvet granny dress, was the flower girl and Master Neal Cannon of Malden carried the ring on a white brocade pillow used at the wedding of the bride's mother years ago.

Best man for his brother was Mr. Stephen Leahy of Melrose and groomsmen were another brother, Mr. Alan Leahy, Mr. Joseph Ruscitti, Mr. Robert Cox and Mr. Richard Thurston, all of Melrose and Mr. Joseph Strazzulla of Newtonville, brother of the bride.

The couple received their friends and relatives following the ceremony at the Nashawtuck Country Club in Concord. They honeymooned in Quebec, Canada.

Mrs. Leahy graduated from the University of Massachusetts with a degree in interior design and merchandising. Her husband, a veteran who served a tour of duty in Vietnam, attended Mass. Bay Community College. They will make their home in Melrose.

Michael Hirsch Is Fiance of Eileen Kraff

Planning an August wedding are Mr. Michael Hirsch, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hirsch, formerly of Newton, now of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Miss Eileen Kraff of Florida.

The bride-to-be is a graduate student in speech pathology at the University of South Florida in Tampa. Her fiancé will graduate in June with a degree in special education.

When golf and a vacation are paired, few people think immediately of Miami Beach... This Florida resort is much more familiar to the average traveler for its night clubs, horse racing, fishing and bathing... Yet Miami Beach, were it not for the glamour and glitter of all the competing attractions, certainly would qualify as a golfer's city... The municipality operates two 18-hole courses and a par-three, nine-hole links... One will be within a 10-minute drive of any point in town... A score or more public and private courses dot the surrounding area... Golf, like other indoor summer sports, is a year 'round game for vacationers in Miami Beach...

City Man At Congress

Charles Nugent, 1st vice-president, Greater Boston Association for the retarded children, recently attended the 5th International Congress on Mental Retardation, held in Montreal, Canada.

In a world-wide display of solidarity on behalf of the people who are retarded, more than 3,000 persons representing a cross-section of geographical, linguistic, ideological and professional backgrounds attended the congress, including 50 Massachusetts residents.

Delegates to the Congress came from 47 countries to hear speakers and attend discussions sessions in order to continue efforts to determine the best possible programs which will assure the rights of the retarded people in accordance with the Declaration on the Rights of Mentally Retarded Persons as adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in Dec. 1971. Rights in the areas of education, employment law and living arrangements were discussed along with many related subjects.

Recruiting Homemakers

Newton women who want to be of service to others are needed to become Homemaker-Home HEALTH Aides on either a part-time or full time basis in the Newton, Needham, Brookline, Waltham and Wellesley areas. The fall recruitment drive for such workers is underway by Intercommunity HomeMaker Service, Inc., a non-profit voluntary agency aided by Massachusetts Bay United Fund.

Volunteers will receive training, a free medical exam, mileage reimbursement or transportation costs, uniforms, social security benefits, workmen's compensation insurance, 10 paid holidays and receive a weekly pay check based on hours of service. Supervision and help is always available from the office staff.

After completing the 32-hour training course a certificate of competence will be awarded plus the satisfaction and knowledge of embarking on a career of help to those in the community who are in need.

For an interview, or information, call Miss Katherine Curran; Intercommunity Homemaker SERVICE Inc. (332-5970).

The 1973 Volkswagen is still $1999*

A bargain is a bargain.

While you can see the new 1973 Beetle is still at a nice low price, you really can't begin to see the value until you know what you're getting for your money.

A warranty, for instance, that's twice what you get with any other small car: 24 months or 24,000 miles.

But then, we wouldn't be offering it if it weren't for our incredibly fine factory inspection: over 1100 inspectors poring over more than 5,000 parts. It sounds compulsive, but it's the best way to reach perfection.

And now, there's our new VW Computer Diagnosis system. Meaning literally what it says: a brand new computer that's built in, or soon will be, at our service area ready to be hooked up to your car. The most advanced service system in the world. It checks vital service parts, via sensors and probes built into critical areas, and spells the results out in plain English. People should have it on hand.

Consider also our legendary resale value. When you compare it with other cars after three years, it makes our $1999* sound absolutely amazing.†

Everything adding up to one important point: there's a big difference between being cheap, and being a bargain.

Few things in life work as well as a Volkswagen.

*1973 Volkswagen Sedan (all suggested retail prices, F.O.B. local taxes and dealer charges, if any, additional).

If on owner maintains and services his vehicle in accordance with the 1973 Volkswagen maintenance schedule, any factory part found to be defective in material or workmanship within 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first, except normal wear and tear and service items, will be repaired or replaced by any U.S. or Canadian Volkswagen Dealer. And this will be done free of charge. See your dealer for details.

Newton NOW lays an egg...

a 5 1/4% egg...and hatches a fresh new way to bank.

The now account gives you all the convenience of checking plus 5 1/4% interest.

A now account is easy to open, easy to use. Whenever you want to pay a bill, or get cash, you just write out a withdrawal order. It looks like a check, works like a check, and costs only 15¢ for each one you write. Meanwhile your entire now account is earning daily interest at 5 1/4% as long as you have a balance of at least $10.00.

The now account at Newton Savings Bank lets you put all your eggs in one basket — combining saving, bill-paying, buying, getting cash into one account, with one convenient monthly statement, at the one kind of bank, the savings bank, that traditionally pays higher interest.

Great way to help build a nest egg.

How many banks does a family need?

NOW just one —

Newton Savings Bank

Highlands Congregational Church Centennial

Newton Highlands Congregational Church will celebrate its centennial Sunday (Nov. 12) at 10:30 a.m.

Rev. Oliver Powell, area minister for Metropolitan Boston of the Massachusetts Conference, United Church of Christ, will preach on "This Holy Ground" as the guest of honor.

Rev. Frederic Grootsema, now of Whittier, Calif., will return to the church for the celebration. He was its minister from 1946-57. Other former pastors, Reverend John Arthur Samuelson, Rev. Arthur F. Fultz, Rev. Paul G. Pitman and associate minister Rev. Meredith B. Handsicker will join with Rev. Dundie M. Breeze current pastor, in commemorating the anniversary.

Special music with soloists Marsha Vleck, soprano, and C.

Ray Bryan, tenor, as well as three choirs, will be directed and accompanied by Carol Hassman, organist and choirmaster.

Following the service, the 100th Anniversary Banquet will be held in Founders Hall.

The afternoon program will feature historical pictures and events projected on a screen by James D. Wynne, moderator of the church; and an exhibit of memorabilia arranged by the 100th anniversary committee.

The committee includes Mrs. Samuelson, Elsie Badger, Ruth Langley, Mrs. Arthur F. Fultz, Mrs. Clifford W. Rust and James D. Wynne.

The Newton Highlands Church will also have a "Godspell Celebration" Nov. 12-14 at 7:30 p.m.

It will include a festival service of song, dance and mime with music in the spirit of "Godspell," and feature junior and youth choirs, junior and senior fellowships and volunteers. Call the church office (244-0675) for reservations.

Preparations for the establishment of the congregational church in the Highlands began in November, 1871. Highlights of its 100-year history include:

New Dual Degree Program At Newton College Begins In 1973

Students at Newton College will have an unusual opportunity to expand their educational horizons and career options with the introduction of a new dual degree program just established in cooperation with Georgia Institute of Technology.

Participants in the program, which will begin in September, 1973, will spend three years at Newton College and two years at Georgia Tech. After completing the academic requirements of the two cooperating institutions, the student will be awarded a B.A. degree from Newton College and a bachelor's degree in engineering from Georgia Tech.

Qualified students could also move directly into the master's degree program at Georgia Tech, reducing the total amount of time necessary for that degree.

Dr. F. W. Schutz, Jr., dual degree coordinator at Georgia

Tech, reported that "contrary to reports in the public press, there is no shortage of fruitful employment opportunities for our graduates and the market for women engineers is the very best. It is interesting to note that in engineering women are paid the same starting salaries as men with the national average being about $865 per month for the graduate with a baccalaureate degree."

"A joint degree program such as ours with Georgia Tech is particularly attractive because it not only prepares women for lucrative and highly specialized technological careers, but it also insures their education in the humane wisdom of the Liberal Arts: the best of both worlds," commented Dr. Kristin Morrison, academic dean of Newton College.

Under the new program, students will have the opportunity to work at Neton College in 23 fields for the B.A.

degree, and at Georgia Tech for degrees in 31 fields in the Engineering College, General College, College of Industrial Management and Southern Technical Institute.

Trio Visits Guru

India was the destination of three Newton residents last week when they left this country for a festival and month-long stay at the ashram of Guru Sri Sant Ji Maharaj.

Loring Baker of 4 Bradford Rd.; Jimmy Martez and Peter Brooks of 1930 Commonwealth Ave., Auburndale, made the trip along with 2,400 other Western disciples of the 14-year-old guru.

Slide Show, Halloween Party Among Activities Of Convalescent Center

Residents of the Newton Convalescent Center, 25 Army St., West Newton, were recently treated to a trip through the Holy Land with slides presented by Miss Robeta Barrar of Wakefield. Miss Barrar is an active member of the B'hai faith and her trip was a pilgrimage to visit the shrines of the world's major religions. She had much to tell of their beauty and meaning and everyone enjoyed seeing this most unusual and important part of the world.

On Oct. 31, the Recreation Room was filled to celebrate Halloween at a party, with Mrs. Marty Linsky as guest of honor. Mrs. Linsky was warm and charming, and everyone enjoyed talking with her and learning more about her husband's positions on many issues.

In addition to Mrs. Linsky, a representative from the committee to re-elect Senator Brooke was present to give a view of the issues in that major campaign. All the residents of the Newton Convalescent Center have been encouraged to exercise their right to vote and absentee ballots were made available.

Therefore, it was important that the residents have this first-hand opportunity for a political discussion. Refreshments and musical entertainment were provided to lend a joyous note to the occasion and the residents truly enjoyed a political tea in a festive atmosphere.

October found five residents celebrating birthdays at the monthly birthday party. The honored guests were Mrs. Ida Klapp, Miss Mary O'Brien, Mrs. Helen Tibbetts, Mrs. Mary Logan, and Mrs. Loretta Garth. As usual, Andy Caroselli of Watertown presented an outstanding musical performance. All regular activities are continuing at the Center, and in addition many special events are being planned as the holiday season approaches. Everyone is preparing for a busy time ahead.

La Leche League Meets Tuesday

The Newton-Needham chapter of La Leche League, the international organization to support and encourage breastfeeding, will hold its meeting next Tuesday night (Nov. 14) at 8 p.m. at the home of Linda Eaton of 226 Maty St., Needham.

Topic of discussion will be "Nutrition and Weaning." Meetings are open to nursing mothers and their babies, pregnant women, and all other interested women. For more information call Barbara Popper at 449-0155.

ENTERPRISE — When a tornado struck near here, killing four persons, injuring scores and causing thousands of dollars in property damage, area residents turned out in force to help.

Individuals and groups provided enough food to feed hundreds of rescue workers and persons left homeless for two days. Officials also reported having 22 pages of names of area families who had volunteered to provide temporary housing.

DR. MELVIN K. DUVAL, right, Assistant Secretary of Health and Scientific Affairs for the Department of Health Education and Welfare, recently spoke at a dinner at New England Sinai Hospital's "Share of Life" program. He is greeted by Newton residents Herbert L. Baron, left, dinner chairman; and Archie Kaplan, development fund chairman of the Hospital.

Prominent Newton Men And Women To Serve On RSVP Committee

The Newton Wellesley, Weston RSVP has a number of prominent Newtonites on the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee.

Among those who have been selected to serve on the Ad Hoc Committee which held its first meeting this past week are:

Dr. John Cullinane representing the Area Board, who is with the Newton School Department at 88 Chestnut Street, West Newton; Sister Margaret Gorman of 885 Center Street, Newton Center; Mrs. John Coleman of 195 Church Street, Newton; and Samuel Turner of 17 Lodge Rd., West Newton, all appointed by Paul Burke, President of the Newton Community Service Centers which administers the program.

Miss Adelaide Ball of 35 Waban Street, Chairman of Newton's Council for the aging, will represent that body on the Committee and is joined by Mrs. Edward Landy of 67 Wyman Street, Waban, and Stephan Holmes of 26 Holman Rd., Auburndale, also representing the Newton Council.

In addition, Mayor Theodore D. Mann has selected Lester Deneault of 60 Wildwood Avenue, Newtonville, and Robert Waldman of 280 Boylston Street, Chestnut Hill to serve on the committee.

This area wide program, administered by the Newton Community Service Centers through its Executive Director Anthony J. Bibbo, will function under the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee through funding furnished by the federal government through Action. Generally, the program may be likened to a local Vista Program for persons who have attained the age of 60 years or over.

Edward Sahatjian, representing the staff of the Newton, Wellesley, Weston Area Board of Mental Health & Retardation, is serving as a professional consultant to the program. Sister Margaret Gorman and Mrs. Edward Landy are also members of the personnel committee for the project with Sister Gorman functioning as Chairman.

Radio Club To Hold Meet

The Middlesex Amateur Radio Club will hold a meeting Friday, Nov. 10, in the basement of the Nonantum Branch of the Newton Free Library.

The aim feature of the meeting will be a special "Marconi Night." William Santelmann will speak on Marconi and the special events being planned for early 1973 to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the first trans-Atlantic radio message sent from the United States.

A group of radio amateurs are planning to set up a special station at the original Marconi site on Cape Cod. Another group of English radio amateurs of the Radio Society of Great Britain will set up a special station on the other side of the Atlantic. A proclamation will be issued by the governor here in Massachusetts.

The public is invited to attend the meeting. The Library is located at the junction of Bridge St. and Watertown St. (Route 16). Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Women Sponsor Children's Homes

The Greater Boston Council of Pioneer Women has sponsored 5 unique day and night homes for children under 6 in Israel. The homes are: Omna in Haifa; Bet Katchko in Ramat Gen; Neve Taf in Tel Aviv; and children's homes in Rehovot and Hadera.

In these homes small groups of children are separated by age and need so that each child receives the attention his stage of development and personality demands.

The local Council has set a goal of sponsoring 25 children in honor of Israel's 25 years of statehood. Avis Jacobson of Newton is a member of the adoption committee.

Free Thumbbody Posters At Brookline Savings Bank

If you like your "I'm Thumbbody" button, you'll love a Thumbbody poster!

Brookline Savings Bank, which recently launched a new advertising program highlighting the bank's dedication to providing thoughtful, thorough personal service to its customers by offering free lapel buttons proclaiming "I'm Thumbbody", is following up that popular giveaway with free posters.

The 17x22-inch posters, printed in pink and black, declare "Thumbbody Loves You".

In announcing the start of the program, Brookline Savings' president, H. S. Payson Rowe, explained that the bank had adopted the trademarked Thumbbody character — a smiling face on a thumbprint body — because "he embodies our philosophy of service — a philosophy that includes personalized, individual service for every one of our customers."

The very positive reaction of area residents to "Thumbbody" indicates that in this zip-coded, serial-numbered, computerized world, this symbol of service and the philosophy it stands for strikes a responsive chord. Rowe said that as long as the supply lasts, "Thumbbody Loves You" posters would be free to all who ask for them at Brookline Savings' four offices at 160 Washington Street, Brookline Village; 1018 West Roxbury Parkway, South Brookline; 1340 Beacon Street, Coolidge Corner and 1014 Beacon Street, Longwood.

Event-Filled Week For City's P.T.A.

Three events will be featured for members of the Countryside P.T.A. and residents and students at the school, Dedham St. Newton Highlands, during the week, Nov. 13 through 17.

A feature of the week will be an investigation and innovation group of workshop discussions concerning "The Proper Climate For Learning", Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7:45 p.m.

The week will begin with the annual Countryside Book Fair, which will contain hundreds of the most popular soft-covered children's and adult books being offered. The book fair is scheduled to run from Monday, Nov. 13 to Friday, Nov. 17.

On Nov. 13, the program will have an arts and crafts program directed toward grades K to 2 following the regular afternoon school session.

There will also be a gym program, for grades 2-3, on Tuesday afternoon. Thursday, will feature a cooking session for children and arts and crafts for grades 3 up. Adult sessions will offer: oil painting, needlework and first aid courses on Tuesday evening.

There will be a discussion concerning proper climates for learning, which will be held on Nov. 16 and will be led by Dr. Haskel Cohen, chief psychologist for the Newton guidance clinic. Three moderators — each a psychologist or social worker — will moderate each of the subsequent individual workshops scheduled for later that evening.

Newton Resident Part Of Program

Seymour Buchine, 40 Bencliff Circle, Auburndale, is among 28 Pandel-Bradford supervisors and foremen participating in a 12-week Key Many development program. Designed to strengthen fundamental supervisory skills in leadership and safety. The program teaches the participants how to: recognize accident problems, conduct employee safety training, establish good housekeeping, evaluate guarding needs, maintain fire prevention and control and use protective equipment properly.

The course was presented at the Pandel-Bradford's Lowell plant by Raymond Colvin, safety engineer with the Greater New York Mutual Company. Pandel-Bradford is a supplier of man-made leather substitutes for shoes and handbag industry.

Outstanding Citizens Named

The Filicudi Associates, Waltham, a self help association of Italians from the Island of Filicudi off the western coast of Italy, honored two of Waltham's outstanding citizens at a dinner held at the Chateau de Ville, Framingham on Sat., Nov. 4.

Recipients were George Cappadonna and Joseph Drapkin. Both men came to the United States from Europe and surmounted obstacles of language, education and poverty to become owners of their successful businesses.

Drapkin came to New York as a child of three and lived for a short time in Harlem when it was predominantly Italian, being, for a time, the only Jew in an all-Italian school. He moved to Springfield, Mass., and, as a young man, came to Waltham where he started working on the back of a horse-drawn meat wagon with an investment of seventy-five dollars that he, raised to millions. It was not all success. Drapkin, after an initial success in Waltham, went back to New York to the STOCK MARKET BUT FOUND INSTANT FAILURE. Later, he convinced Frieda Buckstein, a successful New York BUSINESSWOMAN, TO RETURN TO Waltham and start over with him. They started their own business on Main Street.

Drapkin's supermarket has been written up in Life Magazine as the largest meat market in the world. The success of the market upgraded the business value of the entire street, where nationally known companies now vie for space, and pay taxes to the well satisfied Waltham Tax Collector.

He deals with approximately 22,000 families a week, and provides them with parking space, bought and paid for by him for their convenience.

Drapkin is associated with the following: Garden City Trust, Curry College, Brandeis University, Waltham Boys Club, Y.M.C.A., Lions Club, Elks, Bnai B'rith, Masons and Catholic Charities, as a member or director of each of the foregoing.

In addition, he has donated rooms at both Newton-Wellesley and Waltham Hospitals, is a founder of the Mt. Sinai Hospital in Miami Beach, Florida, and is a fund raiser for the Stigmatine Fathers' Retreat House in Waltham. Over the years he has donated or been on the fund raising committees of nearly all charitable, civic or youth oriented organizations.

Co-recipient, Mr. George Cappadonna, immigrated from the Island of Filicudi at the age of fourteen to Waltham, where he became a farm laborer, a furniture mover, and later a market and produce clerk. Feeling dissatisfied working for others, he decided to go into business for himself. He borrowed some money, bought a truck, and eventually became President of a company with over forty trucking units.

His initial success was a contract with the Hookings-Hastings Organ Company of Weston to deliver organs.

He delivered the largest organ built in this country to the present site of the Rockefeller Center. At the time, driving a truck with solid rubber tires, Cappadonna was allowed forty-eight hours for the trip.

In 1915, Cappadonna married Lucy Defina, also from Filicudi, and they had five children, who in turn have presented them with twenty-five grandchildren.

Following the war, years Cappadonna became an exclusive trucker for some of the country's finest premium beers. In 1965, Cappadonna sold his trucking business, intending to retire however, he, with his sons, built and now operate the Riverside Bowling Alleys in Watertown.

Cappadonna was given his award for: the love and understanding that he shared with his fellow man, both Filicudis and his neighbors; his contribution to good citizenship that he made over the years; the many poor families that were moved by Cappadonna trucks and labor; the outings that were held due to Cappadonna transportation; the love and solidarity to his families around him and his business and personal integrity.

Both recipients acknowledged that without the interest and help of their wives, none of their successes could have come to pass.

Mayor Arthur Clark, head table guest and friend of both, stated, "Waltham is so much better off for having men of the caliber and strength of Joe Drapkin and George Cappadonna. Their contributions to our city make it a much better place and a richer place in human values. We have much to thank these wonderful gentlemen for, and we must thank their wives and families for sharing them with us."

Activists Meet With Students

Every Wednesday from 8 to 9, Newton High School sponsors "the issues and activists lecture series." Each week well-known activists address a student gathering.

The series was organized and initiated by sophomore Bruce Saxon with the help and approval of John Livingston, History Department Head, and Principal Richard Mechem.

"The lectures are free and open to the public. Any criticisms or requests for speakers are welcome," commented Saxon.

The year's first speaker was Don Guerwitz, a leading anti-war activist and now a candidate for the Senate on the Socialist Worker's Party ticket. He spoke on "McGovern and the anti-war movement."

On Wednesday, October 4, Ollie Bivens, a black nationalist member of the "Young Socialist Alliance" lectured on "Malcolm X: the Man and His Ideas." Approximately 60 students attended and contributed to a discussion on recent developments in the Black Liberation Movement.

The following week Lynne Faine, a long-time activist in the women's movement discussed Women's Liberation and her more recent project, abortion legalization.

"Considering that we haven't yet developed any kind of publicity for the lectures, we've had excellent turnouts. I really think this kind of weekly happening will be a success at Newton High," Saxon said.

Educaton Class Is Still Open

The Newton Community Service Center, Inc. announced recently that there is still space in their program for youngsters in Special Education.

The meetings, which will be held at the Rebecca Pomroy House, 84 Eldredge st., Newton Corner, will be held for children of mixes ages and will meet on Friday, 2:45-4.

The co-ordinator's intention is to offer democratic social group setting for these youngsters, encouraging their involvement in decision making processes at their own levels of ability; to place them in normal group settings when their readiness and the opportunity for placement arises; to provide satisfying and enriching experiences which will provide worthy use of leisure time; to encourage and develop freedom of expression and individuality; and to include parents in the program in meaningful ways.

The following types of activities are anticipated: appropriate trips and outings (offered for extra fees), creative arts and crafts, creative dramatics and creative body movement, quiet and active games songs, planning and preparing for parties and special events, preparing and serving refreshments.

Transportation will be available from the Newton Schools to Pomroy House. Parents are responsible for getting children home, car pools can be arranged. Parents wishing to register their children from other towns must provide their own transportation to and from Pomroy House. For further information, please call the Newton Community Service Centers Inc. 969-5906.

Resident Attends Dental Meeting

Dr. Ralph Lobene, Walnut st., Newton, attended the annual meeting of the American Dental Association during the week of Oct. 29.

Lobene, who is the director of Advanced Education at Forsyth School for Dental Hygienists, participated in the week-long event as a representative of the Forsyth Dental Center.

The school for dental hygienists is the largest in the country, and this, along with Forsyth's role of leadership in dental research and its infirmary division, makes it one of the foremost dental health centers in the United States.

How to manipulate your way to a free checking account. Even a cheaper loan.

Businessmen have been doing it for years.

"My company will give your bank more business if your bank will give my company a better deal."

Now you can make the same offer to South Shore National. But before we begin making deals, let's agree to do this, just to simplify things for both of us:

Let's take all your bank accounts, and put them together on one monthly statement.

Take that first step with us. And you're in a position to begin making deals.

So: If you're willing to keep a monthly total of at least $400 between your checking account and up to as many as four savings accounts, we'll give you your checking account free of charge.

If that sounds complicated, let's look at a couple of examples:

Let's say you keep a low balance of, say, $180 in your checking account and $220 in a savings account. That comes to $400 and would earn you a free checking account.

Or suppose you keep a low balance of only $50 in your checking account, $200 in a joint savings account, and $75 in each of two trustee accounts. That also comes to $400 and earns you a free checking account.

The point is, you need at least $400 in checking and savings. How you spread it around is pretty much up to you.

In addition, as a Multistatement customer, we'll give you a 10% bonus refund of the paid finance charges on a new installment loan when it's satisfactorily repaid.*

The deals will save you money. The single-statement arrangement will save you confusion. Here's how:

Introducing Multistatement.

On one itemized list, Multistatement gives you the complete picture of all your banking transactions for the preceding month:

You'll get the whole rundown on what you've spent from your checking account, what you've deposited, balance, and so forth.

You'll see how much you've added or withdrawn from each savings account you have with us, how much interest has been paid to you, and how much you have in the account now.

If you have an installment loan with us, you'll see how much you've paid back, how much you still owe, and how many payments that amounts to.

If you have Check Credit (an account that allows you to make your own loans simply by writing out specially coded checks), you'll see how much of your cash reserve you've used up and how much you can still borrow.

*PRINCIPAL LOAN AMOUNT IS $1000 OR MORE AND MUST BE REPAYED WITHIN 30 DAYS FROM THE DATE OF THE LOAN.

Some fancy financial moves.

To say that Multistatement simplifies the management of your money is an oversimplification.

The fact is, by putting so many banking services together on one statement, Multistatement goes beyond any of the other single-statement accounts you've probably heard about.

With South Shore National's Multistatement account, you're now in a position to maneuver your bank accounts in ways you've never been able to.

With one simple instruction to the bank, you can transfer money from virtually any account to any other. (And you can tell us exactly what day to transfer it.)

Or you can authorize the bank to set up an automatic monthly transfer of some fixed amount.

Money to cover a check.

An obvious advantage of the transfer feature is that, when your checking account is low, you can make a transfer from savings into checking.

But think of some of the other transfer possibilities: Checking to savings. Checking to check credit. Check credit to checking. Checking to 90-day notice account. 90-day notice account to checking. Daily-interest savings account to 90-day notice. 90-day notice account to daily-interest. (On 90-day account transfers, the required 90-day notice must be given.)

It's good for you because it's good for us.

Needless to say, the more of your banking business you bring to South Shore National Bank, the better for us.

This, of course, is why we're coming out with Multistatement banking in the first place.

It also explains why we're making Multistatement just as attractive a package as we possibly can.

What we require from you:

For you to qualify for a Multistatement account, we simply require that you have a checking account and at least one savings account with us.

If you have other types of accounts with us that you want included on Multistatement, we'll be delighted to do it. If you have other bank accounts with us that you don't want to appear on Multistatement (your own savings account on the side, for example), that's okay, too.

How to get Multistatement:

With 34 offices of South Shore National Bank all over the South Shore and west of Boston, chances are fairly good there's an office of South Shore National Bank that's not too far from you.

But even if there isn't, that shouldn't keep you from opening a Multistatement account if you want one.

After all, there's always the phone. (Our number in Wellesley is 235-3000.)

And there's also our handy coupon.

Multistatement
All your bank accounts on one statement, once a month.

Gentlemen:
Please send me an application for Multistatement.

Tigers Sweep By Latin 21-14; Waltham Next Foe

By DAVID CUTLER

Chalk up another one for Newton. Their 21-14 win over Boston Latin on Saturday, November 4 raises their record to 6-1 and keeps them abreast of Brookline in the Suburban League, and strengthens their hold on the second Class A spot.

Although the team's play was hardly over-powering, as the score indicates, the way the Tigers won this contest proved a lot to the players and coaches; for the mark of a great team is that they can win even when they don't play well.

"The kids had a funny feeling after this game," explained Head Coach Jim Ronayne. "They knew they didn't play that well, and Boston Latin is a very good team. I was more nervous about this game than about Medford."

Newton got off to the same early lead in this contest that they've gotten in every other Ken Billings' interception giving NHS the ball at the 30 started things rolling. Quarterback Cal Maffie's thirty yard strike to Ron Wilson at the 30 at the 8:00 mark of the opening period started the scoring. Wilson made some nifty moves to get into the endzone and give the Tigers a 6-0 lead. Bill Steinberg's conversion attempt went wide.

Latin took the ensuing kickoff on their own 38 and on six plays marched for a touchdown. The scoring play was an electrifying 24 yard run by Paul Chisholm. QB Bill King's pass for the two point conversion was incomplete.

Keilher Scores
Newton received Latin's kickoff, and when they drove 65 yards in 11 plays it looked as though the floodgate was opening. Gerry Keilher got the six-pointer on a three yard run. Maffie ran for the two extra points and the Tigers led 14-6. When Bob Arabian intercepted Bill King's pass on the Newton 40 the next time Latin got the ball, and ran it back for a TD, it placed the lid on the BL coffin. Newton High's 21-6 lead was on the scoreboard at halftime.

The third quarter passed without a score, but Newton began a drive which brought them to midfield as the period ended. The march continued in the early minutes of the final segment on runs by Maffie and Mark Connolly to the Latin 38. The Tigers were faced with a fourth and two situation. Ronayne elected to go for it. Connolly's run was stopped inches short of the first down and BL took over.

The decision proved costly as King hit Steve Mahoney in the Newton endzone ten plays later. The two point conversion narrowed the margin to 21-14.

"The reason I don't think we should have punted at the time," analyzed Ronayne, "was that if we could retain possession we might have been able to score again. We were driving. And even if we had punted, they still could have driven for a touchdown, only from farther down field."

Only two and a half minutes remained when Latin took over for the final time. Their march was stopped at midfield by an immovable defensive line. Newton was then able to run the clock out.

The Tigers were struck by a rash of injuries during the game. Starting defensive backs Ken Billings, Bob Hoover, and Dave Boyajian were all hurt. Their status for the Waltham game is still in doubt.

Even though the Hawks' record is 2-4 Ronayne sees them as a dangerous team. "They are very aggressive and hungry for a win. They've started out strong in all their games, so we've got to beat them to the first punch."

The Newton Notebook

CHESTNUT HILL — One of the most popular guessing-games sports fans subject their home teams to is the "What's the matter with the Bruins, Red Sox, Patriots, etc.?" game.

The game usually begins about one-third of the way into the given season when the given hometowners are playing with the consistency of politicians' stands on the issues, and are beginning to resemble Andy Capp stumbling home from the pub.

It has become clear to everyone by this time that the local talent is not too talented and is not going to the playoffs unless it pays its own way there.

It is this same attitude which has gravitated down from the and of the Patriots to the level of college football, specifically, Newton's least-known, and best-known football team, the Boston College Eagles.

The biggest-time college football squad in New England just can't put it together right this season. The Eagles, as usual, were expected to uphold, establish, or re-establish whatever football reputation the six-state region, or at least Massachusetts, has.

So the entire area, justified or not, feels let down when the Eagles don't make it to a bowl game.

Hints of things to come were transmitted on September 15, when the Eagles were blanked by Tulane, 10-0. They sandwiched wins over Temple, 49-27, and Villanova, 21-20, around a disheartening 27-20 loss to Navy, and then played their last game of the season against the rated Air Force Squadron.

The Falcons prevailed, 13-9. What followed was hopefully the low point of the season—a 35-20 defeat by previously winless Middlebury.

Two Saturdays ago was BC's last day of the fall—the club had the day off—until last Saturday. Suddenly, the Eagles went crazy against a pretty decent Syracuse team, and carried off a 37-0 victory. It was a euphoric game for BC—a perfect effort.

However, despite the record adds up to what this 3-4 record adds up to is an unhappy situation, a nervous team, and an unfavorable record.

Politic Mike Lupica (The Thursday Reporter, The Eagle's eye and up until recently, The Heights, all at Boston College) a sometime controversial columnist, is both quick to praise and swift to damn Eagle heroics and misdeeds, but he knows whereof he writes about BC football.

Lupica, like everyone who plays the game, has his own theories on what's wrong with Boston College football.

"Despite that it's a cliché," he said. "There is still no substitute for varsity experience. They are starting 17 undergraduates and they have a quarterback playing mistakes out of his system. Defensive tackle Jeff Yeates has two bad knees and he can't move as fast as he used to."

"Another big thing," he concluded, "was that the team bought all the pre-season build-up about how good it was."

The Eagles have shown sparks of living up to their advance billing. Quarterback Gary Marangi has looked sharp on occasion, and has hit 76 of 162 passes. Mel Briggs has been superb catching Marangi's tosses. He's grabbed 32. The real power in the BC offense comes from running backs. Former schoolboy state scoring champion Mike Esposito has 623 yards for a 6.0 average, and Phil Bennett has 504 yards for about 4.5 a carry. Coach Joe Yuckica has been questioned repeatedly about why Esposito and Bennett did not adorn the same backfield. Last Saturday he finally did something about it.

That change might be the catalyst which injects life into the disappointing squad. It may have already, judging from the inspired performance versus Syracuse.

However, Lupica's assessment seems to be the most accurate. The team is young and is going to make mistakes. Everyone is so disappointed now because the team was overrated to start with.

Tom Rezzuti, Northeastern's standout defensive back from Newton, was stymied in his attempt to crack the all-time New England interception record against Boston University, last Friday.

Rezzuti, chasing the 27th pillar of his career, didn't have much of an opportunity since the Terriers' offense is the wishbone and they don't go to the air very often.

Former Newton High golf star Paul Murphy, a senior at Providence College, captured the ECAC golf title, last week. Murphy played on the Tigers'

Newton High Soccer Team Bows To Nauset In State Tourney; Tigers Unlucky

By DAVID CUTLER

Halloween was not a happy day for the Newton High Soccer Team. Their first round EMass Soccer Tournament game with Nauset was one big trick and no treat.

Playing at a neutral field in Duxbury, the two squads battled through three and a half periods of scoreless soccer, but an official's judgement gave Nauset the opportunity they needed to score the contest's lone mark.

The match was even on the field as well as the scorebook until that fateful final period. Both teams had chances to score earlier, but failed to do so.

Scot Newcombe blew a penalty shot called against the Tigers at 7:30 of the opening segment. Vinny Meglio, Rudi Visconti, and Dom Proia all missed on first half opportunities in close.

The final stanza began disastrously enough. Co-captain Vinny Meglio, who had previously been given warning for stepping within 10 yards of a free kick, was thrown out of the game for "delay of the game." The exact circumstances are still not clear, but the interesting thing is that the action took place at the end of the third period, when time had expired.

Losing their leading scorer hurt the Tiger attack tremendously. Without Meglio the offense faltered. But throughout the fourth period, as they did throughout the game, the defense played solidly.

Crucial Call
The crucial call was made with less than nine minutes remaining in regulation time.

Mark Wasserman came out from his goal to kick up a loose ball. As he did so, Nauset forward Scot Newcombe came barreling into him. The collision resulted in Newcombe lying between Wasserman and the ball. Mark tried to climb over his opponent to reach the ball, and his effort appeared to have been hindered by Newcombe. But the referee blew his whistle to call a penalty shot against Mark for hounding in the penalty area. Given a second chance, Newcombe rolled this penalty kick into the left hand side of the net, just out of Wasserman's reach.

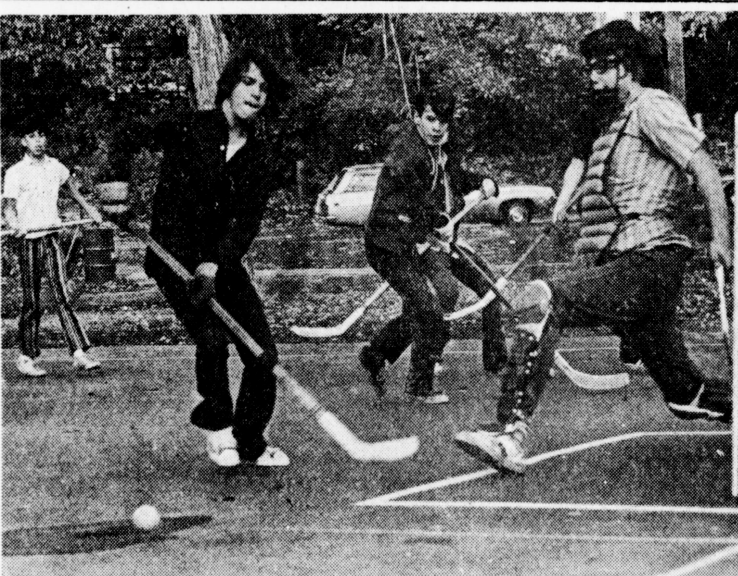

Trailing 1-0, Newton fought back hard. They pressured

Nauset and had some testingshots, but the game, the season and the high school soccer days of 16 seniors ended on this cloudy Halloween in Duxbury.

"I really feel sorry," said a now composed Mike Buzzi, "for the whole team, especially the seniors. Being eliminated from the Tournament in the first round is certainly disappointing, but the season as a whole was very rewarding. Winning our league was a tremendous feat."

Next season should be another successful one for NHS. There are eight returning lettermen with a lot of varsity experience, whereas this year there was only one. "We've got a lot of experience coming back," said Buzzi, "and the junior varsity players have very good skills."

As the EMass Tourney winds up under the lights at BU, the youthful sophomores and juniors are looking ahead to next year, while the aged seniors look back on the tremendous experiences they have had playing soccer for Newton High School.

N.A.A. Lions Bow To Wayland In Finale

The Newton Athletic Association Lions lost their last league game to the Wayland Chargers 6-0, in a mud-fest at the Newton Highlands Playground on Sunday, November 5, as the "1972" football season is close to its end.

The Lions ending their league standing 1-7-0 and their overall play 3-7-0.

Next week the Lions will host the Wellesley Tornados, a south shore team, at the Newton Highlands field and there may possibly be another non-league game after this, as arrangements are being made.

two successive state title teams in the late Sixties. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

The scoring of today's game went, beginning of 3rd period QB Dave Lamere, who dodged a few tackles and had good blocking, ran 55 yards for the TD.

The extra points sweep failed. The Lions were unable throughout the day to get on the scoreboard although they came quite close a few times.

The weather was definitely although they came quite close a few times.

The weather was definitely a factor at this game as the defensive players all played quite well without the aid of some key players who have been injured.

In "B" team action the Tigers lost to the Wayland Jr. Midget team 22-0. Next week the Tigers will play the Mustangs at the Newton Highlands playground. Game time 12:30.

Sports Shorts

What did Philadelphia ever do to deserve the sports teams it has?

The 76'ers are matching the Celtics game-for-game and are threatening to succeed the original Cleveland Cavaliers as the worst team in NBA history. At least Cleveland had an excuse - it was an expansion club. At worst peek, Philly was 0-11 and moving fast.

The Phillies did their part this summer by finishing 59-97 - the worst record in the majors, and if it weren't for the pure snaziness of Veterans Stadium and Steve Carlton's magical left arm the Phillies would have been a secret by Independence Day.

The Eagles have long enjoyed the title of the worst team in pro

South Soccer Team Ends Season At 6-6

In its quest for its first winning season in school history the Newton South High soccer team fell short, last week, losing to Acton-Boxboro, 4-1, and tumbling to third place in the Dual County League.

The Lions finished 6-6 on the year, still the best record ever compiled by a South squad. The best previous mark was the last two years when the soccermen were 5-6-2.

South beat Acton-Boxboro, 1-0 earlier in the season, but completely dominated play in the first half and then tallied two quick goals at the beginning of the third quarter for a 4-0 advantage. South tri-captain Mark Strunick, primarily a defensive player, tallied the first goal of his career to avert a shutout.

Second-year coach Mike Coven, who has had more success than any other Lion soccer coach, was very discouraged by the loss.

"Losing to Acton was disappointing," he said, "especially since it dropped us to third place. We were 6-4 going into our last two games with Wayland and Acton, both teams we had beaten, and they both beat us. We dominated both of those games the first time, too. We just couldn't put the ball in the net. That was our trouble all year. We had the chances, but we lacked aggressiveness."

Dedicated Men In Newton Pop Warner League

The Cabot Rams are the local Pop Warner football team. Newton's Pop Warner football league owes its existence to Fred Delacandro, founded and president for the past twelve years.

There are 15 teams in the league, which are divided into divisions according to the age and weight of the boys playing. The Rams practice at Cabot field three times a week and play their league games on Sunday afternoon. Equipment for the boys is financed by the selling of raffles and contributions to Pop Warner.

Pete Scaltrito has been a head coach in the league for the past eight years and has, along with assistant coaches Bryan Sava and Bob Turkell, given the boys training in football as well as confidence in themselves.

All the boys on the Rams are 10-13 years old and play in the "B" squad division (108 lb. weight limit). They are all from the Newton area. Mark Newton, Lee Waxman, Nicky Boivin, Timmy Puce, Jeff Beatrice, and Henry Marini lead the offense and Chris Flaherty, Danny Corrigan, Richie Meek, and Danny Taylor and Billy Uberti lead the defense.

football, except for 1970 when the Patriots borrowed it, and nothing has improved this year.

Hockey-wise, Philly is twice blessed. The high-priced and highly-touted Blazers of the WHA are mired so deep in the eastern basement a search party is being formed. The Flyers, unbelievably, are a game over .500. How long can it last?

The biggest spread on Jimmy The Greek's card, last week was Ohio State by 28 over Minnesota. The final was a surprisingly close, 27-19.

Chicago Bears quarterback Bobby Douglass must think he's back in college. No quarterback in the NFL has ever run the ball as regularly as he. Douglass has piled up over 500 yards on a remarkable 7.1 average. Of course, Douglass' throwing arm is not normally confused with Joe Namath's either.

The trade which sent Philadelphia's Bill Bridges and Mel Counts (at least the 76'ers are trying) for LeRoy Ellis and John Trapp could insure the Lakers' a second straight world crown. Bridges is the burly rebounder LA needed to complement Wilt The Stilt and Happy Hairston. Counts is equal to Ellis in their roles as back-up center, so it boils down to Bridges for Trapp. With more exposure Trapp could develop in Philly, but right now it looks like the Lakers came out on top.

South Bounces Back With 20-12 Win Over Lynnfield

BY LEWIS H. FREEDMAN
Asst. Sports Editor

For a team that had the stuffing beaten out of it the week before, Newton South did a surprisingly fast resurrection job on itself in time to shock a strong Lynnfield team, 20-12, last Saturday, at Dickinson Stadium.

The Lions never looked more dead than they looked in a 47-12 loss to Stoughton, and the Colonials were 4-2 with a victory over Wayland, a team which dismembered South, 30-0. All and all the betting odds against South would have been high enough to knock the game off the card. A second depressing factor was the non-playing status of fullback Steve Bucavales, who was the only bright spot in the Stoughton debacle.

With senior Bucavales in street clothes with a bad back, and senior Ned MOAN STILL HINDERED BY A JAMMED FOOT, COACH George Winkler was forced to turn his backfield over to a trio of sophomores. Moan hobbled well enough to be returned to his old quarterback slot and the running back posts were filled by Kevin Hoban, Peter Nathanson, and Peter Maples.

The juggling act looked good from the start. In the first period Mike McDonald pounced on the first of his two fumbles recoveries on South's own 48-yard line.

Tom Sullivan carried for one yard, Moan threw an incomplete pass, and then, on third down southpaw slinger' Moan fired a 53-yard bomb to Hoban for a touchdown. 6-0 Newton South.

While Moan was looking like his 1971 self at quarterback the South running attack was beginning to bear a resemblance to the 1971 ground game, led by Howie Haines and Dave Lechhook, who are both playing college ball now. South took possession of the ball on its own 45 and Moan unleashed the three musketeers from in back of him. Nathanson scampered for 10 yards, Hoban went for 13, Maples carried for six, Maples again for seven, and Nathanson for three. Mix in a pass interference penalty and it's 12-0 South. Moan decided to get in on some of the action and carried it over himself for the two extra points and a 14-0 lead.

In the third period South upped its margin to 20-6 before turning its defense on full throttle to thwart any Lynnfield comeback attempts. The third Lion TD culminated a 90-yard drive, which featured ripping runs by Maples of 10 and 12 yards and a 14-yard completion from Moan to Hoban. Nathanson notched his second touchdown from the seven.

Offensively, South had a good day. Hoban carried three times for 21 yards, Nathanson went 13 for 47 yards and Maples attempted 15 rushes and totaled 72 yards.

Moan, whose season has been unimpeded by a persistent foot injury hit only four out of 14 passing attempts, but they went for 107 yards. Three of them were good to Hoban and the other was caught by Maples.

The South defense played one of its better games, limiting Lynnfield to 93 yards on the ground. The Lions contained Colonial back Mitch Silverstein with 43 yards in 11 carries, but were vulnerable to the pass. Quarterback Steve Olsen had a banner day, tossing 14 completions in 24 attempts for 193 yards. His chief targets were Lindsey Ross and Bill Langmaid with four catches apiece. Olsen connected with Ross on a 33-yard scoring play in the third quarter.

Coach Winkler was not as surprised as most South fans with the upset win, but he still registered a mild degree of shock. "K knew they had it in them," he said, "if only they believed in themselves. I give them a lot of credit for not quitting on themselves. I give them a lot of credit for not quitting on themselves, especially coming off a game like the Stoughton loss. They came back."

Winkler felt taht Moan's presence amidst the three sophomores had a settling effect on the backfield. "We had to play Moan at quarterback," noted Winkler. "He couldn't run with that foot of his. In this way we could utilize him for whatever he could do. I was very pleased with Maples and Nathanson. They're going to be good, but right now we just don't have an explosive back with experience. Trying to mature a backfield and a line is a difficult task."

"All the same," he continued, "I'm thrilled for the kids. Now we have to look ahead to the rest of the season, and whatever we do we can't fall behind early."

Bucavales is expected back for this week's game and should bolster the backfield, though sub fullback Walt Fatini injured his knee.

The Lion Jayvee, decimated by crippling injuries, has been forced to close up shop for the year. There just weren't enough healthy players left to put on the field.

In other league action, Bedford and Weston both won.

In other league action, Bedford and Weston both won to stay tied for the roof and set up a confrontation this Saturday. Bedford edged Wayland, 15-8, and Weston shutout Acton-Boxboro, 6-0, in a very tight league. The Lions, who are near the bottom of the standings came close to both school, falling to Bedford, 27-14 in the season's opener, and losing to Weston, 7-6.

St. Sebastian Runners Edged

Surprising Dave Walsh, competing in the shadows of teammates Rich Mulroy and John McGoldrick all season, exploded for an eight-second victory versus Browne and Nichols, but the St. Sebastian's cross-country team was edged by the Cambridge school, 28-29, at Fresh Pond, last week.

Walsh covered the 2.5 mile route in 12:55 and was followed by McGoldrick, fourth in 13:18, Mulroy, fifth in 13:22, and Dick Murphy, seventh, in 13:41 in the top 10. The key to the race, however, came in places eight through 11, which Browne and Nichols captured. Al Gondolfo was the 12th finisher, and fifth for St. Sebastian's.

The Newton-based Arrows are 7-4 in the Private School League and have one meet left. They run against Rivers Country Day School of Weston this week and come head-to-head with Newton-Dan Jones, Rivers' sophomore number one man who has been ripping up the league.

Wakefield High, paced by the fifth place finish of sophomore Kevin Crowley, totaled a low score of 82 points to cop the Massachusetts State cross-country championships, at Franklin Park, last Saturday. Stetson Arnold of Southwick High, won the individual crown with a 14:33 run over the 2.6-mile course. Westwood's Jim Kelly, the Dual County League titlist, was sixth.

Wakefield, Springfield Cathedral, and Amherst, will represent Massachusetts in the New England's, this week. Weston, the Dual County team champ, was 11th in the team race.

MIDGET STAR Andy Panaggio plays defensive end and center for the Fort Ritchie, Maryland "Mountaineers" football team that will be participating in the "EASTERN SEABOARD MIDGET FOOTBALL BOWL" game at West Haven, Connecticut on November 12th. Andy's sister Cheryl is the team mascot and the children's father Nick is the team's line coach. Andy and Cheryl's grandparents and Nick's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Panaggio, Sr. of Newton.

A Thrilling Escapade In Cross Country

By LEWIS H. FREEDMAN
"Set, Go!" The commands were given too fast and some of the runners broke late from the starting line. The beginning was a sprint to the lead.

It was no surprise among the 50 competitors which runner got to the front first. Defending Greater Boston League champion Danny Moynihan was ahead, leading a colorful pack of reds, blues, and more reds, up the first slippery hill and through the mile mark in 4:40.

Franklin Park, the New England mecca of cross-country, was muddy and slippery from the day's rain, and the temperatures never reached above 40. It was a cold day for running, not comfortable at all.

Tufts' Moynihan wore a yellow T-shirt under his turquoise school shirt, and seemed content with that. A year ago in freezing temperatures for the New England championships he had worn nylon stockings to keep his legs warm enough to keep going.

They passed two miles in 9:07 and the pack was a thin, long line behind the leaders. Moynihan had company. Two men in red wanted badly to dethrone him. Rick Rojas from Harvard and Bill Rowe from Northeastern were the threats and Moynihan recognized the danger.

Just before three miles it was Moynihan and Rojas. Rowe was now back 20 yards. It was only a matter of time before Moynihan pulled away. He was the best; he was unstoppable. He hadn't lost to a Boston runner in his last two years in Boston.

There were two races going on. The undefeated champion against the highly-rated challenger and a battle for team supremacy.

Rojas and Harvard had a deep tradition behind them. The Crimson had won the last eight league titles in a row. Nearly every time Northeastern was second. They were always close, but no matter, Harvard always came through. This year Harvard beat Northeastern, 19-35, in their annual dual meet. But Northeastern had improved since and was ready for a good fight. It was. The first 11 finishers contained Moynihan, and five each from Harvard and Northeastern.

Rojas and Moynihan battled on, step for step. They came over the final hill together, one-half mile from the finish-line, and the spectators buzzed. The sprint began. Long, even strides, matching each other over the grassy plain as a low roar of excitement built in the crowd. The specs on the horizon grew, and became forms; grew, and became human. Seventy-five yards. Rojas was one stride in front. Five miles. Twenty-five yards. One stride. And it was over and the king had been beaten. Rojas threw his arms up high in exultation. He bent over heaving, and tried to watch the rest of the race coming across.

Northeastern, Northeastern, Harvard, Harvard, Northeastern, Harvard, Northeastern, Harvard. It was close, but looked like a Northeastern victory. It was — 30-34.

Moynihan turned his back on the race and walked over to the huge tree under which he had placed his sweatshirt. He took a deep breath — it seemed as much a sigh as a gulp for air. Then he stooped, picked up the blue sweatshirt and put them on. Moynihan started walking up the concrete path away from the race — his back always turned. The writers and fans started mobbing Rojas for quotes and congratulations. Moynihan was alone. He kept walking over the hill.

The Disappointment
Moynihan is about 6-1, but he was hunched over a little and didn't look as tall as he usually does. His long hair was tied back into a pony tail and he looked tired — something he doesn't usually look after a race.

He saw me coming and smiled half-heartedly. What do you say to someone who has just lost a big race he was supposed to win?

"Not a good day, Danny." That was noncommittal. It could have been about the weather. "I wasn't as strong as I expected," he said.

"Did the cold bother you?" "No, not really," he replied. "I just didn't have a really good surge in me. I couldn't shake him. What was the time anyway?"

"23:42 and 23:43." "It was that fast?" Moynihan's best is 23:42. "He's a good runner, and he just whipped me today."

It pained him to say it. It was written in his eyes, and already he wanted another chance at him.

Moynihan turned around and walked back towards the finish-line. He talked to anybody who came up to him, congratulated the new champion, and accepted his second-place medal quietly. It was an ordeal, but the champion accepted his defeat with class.

Newton Centre Woman's Club Meet Tomorrow

The Newton Centre Woman's club will hold its monthly meeting Friday, Nov. 10 at 1:00 p.m. in the Parish House of the Greek Evangelical Church (First Church Congregational of Newton), corner of Homer and Centre Streets. Members are urged to bring friends.

Following a coffee hour and business meeting, a representative of Prince Matchabelli will explain how to become more attractive through use of "The Aziza." There will be a multi-media presentation of make-up along with a slide show. Members of the audience will participate in the demonstrations. All guests will receive a gift of perfume. Coffee hour hostesses for the event will be Miss Margaret Burns and Miss Ruth Burns. Mrs. William E. Fitzgerald is program chairman.

Monthly bridges bridges will be held on the second Tuesday of each month at the Newton Highlands starting Nov. 14 at 12:30 with Mrs. William J. Haggerty, bridge chairman.

Other events for the Woman's Club include a board meeting Nov. 7 at the home of club president, Mrs. Amos E. Kent, and a committee meeting Oct. 30 in the home of Mrs. Stanton J. Ten Breeck, Jr.

On display at City Hall in Newton is the silver shovel used to dig the first land for the recently sold Newton Woman's Clubhouse. The club donated an original photo of Newton Centre in the 1800's to Jackson Homestead, Newton's Museum. Chairs from the former clubhouse went to a small new church in New Hampshire through the courtesy of Mrs. Kent.

Shwachman Exhibition Slated In Lexington

An exhibition of black and white prints, ranging from simple pictorial scenes to complex surreal images, will be displayed at the Cary Memorial Library in Lexington during November and December.

The photographs are the work of Newton AR-TIST+PHOTOGRAPHER Irene Shwachman, whose photos are also in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Arts in New York and the Worcester Art Museum.

The subjects of the prints are interiors, still lifes, and details from nature.

Mrs. Shwachman's mastery of technique is an integral part of her work, a complex photographic vision refined through 20 years of work in the medium.

Currently an instructor of photography in Worcester Art Museum's school, she is also a participating photographer in the Polaroid Collection.

She has been consultant photographer for the Boston Redevelopment Authority and consultant in photography to the Carl Siembab Gallery in Boston.

Her one-woman exhibitions include shows at the Boston Athenaeum, the Boston Public Library, Emmanuel College, the University of New Hampshire, and a circulating exhibition of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Additional shows are scheduled for the Worcester Art Museum and Mather House at Harvard University.

on Nov. 16 or Nov. 30 to discuss the proposal.

Jackson also said that while the Authority was still interested in securing all the land at each site, it had made a specific proposal for 14,000 square feet in each parcel as aldermen had requested.

He also said that site plans have been made available.

Francis J. Quinn, executive director of the Newton Housing Authority, said Tuesday said the organization would still like to proceed in building on more than 14,000 square feet of each site and had made an "open end type offer" to the aldermen.

He explained that the sites were earmarked for housing in 1970, but a parcel of Victory Field land was later sold to the American Legion for a club house. There is 46,000 square feet of land still available at that site.

The 14,000 square foot parcel would accommodate about four units or low income family housing, Quinn said, but in securing state or federal agency approval, other factors have to be taken into account.

He explained that the costs of installing sewer, water and power at a site would be "just as much for four units as it would be for 40."

Quinn also said that he has had indications state and federal agencies would be interested in funding the project, but "going one step at a time," the next step would be for the aldermen to determine the cost of the land to be sold and the amount of land to be sold to the Authority.

Quinn also announced that the city had fulfilled its obligation to the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in the leased units category.

The city was allowed 200 units of leased housing, he said, and to date, 193 are filled. The Authority, he said, is awaiting HUD approval on another 100 units of leased housing. He also indicated that there are "quite a few" families on the waiting list for housing.

B'nai B'rith To Hear "The Status of Jews"

Chestnut Hill Chapter B'nai B'rith Women will hold their next meeting on Wed., Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. at the Newton Highlands Womens Club, Columbia St., Newton Highlands.

The short business meeting will be conducted by president, Mrs. Eli Davidson. ADL Chairman, Mrs. Alfred Knopf, will introduce the speaker of the evening, Fred Kasner, Education Director of the New England office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith who will speak on "The Status of Jews—1972."

Mr. Kasner works with campus communities, school districts, and religious and civic organizations, to develop programs consistent with the goals of the ADL.

Kasner, a 1969 graduate of Brandeis University, studied for six months in Jerusalem at Brandeis' Jacob Hiatt Institute and worked at a youth club for Oriental Jewish teenagers. He was employed by the Jewish Family and Children's Services at the Ledgewood Children's Center in Mattapan and was a teacher in East Brunswick, N.J. He also has served as a special investigator in sonar affairs for the Attorney General of New Jersey and is the author of "Justice for Migrant Workers: A Blueprint for State Action," which he prepared for the New Jersey Democratic party.

Kasner has been active in the American Civil Liberties Union and has performed with choral groups and in community theatre.

take effect, but without any salary. They can disapprove appointments by a two-thirds majority vote.

Speaking in favor of recommitment, Harrington said he supported the measure because the "appointee can't do the job and needs an assistant." "We will be adding thousands of dollars just so the mayor can have Pratt to call on when he finds his appointees can't handle the job," Harrington said.

He went on to say that the board needs answers to some of its questions before action can be taken.

The alderman also said that one of the board's biggest problems is having "things coming in here that have to be rushed through."

Alderman Louis Egelson, replied that he items have been before the board "for several months" and the question of public works reorganization "since I took office."

"The problem we face now is that the mayor feels the time has come to provide for some change in the Public Works Department."

"The mayor screened quite a few people before making his selections."

"Any further delay," Egelson continued, "would not solve any problems. I don't see any solutions coming from any future meetings."

The matter should be on the agenda tonight (Nov. 9) at the 8 p.m. Finance Committee meeting.

Meanwhile, the anticipated Oct. 31 deadline for filing the taxpayer's suite to force revaluation in the city passed without the suit being filed.

Richard J. Gelferman, attorney for the Newton group seeking the suit, said Tuesday that "there has been no change in my plans at all."

"My research is taking longer than I thought it would, but it's just a question of getting the materials together," Gelferman added.

He said he now predicted the suit would be filed within the next two weeks.

"There's no real reason to rush ahead with this anyway," he added. "It wouldn't take effect until 1973."

already tightened school budget. Parents and students may be able to raise funds to meet these needs. Various departments could enrich their programs with special material, or funds for trips and tutoring aids. Some of the houses are discussing plans to help in decorating of commons rooms in the new high school, and a scholarship program initiated last year hopes again to be funded for a graduating senior this year. A Community Resource bank of special talents or expertise is also being considered.

One of the new house chairmen notes that Newton has always been proud of its high schools, of the long traditions of good faculties and good administrators, but high standards can be upheld only by the parents' active interest in the development and aims of the schools.

Most Newton parents feel that the future of good education in Newton will rest on the expert knowledge of the educators along with the motivation for learning supplied in the home, and community discussion of educational philosophy.

Schools are changing fast. There are many parents who feel alienated, unable to understand and follow the educational procedures in the High School. There are many teachers and school administrators who feel overburdened by the pressures put upon them. The discussion of vital questions pertaining to the conduct and development of the schools is bound to be beneficial to everyone concerned.

Back-to-School-Open House is a good beginning for the needed school-home communication and all North High parents are encouraged to set aside the time and visit the school that night.

The groups will meet following the 10 a.m. worship service, from 11:15 a.m. until noon.

Three doctors will conduct one group on the subject of medical ethics and the interrupting of life processes, and dealing with such topics as birth control, abortion, transplants, and euthanasia. Group leaders will be Dr. C. B. Carpenter, Dr. Harold May, and Dr. William Holt. Another group will study the Book of Hebrews under the leadership of Dr. John Brush.

The third group, led by Mrs. Marilyn Wittrup and Associate Pastor Mike Scrogin, will focus on "Values for Tomorrow's Children" and an evaluation of the church's Christian Education program. All adults are welcome to join in any of these groups.

New Sunday Program For Methodist Church

Teh First United Methodist Church, Newton Upper Falls, will begin a new Sunday morning program starting the week of Nov. 12.

The basic change will be to have the worship services and the church school at the same time. The program will begin at 10 a.m. with everyone meeting in the sanctuary for worship.

After the first 20 minutes, children will leave for class groups and the adults will stay for the remaining of the services. The service will end at 11:15 with children coming back into the sanctuary for a final hymn.

The new schedule will allow parents to come to church while their children are in classes, and give an opportunity for people of all ages to worship together.

This Sunday the Rev. David S. Hill, pastor, will have a children's story to speak to adults on "Celebrate, Learn, Do." Talk back will follow the sermon.

David Downs, with his guitar, will teach the congregation to sing a song. Nursery care is provided during the service. Questions concerning the new program may be answered by calling Rev. Hill, 527-3964.

Arranged by Mrs. Eleanor Hinsey, director of christian education, the night will have young people and adults exploring their Christian identity, and their relationship to each other within the community of faith. The entire congregation is invited to share in this encounter.

The second dinner meeting of the Men's Club is planned for Monday, Nov. 13 at 6:30 p.m. A social period will precede the dinner, beginning at 6 p.m. in the reception room. William F. Quinn, Chief of Police of Newton, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "How the Newton Police Serve the Community."

The benevolence committee will sponsor a coffee for Rev. Francisco Semera on Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. in the reception room. Rev. Semera was formerly dean of students at Stillman University in the Philippines and is a minister of the United Church in the Philippines.

He is presently pursuing a Master's Degree in Pastoral

City Man Is Part Of Air Practice

Specialist Five Joel F. Gordon, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Gordon, 93 Truman Rd., Newton, recently took part in a 10-day army air defense command service practice at Todendorf, Germany.

Gordon is a member of battery B, 2nd battalion of the 60th air defense artillery in Ramstein, Germany.

Gordon entered the army in May 1968 and was last stationed at Ft. Riley, Kansas. He is a 1966 graduate of Newton South High School. His wife, Deborah, is with him in Germany.

Leaves-

The compost pile will recycle discarded leaves, which, when decomposed, can later be used as a valuable soil additive," he said.

The mayor urged all citizens to bring their leaves to the compost area on Sunday.

Residents in the designated school areas can put their leaves out at the curb the way they would for a rubbish pickup. The special collection is expected to begin at about 10 a.m.

Mrs. Henry Francis, chairman of Leaf Day, said that Newton's leaf recycling program needs the support of "ecologically minded volunteers if it is to succeed."

She urged anyone interested in helping collect leaves Sunday to meet at the compost site at 9:30 a.m.

Pre-school Children Class

"Exploring the Arts" classes will be available for pre-school children in Chestnut Hill and neighboring communities every Tuesday afternoon at the Chestnut Hill School, Hammond st. and Essex rd.

The basic purpose of the course is to bring young children in contact with the arts at an early age; to allow them to experience, in atmosphere of fun and participation, the world of music, art, drama and movement. Director Elsom Eldridge outlined the basic goals of the classes as being aimed at allowing each child to find expression of his ideas in a carefully guided program that accentuates the joy of accomplishments and which is directed to the age level involved.

"All children are inherently creative," Eldridge said, "and our belief is that given the right environment and the right help, this creativity can surface."

Our program is not just to expose children to the arts, but to give them a sense of importantly taking part in them; not just to see and hear, but to think and do, each to his own ability, that which he enjoys most."

Children between the ages of three and six are invited to participate. Information is available from Chestnut Hill School or by phoning 566-0445.

Certificate-

McGlennon went on to say that the Newton Conservators "have demonstrated through a wide variety of activities their concern for the environment in their community."

He cited the group's creation of a local Energy Committee, their sponsorship of a series of explorations around Newton, the support given to the city's recycling program, their study of local government issues and activities involving the environment as the type of projects that helped earn them the award.

The certificate was sent to H. Garrison Wilkes of 129 Moffatt Rd., president of the organization.

THE SKATING SCHOOL

The Charles River Ice Skating Center opens its doors this December, introducing The Skating School, an exciting year-round skating program for hockey and figure skaters of all ages and every level of experience. Professional PSQA instructors will hold daily classes in the Center's three rinks teaching Recreation, Power, and Figure Skating. The Skating School offers specialized instruction for the beginning skater who has never before been on ice, for the advanced skater, and for the intermediate skater who wishes to improve his hockey or figure techniques.

Advance scheduling of classes is taking place now. Please write The Skating School, 125 Wells Avenue, Newton, Mass. 02159 or call 969-5560 for our fully detailed brochure including prices and class schedules.

You'll never find another filet mignon dinner this fabulous for only $4.95. In fact, you may never find this one.

Filet mignon three fingers thick. A beautiful salad, Potato, breads, beverage, and even a luxurious dessert like our chocolate mint sundae.

On weekdays we get $6.95 for all that. But every Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, you can get it for only $4.95.

Our Fabulous Filet Mignon Dinner.

Of course, like anything fabulous, there's a catch: you'll have to find the Newtowne Barn. (We're hidden away inside the Newton Holiday Inn, and there's not even a sign out front to help you.)

Good luck.

The Newtowne Barn

If you're hungry enough, you'll find us.

Rap Session To Be Held At JVS Headquarters

High School students from the Greater Boston area are invited to participate in the Eighth Annual Collegiate Rap Session of the Jewish Vocational Service, at JVS headquarters, 20

Boylston St., Boston, on Friday Nov. 24, from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

"This annual program will give high school students a chance to talk with student-representatives from colleges and universities and to ask them questions about areas not covered in the college brochures: social life, academic pressures, food service, dorm life and the drug and drink scene," according to Mark Meltzer, JVS group guidance coordinator.

The major colleges and universities in the greater Boston area will be represented, as well as a number of out-of-state institutions.

Newton-Waltham Bank Offers New 4 Seasons Club Savings Plan

The 4 Seasons Club, a new idea in banking, is now being offered by the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company for the first time in this area. Giles E. Mosher, Jr., President of the Bank, has announced.

"The new 4 Seasons Club is an automatic savings plan designed to give our customers an easy, flexible way to save money for any goal," Mosher said.

The new service works like this: a customer decides on a goal, how much money he'll need and when he will need it. Then he authorizes the Bank to automatically transfer a specific amount each month, every two weeks or every week from his checking account to his 4 Seasons Club.

When the customer has reached his goal, the needed amount is withdrawn and the remainder continues the Club toward a new objective. He may make added deposits or withdrawals at any time, and daily interest of four and one-half percent is paid from day of deposit to day of withdrawal.

For instance, if the customer needs $1,000 for an August vacation, and he opens a 4 Seasons Club in November, a $100 monthly transfer will insure that he will have the money he needs when he needs it. All Club transactions including interest payments appear on the monthly checking account statement.

"Anyone who opens a 4 Seasons Club and maintains at least a dollar balance," Mosher said, "will be entitled to a free checking account. The new Club replaces the old-fashioned Christmas Club and All-Purpose Club, and we feel that it is a great improvement over these now obsolete accounts."

"Mini-Fair" Nov. 18

A "Mini-Fair" will be held at the Centenary Church, Auburndale, on Saturday, Nov. 18 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Handwork, a country store and many food and candy items will be included in the fair. There will be a luncheon of fish chowder and sandwiches at 11:30 a.m.

Appointed As Notary Public

Attorney Brian R. Merrick, 199 Waltham st., Newton, has been appointed as Notary Public. Confirmation of the new appointee was made at the State House at a meeting of the Executive Council following submission of the nomination by the governor. The term of the Newton Notary Public will expire in seven years.

Fund Raising Drive Opens

The staff of Newton High School's yearbook, the "Newtonian," has started a series of major fund raising projects by announcing "Newton High Night," to be held at Boston Garden on Dec. 2 when the Boston Celtics play the Philadelphia 76ers.

The staff of the 62nd edition of the yearbook is hoping to raise enough money to print the largest yearbook in the history of Newton High School and at the same time, lower the costs to the student—another first.

The initial goal is to sell 2,000 tickets in order to raise $4,000, about one-third of the anticipated printing costs.

Other fund raising activities will include a "Movie Night" at a local theater and a city-wide mail solicitation for friends, sponsors and patrons whose names will also appear in the yearbook.

"Spruce-Up" In Waban, Nov. 11

A Waban "Spruce-Up" will be held by the Waban Improvement Society on Sat., Nov. 11, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Helpers are urged to report to the MBTA area for assignments. They are requested to bring: gloves, rakes, gardening equipment and cartons if possible.

Bags and a few rakes will be supplied. Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. J.M. Clough, 244-2687.

To Perform

In Singers Show

Mrs. Leonard Silverman and Mrs. Gershon Rosenthal, both of Newton, will be featured soloists in performances of the Suburban Singers, a group composed of women from Hub communities.

The ladies will perform at the Boston Aid to the Blind Center in West Roxbury tonight (Thursday, Nov. 9) at 7:30 p.m., next Monday (Nov. 13) at the Sharon Community Centre, and next Tuesday (Nov. 14) at the Chateau Garod in Brookline.

Mrs. Silverman and Mrs. Rosenthal will be featured in a cantata composed by the Singers' Director, Mrs. Irving Fanger of Chestnut Hill. Other Newton women in the organization include President Mrs. Paul King and Treasurer Mrs. Benjamin Fastov.

National Book Week Brings Abundance Of Events For Kids

"Books Now! Nooks Wow!" heralds the Newton Free Library's celebration of National Book Week, November 13 - November 19, with 65 children's programs scheduled for the month, selected booklists for adults and children, and brand-new books at the Newton Free Library and its children's departments throughout the city.

"Creating Picture Book Art," will be the special feature of the Annual Book Week Party, scheduled for Nonantum branch, 144 Bridge St., of the Newton Free Library, Wednesday, Nov. 15 at 3:30 p.m.

Miss Paula Carrier, branch librarian, invited children, parents, their teachers and friends to join the festivities.

A second highlight of Book Week is the kuising of the Viking Ship weathervane atop the Auburndale branch library, Wednesday, November 15 at 3 p.m. Refreshments and a film program will follow the ceremony. Children's branch librarian, Mrs. Judy Ford, anticipates a large turnout for this special Book Week program.

The Main Library (Chaffin Hall) will feature a Family Film Program, Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7 p.m. with "The Lively Art of Picture Books," "Curious George Rides A Bike," and "Mike Mulligan and His Steam Shovel," scheduled for viewing.

Thirty-three children's books, chosen for their excellence in graphic design, will be a featured exhibit at the Nonantum branch. This display includes illustrations and text describing the process of graphic book design from the original art work to the final product.

Special story hours, films and creativity programs are in process at all branches during November. Library Lowdown, Newton Free Library's monthly publication of news and information includes dates, times and places, and is available at your nearest library.

In addition, fencers will attack, parry and stop-thrust during a demonstration of the ancient art and modern sport of fencing at the Newton Free Library, 414 Newton St., Newton Corner, Tuesday, Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

Using a foil, epee, and sabre, women and men from the New England Division of the Amateur Fencer's League of America and from Massachusetts Institute of Technology will present demonstration of skill and strategy.

Eric T. Sollee, fencing coach at MIT and St. Paul's Rehabilitation Center, will explain what makes a good offense and defense, how a fencer thinks on his feet, the scoring, and techniques.

"Fencing is a combat sport where you can get hit, but not hurt, and where men can participate against women. It is a game of speed, skill, and finesse rather than of brute strength," Sollee said.

One of the eight original Olympic sports, fencing is a learned rather than an instinctive sport that demands intellectual as well as physical ability. The skilled fencer acquires proficiency in exercising the various techniques of offense and defense and in judging distances.

Sollie brings 22 years of experience to his role as demonstrator and narrator at the Newton Free Library's evening of fencing. He was New England Amateur Fencing Champion in foil, served as committee chairman for the New England Intercollegiate Fencing Association, and fenced for the New York Athletic Club. He became a professional fencer in 1971.

A short film on fencing, narrated by Haywood Brown and previously shown on CBS, also is scheduled for the Newton Free Library evening program. Books on fencing, weapons and photographs will be on display.

The Newton Free Library invites interested people to this family program which will appeal to all ages. Simple refreshments will be served.

Hospital To Honor Two Local Residents

In recognition of 12 years of dedicated service to Beth Israel Hospital, two Newton men will be publicly welcomed as honorary trustees at the hospital's 57th annual meeting and brunch Sunday (Nov. 12).

They are David S. Bond and Henry G. Cohen.

Bond, a graduate of Harvard University, has concentrated much of his time and effort in the hospital's home care program. He has also long been active with the Combined Jewish Philanthropies and has served as a member of its executive committee and as chairman of the business men's trades and professions division.

Bond and his wife Marion live in West Newton. Mrs. Bond is a former president of the Boston Chapter of Hadassah and a member of the national board. She is a life member and a friend of the maternity unit of the Beth Israel Women's Auxiliary.

Supporting Beth Israel Hospital is a family tradition for the Cohens.

Cohen's son-in-law, Bert Paley, is one of six new trustees to be introduced at the annual meeting too. His daughter Marjorie is a life member of the hospital and there are two family members on the medical staff, Dr. Earl Kasdon in the Pathology Dept. and Dr. David Kasdon is a surgical resident. Cohen is an honorary trustee of the CJP.

Dr. William J. Bicknell, commissioner of health for the Commonwealth, will be the guest speaker at the dinner. Reservations can be made individually, or in group for tables of 10, by calling the development office, 734-4400 ext. 431.

Church Fair, Nov. 10-11

The Women's Society of Christian Service will hold "Come to the Fair," at the Newton Methodist Church, Langely Rd., Newton Centre, on Nov. 10 and 11.

The Fair which will be made up of numerous shops, will have an abundant stock of attractive gifts and useful creations for sale.

The Christmas shop will consist of: holiday decorations, wreaths, floral arrangements etc. and will be headed by Mrs. Byrl Leonard, Mrs. Norman Ferguson and Mrs. Victor Baer.

Homemade cakes, pies, clikies, jelly and candy will make up the Food and Candy Shop, which will be headed by Mrs. Hoyt Hallas and Mrs. George Harlan.

Other tables at the fair will be: Antiques, headed by Mrs. Ralph Emery and Mrs. Denton Nutter; Aprons Shop, headed by Albert MacMillan; White Elephant, headed by Miss Louise Harris; Gift Shop, headed by Mrs. Peter Mackintosh and Plants, headed by Mrs. Leonard.

As an added attraction, a luncheon will be served on both days.

City Art Assn. To Hold Show

The Newton Art Association will hold a Holiday Art Show, Saturday, Nov. 18, at the Workshop-Women's Club of Newton Highlands, 72 Columbus St.

The show, which will take place between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., will be headed by committee ebers: Eugene Faucher, Ruth Palmer, Barbara Baron, Martha O'Brien, Angelo Urso, Ann Annunziata, Emilie Sheehan, Russell Monto and Joseph Droucher.

The Newton Art Association is a non-profit organization that meets every first and third Thursdays of the month, October through May. Programs are varied and include demonstrations in all media by outstanding New England artist critiques and lectures.

Boston Company To Perform Play

The Boston Repertory Theatre Company will perform, "The Thirteen Clocks", at the Meadowbrook Junior High School, Wheeler rd., Newton Centre, on Sunday Nov. 26 at 1:30 p.m.

The play, which is sponsored by the Creative Arts Committee for the Newton Schools will cost $1. for admission. For further information and tickets call 332-6747.

TOP 100—For the third successive year, Francis Fletcher, innkeeper of the Holiday Inn of Newton has been chosen as one of the "Top 100 Innkeepers" in a competition which rated some 1430 Holiday Inn locations throughout the world. Mrs. Fletcher has been Innkeeper of the 200 room Newton property for four years and prior to that, she held the same position at the Holiday Inn of Framingham.

Jewish Theatre Receives Grant From Jewish Life

Dick Goldberg, Producer of The National Jewish Theatre, announces the award of $2500 grant from The Institute for Jewish Life. The grant aids in set-up costs for the new professional Equity Theatre company, based in Boston.

The Institute for Jewish Life, under the direction of Dr. Leon Jick, is a new instrument established by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds concerned solely with the encouragement of innovative experiments and demonstrations, and developing new models to strengthen the quality of Jewish life in North America.

Ralph Lapidus, a spokesman for the Institute stated: "Our support and endorsement of The National Jewish Theatre signifies our commitment to quality in the Arts, and our trust that the Theatre will contribute to the enrichment of Jewish art and culture in many communities. We are particularly pleased to support this initiative by young men and women, who represent the renewal of Jewish consciousness among our youth."

Kaplan Elected Board Chairman

Martin Kaplan, 165 Upland Rd., Waban, was recently elected chairman of the Board of Trustees at the Charles River Academy.

Kaplan, who is a graduate of Columbia University and Harvard Law School, is currently a partner of the firm of Hale and Dorr, Boston.

Charles River Academy is an inter-urban school for adolescent boys with learning problems. The meeting took place in the School's five-day dormitory, 7 Clinton St. Cambridge.

Competition For Youth Concert

An open competition for a guest soloist for the Youth Concert to be held on Dec. 9, at 1:30 and 3 p.m. was announced by Michel Sasson, music director of the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

The competition is open to any youth residing in Newton or enrolled in the Newton or System. The auditions will be held on Sunday, Nov. 26 at 7 p.m. at Meadowbrook Junior High School. All students who are interested should contact Lisa DeleCese at 536-2182.

Expect Approval For Appointments

Another round in the debate over Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann's controversial appointments to the Public Works Department is expected at the Nov. 20 meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

His choices were discussed and voted on last week at meetings of the aldermanic Finance and Public Works committees. The Finance Committee voted to approve; Public Works' vote was a tie.

Mann has decided to make Richard Dudman's appointment as director of Public Works a temporary appointment, a move that removes Dudman from needing aldermanic approval for at least six months.

The mayor, under the charter is allowed to make two temporary appointments, initially for three months with a three month extension possible. Dudman's salary will be taken from the Public Works Dept. budget and no appropriation will be needed from the Board of Aldermen.

Objection to Mann's choices, Dudman and John J. Carroll of Dedham asst. director, and the proposal to switch current Director of Public Works Willard S. Pratt to the post of Water Commissioner, have centered mainly on Dudman.

Aldermen have also questioned the need for the creation of the position of assistant superintendent of public works, earmarked for Carroll, and the additional necessity of keeping Pratt in the background.

Mann's vision of the operation, as he has described it, is to use Dudman as the "idea man" and Carroll as the implementer. Once "service is improved and costs are cut," the mayor says, Dudman would bow out and Carroll would take over.

The aldermanic Public Works Committee, chaired by Ald. Joseph McDonnell, has questioned Dudman's qualifications. McDonnell pointed out that when the city advertised nationally for a successor to Pratt, one of the requirements was a degree in engineering. Dudman does not have one.

The alderman has also pointed out that among the 25 or more resumes received were those from the street commissioner of Philadelphia, Pa., and a public works official from Torrington, Conn.

Mann explained that many of the applicants were ruled out because they sought contracts for a definite period of time. He said the man from Philadelphia wanted a two-year contract and "many wanted a long term contract."

He said he could not guarantee a special specific length of time because his successors as mayor might decide to appoint other people to the positions.

"While some aldermen are critical," Mann said, "this is still the first step that has been taken in many years to put into effect many of the recommendations made in a number of studies."

"People, when they are running for office," he continued, "talk about these reports and all they're doing is gathering dust on a shelf."

"We certainly need the best kind of management we can get. Dedham has been most helpful to me in the past several months on environmental problems, and Carroll is a man I hope we will still be able to get for this job."

Asked about last week's report that he was considering going to court for an order compelling the Board of Aldermen to vote, Mann said the writ had not been "completely ruled out."

"The city solicitor will advise me on what is to be done," he said.

The problem of needing a two-thirds majority vote for funding the remaining appointments has also been taken care of by making the salaries part of a supplemental appropriation instead of a transfer of funds.

Hearing Is This Morning

A hearing on Newton's telephone service is scheduled to be held this morning (Nov. 16) at 10 a.m. in the Newton City Hall aldermanic chambers.

The Department of Public Utilities agreed to hold the hearing after being asked by the city to give residents an opportunity to air their complaints.

Newton, according to a study by the Arthur D. Little company, rates among the poorest areas served in the state.

After the study was made public, city officials asked that residents submit their complaints in written form.

Catalogue and inventory all types of teaching and learning material; maintain teaching tools; inform teachers and pupils of new developments in teaching technology; provide space for teachers and students both to try various teaching media; serve as a comprehensive learning laboratory.

With the use of slides, Lynn demonstrated how the rooms at Warren could be rearranged to accommodate the IMC. Part of the ground floor, for instance, would be sealed off to create a library for the community (the public could enter through a back door which already exists). On the first level, Lynn conceived of a 250-seat auditorium, to replace the "inadequate theatre" currently in use.

Mann replied that "because of my concern with all aspects of our community, particularly wage earners and senior citizens, and to assure the fullest possible consideration of the subject, I have appointed members associated with such organizations as the League of Women Voters, Newton Taxpayers Association, Board of Aldermen, Mass. Taxpayers Association, plus others with expertise in law and real estate."

"Because of your interest and concern with the problem of the entire city, I thought your particular appointment would be most helpful."

Ald. Bullwinkle also charged that he was the only resident of the north side of the city on the committee and Mann replied that "more than half the committee was from the north side of the city."

On Bullwinkle's objection to the group's closed-door policy,

Attitude On Investigation Criticized By Fishman

State Senator Irving Fishman charged this week that the state banking commissioner is trying to halt his investigation by claiming his inquiry "shakes public faith in the banking industry."

The Newton senator, chairman of the committee investigating the Wakefield Surety Bank closing, leveled charges last week that three other banks are "in trouble" and "nothing is being done" about it. The banks were not named.

State Banking Commissioner Freda Koplow held a press conference last Friday and denounced Fishman's allegations as being "irresponsible."

Fishman issued a statement following the press conference maintaining that "the commissioner (Mrs. Koplow) continues to take the position she is responsible only to the banking industry, but I feel she also has a responsibility to the banking public."

Citing the Surety Bank failure, the state senator said that his committee is "charged with the responsibility of determining if anything could have or should have been done to prevent this very unfortunate occurrence which has done more to undermine public confidence in the banking industry than anything which could come out of a free and open inquiry into the matter."

"The commissioner seeks to prevent us from inquiring into her past and present actions under the excuse that such an inquiry shakes the public faith in the banking industry," Fishman went on to say.

Mrs. Koplow had said at her press conference that the senator's charges brought a "great number" of calls from the public who were anxious to inquire about the condition of the bank they have where they deposit. Banks, she said, also received a number of inquiries.

Fishman also decried Mrs. Koplow's failure to appear at the Nov. 1 public hearing held before his committee, the Joint Legislative Committee on Banks and Banking.

He said Dep. Commissioner Edward Flynn, testifying at the hearing, said Surety's "most serious losses occurred in February and March of 1972."

Fishman pointed out that this was "a period of over two months following the commissioner's Nov. 22, 1971, meeting with these directors at which time she imposed certain restrictions on the activities of the bank and its management."

Balance sheets of Surety Bank, Fishman continued, indicating a very serious condition, were published in local papers in January, 1972, and "the commissioner took no action."

"If the public is aware of these situations, they can at least protect themselves," he stated. Fishman further charged that Mrs. Koplow is "attempting to

Resignation Accepted "Reluctantly"

Mayor Theodore D. Mann Monday "Reluctantly" accepted the resignation of Alderman Richard J. Bullwinkle from his advisory panel on reevaluation.

The alderman, who submitted a letter of resignation last week, stated that he did not feel the committee was "representative of the Newton community at large" and that he disagreed with its policy of holding closed meetings.

Mann replied that "because of my concern with all aspects of our community, particularly wage earners and senior citizens, and to assure the fullest possible consideration of the subject, I have appointed members associated with such organizations as the League of Women Voters, Newton Taxpayers Association, Board of Aldermen, Mass. Taxpayers Association, plus others with expertise in law and real estate."

"Because of your interest and concern with the problem of the entire city, I thought your particular appointment would be most helpful."

Ald. Bullwinkle also charged that he was the only resident of the north side of the city on the committee and Mann replied that "more than half the committee was from the north side of the city."

On Bullwinkle's objection to the group's closed-door policy, the mayor said that the committee is a volunteer group that reports to him.

"I'm reluctant to have people become upset unnecessarily over this issue," the mayor said. "Many questions will be asked and this issue is an emotional one."

He said the committee report will be made public when it goes to the Board of Aldermen.

Mann, in his letter, concluded: "Our objective, for both the executive branch and the legislative branch, is to meet the requirements of the state law on reevaluation with fair and equitable treatment of all citizens in our city."

Right now, Miss Forbes says she is looking forward to going home to England next year. "America is for the very young now," she explained.

Miss Allen, former director of Christian Education of Sharon, visits her "CLIENT," AS THEY ARE CALLED, ABOUT THREE TIMES A MONTH. She chats, cheers, and does errands.

Her years of service were recently rewarded in the now annual fair in which the clients "turned the tables" on the volunteers and treat them to games, food and gifts.

This year, Miss Allen was the big winner of the prize drawing, winning a donated diamond ring.

Well, Miss Forbes, recounted, her father heard from his uncle in India.

Would he care to come and run the plantation? Yes, he decided he would and adventurous Ella was in agreement.

Mrs. Forbes later invested some of her own money in land in the Philippines, and the family spent some time living there. Plus, when she reached the proper age, Miss Forbes was sent to England for "finishing."

The culmination of her studies, her "coming out," was in her case presentation at court to King Edward VII.

She later went home to India and eventually was engaged as a tutor for the 16-year-old princess of Mandi State. The young princess, Mrs. Forbes recalled, was a ward of the state. Ensnared in the province's summer palace, Miss Forbes spent five years tutoring the princess, who was not allowed to go anywhere without her.

Without her, Miss Forbes, recounted, how her aristocratic Irish father managed to meet her aristocratic Philadelphia mother at the time of the Civil War.

Her father, James L. Forbes, was in Paris with his brother, she explained, when the pair received word their own father had died in a riding accident and their mother wished them to come home to Ireland.

Since the idea of going home did not appeal to him, she said, her father decided to come to America and arrived in time for part of the Civil War. He arrived in Boston and enlisted in the union army, serving with the 13th Massachusetts Infantry.

Wounded while campaigning in Pennsylvania, Forbes was tended, bandaged and fed the standard hot soup by a young girl named Ella. Ella became Mrs. Forbes, and then came the decision on what Forbes would do next.

School Committee

Media Value Debated

By RICHARD D. HULL

The Newton School Committee Monday night was treated to an explanation of the use of the media in educational instruction at Warren Junior High School. The meeting featured demonstrations of contemporary equipment, slide projections of a proposed Materials Center which would embrace technological resources for academic use, and personal opinions of individual Board members concerning the traditional approach to teaching as opposed to machine-dominated learning processes.

The session spotlighted Thomas J. Lynn, Warren principal, who had prepared a lengthy report on the philosophy behind "multi-media approach to learning" and an outline describing the function of 10 separate modern devices currently utilized in his classrooms.

He had invited the School Committee to hold its bi-weekly meeting at Warren to contrast the present layout of the building's rooms and the changes which might be effected if his Instructional Materials Center (IMC) is constructed.

Lynn's report featured quotes from scholarly essays and articles which "document the need for all-media literacy," he stated.

"The student is still being processed in classrooms operating on the postulates of another day,"

"The new learner," complained Lynn, "who is a product of the all-at-once electronic environment, often feels out of it in a linear, one-thing-at-a-time school environment. The total environment is now the great teacher; the student has competence models against which to measure the effectiveness of his teachers."

This statement was later challenged by School Committee Member Richard M. Douglas.

However, it was used by Lynn as part of a rationale for the trust of his IMC Plan: "We can confidently predict a continued trend toward interdisciplinary planning, teaching, and learning. In short, our present facility now requires radical 'surgery' in order to meet this end," the Principal maintained.

"Simply stated," he concluded, "Warren must develop an expanded and comprehensive Instructional Materials Center."

Lynn went on to list many of the highlights of the proposed renovation and the IMC's impact upon the junior high school and the community. His center would, among other things, provide these services to teachers, students, and in some cases, to the public:

Catalogue and inventory all types of teaching and learning material; maintain teaching tools; inform teachers and pupils of new developments in teaching technology; provide space for teachers and students both to try various teaching media; serve as a comprehensive learning laboratory.

With the use of slides, Lynn demonstrated how the rooms at Warren could be rearranged to accommodate the IMC. Part of the ground floor, for instance, would be sealed off to create a library for the community (the public could enter through a back door which already exists). On the first level, Lynn conceived of a 250-seat auditorium, to replace the "inadequate theatre" currently in use.

Miss Allen, former director of Christian Education of Sharon, visits her "CLIENT," AS THEY ARE CALLED, ABOUT THREE TIMES A MONTH. She chats, cheers, and does errands.

Her years of service were recently rewarded in the now annual fair in which the clients "turned the tables" on the volunteers and treat them to games, food and gifts.

This year, Miss Allen was the big winner of the prize drawing, winning a donated diamond ring.

Well, Miss Forbes, recounted, how her aristocratic Irish father managed to meet her aristocratic Philadelphia mother at the time of the Civil War.

Her father, James L. Forbes, was in Paris with his brother, she explained, when the pair received word their own father had died in a riding accident and their mother wished them to come home to Ireland.

Since the idea of going home did not appeal to him, she said, her father decided to come to America and arrived in time for part of the Civil War. He arrived in Boston and enlisted in the union army, serving with the 13th Massachusetts Infantry.

Wounded while campaigning in Pennsylvania, Forbes was tended, bandaged and fed the standard hot soup by a young girl named Ella. Ella became Mrs. Forbes, and then came the decision on what Forbes would do next.

Chatting With Old Friends

By CYNTHIA BLACK

June Allen and Mary Forbes are old friends.

They originally became acquainted through the Companions Unlimited program of the Women's Industrial Union.

Miss Allen of Newtonville said she heard an advertisement seeking volunteers for the program four years ago and decided to offer her services.

That was how she met Miss Forbes, an engaging lady of 96 who, world travels ended, came to live in Newton a few years ago.

Miss Forbes, born and raised on a tea plantation in India in the late 1800's, lived, at various intervals in her life, in England, the Philippines and the United States. She counts among her experiences a presentation at court, tutor to an Indian princess, and writer for the Calcutta daily paper.

Part English and part American, Miss Forbes, when interviewed recently, recalled how her aristocratic Irish father managed to meet her aristocratic Philadelphia mother at the time of the Civil War.

Old Foot Soldiers Missed . . .

Fear UF Losses Will Follow Breakdown In Recruitment Of House-to-House Collectors

Wondered whether you were out when the door-to-door solicitor called for the 1972 United Fund drive? Wondered whether you were too absorbed in household chores and didn't hear the door bell ring? Wondered whether the door bell's working?

Drop any worries you may have been entertaining along those lines if you live in suburbs like Westwood, Needham, Newton, Dedham, Wellesley, Natick and other neighboring towns.

This year the door-to-door solicitor—the hard-working, bottom-of-the-ladder foot soldier—who helped to bring out the cheers at the end of the annual UF drives is just about non-existent in these parts. What impact his or her almost complete absence will have on the final returns will not be known until well into the evening on Wednesday when the campaign is scheduled to end officially.

What happened

What happened to the dependable foot soldier or the devoted door-to-door collector this year?

Fund officials have been reluctant to talk about it but it was apparent to observers less effective efforts were made to organize and recruit door-to-door collectors than in the past. Some observers blamed most of the trouble on the adoption by the organization of a regional set-up replacing the purely local community operations of the past.

The local groups realized the importance of the door-to-door collector and the captains or directors who lined them up. In many communities the collectors organizations were set and ready weeks before the UF began its official announcements of a coming campaign.

Westwood Blast

Very often the volunteers who made up the collecting forces were veterans of several campaigns who travelled the same streets and met the same people year after year.

Indications of woes this year began to crop up some time ago. They probably gained full volume last week when the publicity chairwomen for Westwood's U.F. drive resigned their posts because they were upset, they said, by the recruitment lac of door-to-door collectors.

At the time of their resignations only about $3500 had been received toward a goal set at $13,000 for Westwood. This year in Needham UF officials passed up previous recruitment methods early in the campaign. The local chapter of the Red Cross, always a big factor in the special gifts category collections was asked to play a wider role. Because of its lack of facilities and manpower the Red Cross was obliged to wave aside any prospect of participating in the nitty-gritty door-to-door collections.

Needham has usually been able to reach around a total of gifts of $42,000 to $45,000 with full implementation of the important aid received from the town's old Needham Community Council. With a week to go about a quarter of that Needham total had been reached.

Most of the contributions received up to last week end by the UF from suburbs in this area are from special categorial set-ups like municipal offices, schools and special gifts.

Seeking to make up some of the losses brought by the virtual naivure of the house-to-house collector organizations in the various communities, the Newton regional office of the UN was planning at the inception of the weekend to conduct a mail campaign in the various neighborhoods.

Working from names and addresses of card files of past contributors it was planned to send out letters of appeal.

Now effective such letters would be as compared with the personal calls at the door remained to be seen.

Newton, on the other hand, has pledged almost $10,000 more in 1972 than at the same time last year. The exact figure is $9,100.

The city has reached about 64 per cent of its goal and although the drive ended Wednesday, additional funds are turned in until the end of the year.

GOP "Disappointed" But "Not Discouraged"

Newton Republicans may be disappointed with local election results but they are not discouraged, according to Julius L. Masow, Newton Republican City Committee chairman.

Masow today expressed the organization's "deep thanks to all our GOP candidates, workers, and contributors". Masow also extended congratulations to the winners, stating that "we will be found cooperative and willing to join in all efforts in behalf of good government".

"Of course", he noted, "we are delighted with the nearly 30,000 votes cast in Newton for senator Edward W. Brooke. Adm President Nixon did much better here than in 1968".

Masow stated, "there are many factors responsible for the outcome. But we do know that the GOP offered attractive candidates. No contest went unchallenged in the area and our candidates carried on effective campaigns. This is reflected in the substantial votes received by them."

"Another thing that is noteworthy is that Newton Republicans worked hard at all levels, giving generously of their time, effort, and money. We are deeply grateful to all of them."

"Also significant is the number of younger men and women who were involved in the city's Republican campaigns. This is most encouraging and significant and I feel their presence and interest offers well founded hope for the future, for growth and vigorous leadership", Masow concluded.

Candy Sale Will Start Tomorrow

The Annual Camp Fire Girls Candy sale in Newton gets underway Friday (Nov. 17).

Girls ages 8 to 17 will become "supersaleswomen" to help balance the budget of the Greater Boston Council of Camp Fire Girls in this 10-day, once a year drive.

Every girl will be eligible to win campership tuition credits to be used for attendance at the Camp Fire Girls day or resident camp of her choice next summer.

Mrs. Leslie Blicher and Mrs. Israel Abrams have accepted chairmanship of the annual drive.

Attention is called to the fact this year, as last, Camp Fire Girls will have three varieties of candy: assorted chocolates, almond delights and chocolate mint patties, all by Russell Stover. Many families like to stockpile these handy boxes for gift giving and holiday treats. This solves many shopping problems while helping a good cause.

Camp Fire Girls provides some 10,000 girls throughout the Council with a program that combines fun and learning in an organization where neighbor race, creed, not economic status stand in the way of an experience designed to promote individual talent and group cooperation.

Look for the Camp Fire Girl in the red, white and blue service costume.

Woman Voters To Discuss Ecology Role

The Environmental Quality Committee of the Newton League of Women Voters will discuss the federal government's role in the management of solid waste with league members in discussion units to be held Nov. 15, 16, and 17.

The committee under the leadership of Mary Adelstein is involved in a two year study of solid waste management. Last year the committee and league members discussed: the magnitude of solid waste in Newton; Newton's local waste disposal system and pioneering recycling efforts in other communities.

The committee researched special areas such as composting, paper recycling, packaging, incineration and reclamation techniques. This year in studying the national economic factors in the saving of solid waste the league researchers learned that even in Massachusetts where salvage is more acceptable and more profitable than other areas, only a small fraction of salvageable waste is reclaimed.

In Newton, where there is an ordinance requiring householders to save and bundle newspapers, less than one quarter of the papers consumed in Newton are salvaged. This is considered a fairly good return. This amount added to the much smaller amounts of newsprint contributed by other municipalities, has softened the market for waste paper.

In an Everett scrap yard, is a pile of steel ("tin") cans, collected in part from Newton. This accumulation of 20 tons caught fire and fused into a useless monument.

The Newton League has been unable to find mimeograph paper made from recycled fibres which they felt they could afford. They continue to use paper made from virgin pulp because it is two-thirds the price.

Our economy encourages this prodigality. There are federal policies which could contribute to waste production: depletion allowances for extractive industries, bargain-rate timbering of federal lands, freight rates set by the ICC which are two to four times more for virgin materials. These will be discussed at units along with the possibility of federal subsidy of recycling.

Members of Mrs. Adelstein's committee are Mary Morrison, Linda Tracy, Betsy Lewenberg, Helen Jackson, Jill Orner, Priscilla Leith, Elizabeth Lieberman, Beverly Zwinn, and Esther Rosenthal.

All league members are urged to attend one of the meetings to consider and decide policies for prudent use of material resources. The schedule of unit meetings, to which the public is cordially invited, follows: Morning meetings are from 9:15 to 11:30, luncheon meeting is from 12:00 to 2:00, and evening meetings are from 8:00 to 10:00.

Wed. morning, Nov. 15, at the First Baptist Church, 848 Beacon St., Newton Centre, babysitting provided, please park behind the church, enter the lot from Centre St. Wed. luncheon at the home of Carole Fischberg, 10 Brunham Rd., West Newton, Wed. evening at the home of June Rosenberg, 131 Sargent St., Newton.

Thurs. evening, Nov. 16, at the home of Patricia Kewness, 160 Allen Ave., Waban, Fri. morning, Nov. 17 at the Auburndale Congregational Church, 64 Hancock St., Auburndale, baby sitting provided, please park in the lot behind the church.

For further information call the units call Mary Morrison, 527-5503. For further information about the league call Marsha Slotnick, 241-6268.

Free Diabetic Test Given To Newton Area Residents

The Waltham Diabetic Association during "Diabetes Month" (November) is informing the public more fully about the disease and are conducting free test to discover "hidden diabetics" living in Waltham and Newton unaware they have the disease."

The "Dreypak" tests, which will be distributed free of charge by Massachusetts pharmacists this month, are to be self-administered in the home. Procedure involves wetting a piece of sensitized paper with urine, allowing it to dry, and mailing it, in the addressed envelope provided, to the Greater Boston Diabetes Society.

Elderly Seminar Set Dec. 3

A seminar on the problems of the elderly will be held at the Jewish Community Center, 50 Sutherland Rd., Brookline, on Sunday, Dec. 3.

All phases of paramount interest and concern will be discussed in resolving the betterment of living conditions for the senior citizens. The problem of housing, health benefits, social security and legislation will be taken up at the meeting.

The panel will include: Jack Leff, secretary for the Elder Affairs; Isadore Morantz, executive secretary, commission for the handicapped; Murray Reiser, former Suffolk County assistant district attorney and Harry Hartog, president of the public service lodge of B'nai B'rith.

THANK YOU

I SINCERELY THANK ALL OF YOU WHO WORKED, SUPPORTED AND VOTED FOR ME IN MY RECENT CAMPAIGN FOR ELECTION TO THE STATE SENATE. New MDC Skating Policies

The MDC recently announced two new policies concerning skating rinks for this season. The Commission stated that there will be free skating for everybody from 9 a.m. to noon every Saturday at all MDC rinks.

They also announced that there will be free ice time for public and parochial school for recreational skating in connection with physical education classes. Hockey will not be permitted.

The MDC's fully-enclosed rinks in East Boston, Cambridge, Arlington, Revere and Somerville are no in operation. The other 16 rinks will open Sat. Nov. 18 weather permitting. Four new enclosed rinks nearing completion re expected to be on in time for Christmas vacation, Dec. 26.

Schools wishing to obtain free ice time for physical education classes are asked to call the MDC recreation division. The school must supply their own physical education supervisors.

Committee Summary

A summary of Board of Aldermen committee action includes:

Franchises and Licenses: An ordinance banning racial and ethnic discrimination in the city was approved by the committee on a 7-0 vote. It follows the earlier adopted anti-discrimination policy proposed by the committee and approved by aldermen which states: all Newton officers, board, committees, commission and employees which have the authority to grant, deny or revoke licenses or charters shall actively utilize their authority to prevent any person, corporation or business firm from discrimination because of race, religion, sex, color, national origin or ancestry, or from participating in any practice which may have a disparate effect on any minority group within the population."

The ordinance is intended to exempt organizations based on religious or ethnic heritage.

Land Use: The committee will recommend approval of Kimon Serafos proposed five-unit apartment building at 135 Warren St., Newton Centre, and will recommend denial of 32-units of luxury apartments proposed by Kingston Realty Trust in Newton Centre.

The policy of requiring developers to give some units to the Newton Housing Authority for subsidized housing is also expected to come up for re-examination at the Board of Aldermen's meeting Nov. 20.

Another mayoral appointment, this time to the Planning Board, came under fire at the Land Use Committee meeting. Mayor Theodore D. Mann has proposed Sharon F. Francis, former aide to Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, to fill the term of Norman Bookbinder who resigned from the Planning Board. Her qualifications were questioned and the item was held for further study.

City's Buses Are Damaged Again

For the second time Newton police have received reports of Newton student bus riders damaging the new school buses.

A window was pushed out of the bus on the Aurburndale run and broken, according to a spokesman for the Metropolitan Coach Company, Belmont, which holds the city contract for school bus transportation.

He said the incident occurred between 2:30 and 3 p.m. but was unable to identify the youth or youths involved.

Several weeks ago students damaged a bus on the Aurburndale line so badly that it was put out of service for six weeks.

On that bus, windows were smashed, seats were slashed and a door was badly bent, according to a school spokesman.

The buses involved are part of a new order purchased this year from the Metropolitan Coach Company for use in Newton. The current damage is under investigation by the Newton police.

Leaf Composting Open All Week

The leaf composting site on Beacon St. between Beethoven and Walnut St., Newton, is now open on weekdays as well as weekends.

On weekends monitoring at the site is done by volunteers recruited through the efforts of the Mayor's advisory committee on environmental affairs. The advantages to a composting program are: less wear on the municipal incinerator; a saving on the limited landfill area; less air pollution and it produces ideal soil additive and mulch.

Recycling of glass, cans, paper and plastics is continuing at the Rumford Ave. and Eliot St.

Commonwealth Indebtedness Over One Billion

Massachusetts' bonded indebtedness nears the one and a half billion dollar mark, State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane noted today in his latest monthly financial report.

Treasurer Crane reported that as of Nov. 1, the Commonwealth's bonded indebtedness was $1,479,802,000. A year ago it was $1,263,297,000. The state's cash balance at the end of October, Treasurer Crane's report shows, was $59.9 million, as contrasted with September's cash balance of $68 million.

The cash balance decrease resulted from disbursements exceeding the month's receipts by $8 million, with total receipts amounting to $455.9 million and total disbursements reaching $464. million.

Immigrant Rate New York—More than 40 million aliens have entered the U.S. since the year 1776.

BY YOUR LEAF — The city's first Leaf Day last Sunday proved to be a tremendous success. A small army of 100 volunteers, 50 men, 22 trucks and a bulldozer, worked from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. collecting leaves for city compost pile. All workers were treated to a box lunch and refreshments from Colonel Sander's, Tony's Italian Villa, the Kiwanis, Rotary and Summer Cook. Compost produced from the pile will be used by the city on playgrounds and in other municipal areas. Residents will also have a chance to reap their rewards.

Grading Procedure Modified At Bigelow

The School Committee gave its approval this week to a modification of the report card procedure of "Cluster A" at Bigelow Junior High School, following submission of the proposal to Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink and a description of the change by Bigelow Principal Robert V. Frost.

Five so-called "Clusters" exist at the school, each with about 100 pupils and four or five teachers, in an innovative routine established this fall. Seventh Grade Cluster A's teachers, Barbara Howell, James Miller, Barbara Moynihan, and Robert Provencher, last month proposed a revamping of the student evaluation procedures, replacing the first and third of four report cards with individual parent-teacher conferences.

The foursome feels it would improve their students' education for the following reasons:

By bridging more effectively the gap between the evaluative process employed in the elementary schools and those used at Bigelow; helping students and parents understand grading at Bigelow; helping to build one-to-one communications between parents and teachers; and by enabling parents to understand how the team can help their children.

Under the adopted system, each basic-studies teacher would handle the conferences for one homeroom grouping, and individual conferences would be scheduled through appointment forms, allowing a choice of time and date. In some cases conferences would include students as well as parents.

Letter grades will still be issued for terms 2 and 4 to the parents of Cluster A's pupils. The teachers submitted copies of their proposal to the parents who would be concerned with the conferences. Frost stated the group had received 18 favorable and two negative comments to the idea.

The teachers also discussed their new evaluation approach with 50 sets of parents and got generally favorable reactions. Parents learned that Cluster A instructors would render January and June letter grades in basic studies (English, Social Studies, Math and Science), in report card form as usual. The fall and spring grades of these subjects will be replaced by individual parent-teacher conferences.

Frost expressed his enthusiasm for the project before the School Committee. Member Alvin Mandell noted that this type of evaluation process "would require a good deal more work, not less" from the instructors.

At the conferences, which would last about 20 or 30 minutes, according to Frost, each teacher will prepare an inventory of activities and skills for every student, which will be summarized and explained to the parents.

Police Keep Close Watch On Druggists

Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department announced that the program of police officers signing in at drug stores has allayed many of the fears of local druggists as far as hold-ups are concerned.

The chief said, "Another factor has been the arrest of three alleged hold-up men, accused of robbing a Newton drug store."

One Newton pharmacist, preferring to remain anonymous, stated: "I am quite pleased with the officers and detectives dropping by and it gives us a feeling of confidence. However, it would be better if we could somehow notify potential hold-up men that we have additional police dropping by at odd hours."

Chief Quinn instituted a program of having any and all police officers of all ranks signing in and observing drug stores, in an effort to prevent robberies.

Drug store hold-ups have increased in the Greater Boston area due to a shortage of narcotics, and it is theorized that both addicts and pushers have turned to pharmacies for supply. As a result, many pharmacists have reduced their inventories of wanted drugs and police departments have increased surveillance on such stores.

Blackout Covers Part of Newton

Parts of West Newton were blacked out for 70 minutes during a power failure Monday night.

The failure occurred at 10:30 p.m. in the 33rd Boston Edison Station, Pine St., where a large transformer went out. Edison reported that all the service was restored by 11:30 p.m. Four circuits were affected as a result of the failure, Edison said.

Newton Police received numerous calls at 5:34 p.m. Monday of power failures in the Newton Corner and Newtonville area.

Edison reported that this was caused by a burn-out connection on pole 39, on Newtonville Ave., at 5:34 p.m. About 275 homes were affected and without power for 46 minutes.

Mental Health Assn. Annual Meeting Tonight

The annual meeting of the Newton Mental Health Association, sponsor of the Newton Guidance Clinic, will be held on Thursday (Nov. 16) at 8 p.m. in 64 Eldridge St.

Dr. William E. Stone, director of the clinic, and Barbara Rubin, president of the association, will present their annual report.

In response to the often repeated question, "What do you do at the clinic?", a special program has been prepared by the staff under the supervision of Dr. Haskell Cohen, assistant director and chief psychologist, and Dr. Hilda Perlitz, whose special field is group dynamics.

They will explain and demonstrate the intake procedure for admittance to the clinic and the fiddler modalities used in treatment, such as: individual therapy, family therapy and group therapy.

There will be an opportunity to ask questions of the staff and become involved in discussion. The general public is invited to attend.

Pharmacy Robbed, Girl Almost Shot

The Langley Pharmacy in Newton Centre was held up Tuesday, and a 20-year-old patron barely escaped being shot.

Two hold-up men entered the pharmacy a little before 5 p.m. and ordered the young woman to "move over." He then fired a shot at her and the bullet passed between her right arm and chest, creating the skin on each side, police reported.

The girl's boyfriend also narrowly escaped being shot when he went to the door after the robbery to see which way the two men were leaving. He ducked back into the store before being hit.

The robbers took a sack of drugs and $150 in cash, according to police.

The girl was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and released.

The Langley Pharmacy incident is the 12th armed robbery in Newton in the last three months.

Cetrone Named Notary Public

Guido P. Cetrone, 41 West street, Newton, has been reappointed as Notary Public. Confirmation of the reappointment was made at the State House at a meeting of the executive council following submission of the name by the governor.

Newton On Abortion

Of the communities that voted on the abortion referendum question in the election two weeks ago apparently the loudest "yes" vote for repeal of the Massachusetts abortion laws came from Newton.

The question was on the ballot in parts or all sections of 18 cities and towns.

In Newton the abortion question was facing voters in Wards 4, 5, 6 and 8. That's the 13th Middlesex representative district that comprises slightly more than half of Newton.

The way voters answered the referenda is not binding but it is one measure of opinion.

In the four Newton wards where the question was on the ballot slightly over 23,000 residents went on record on the issue. The totals here indicated 16,224 favored repeal on the present laws and 6,793 voted against changing the laws.

Of the cities and towns that did vote on the question the largest percentage of voters favoring repeal was recorded in Newton. Of those who voted on the question - and an amazing number did - 70.5 per cent cast their votes for repeal.

With the final votes from 17 of the 18 communities that had the abortion question on the ballot now available, more voters favor repeal, at least in the communities where the question was on the ballot.

The question faced voters in Belmont, Berkley, the Roxbury section of Boston, Cambridge, Fall River, Foxboro, Framingham, Lynn, Nahant, Natick, Newton, Sharon, Somerset, Sudbury, Swampscott, Wayland, Westport and one ward of Worcester.

The vote against abortion prevailed in Belmont, Fall River, Somerset, Worcester and Westport.

In the other communities - except Berkley where the final totals were not available - the balloting was in favor of changing the state's abortion laws.

After the four wards in Newton it was Sharon that registered the strongest repeal vote. Seventy per cent of Sharon voters approved the idea of repeal.

The November 7th vote settles nothing. But it does give promise that the question of abortion will be one of the most controversial and critical to face the law makers in the sessions to come.

An American Holiday

In a mood apparently well-steeped in nostalgia and thoughts of things that might have been, the late O. Henry once wrote that Thanksgiving was the most American of all holidays.

Probably he did not know, or if he did, he did not care, that it was one of man's oldest holidays probably dating back to the earliest days of civilization.

For O. Henry fans it may well be impossible to picture him lugging a 15-pounder home or sitting at a festive table as a golden roasted turkey arrives aboard its great platter from the kitchen.

In literature written long before W. S. Porter filled page on page under the name of O. Henry, other men had long ago told of days dedicated to gratitude for their harvests. They gave those days different names and some of them were dedicated to gods now long forgotten.

The American holiday was born in the Autumn of 1621. Until President Lincoln was pressured into proclaiming it at the behest of Editor Sarah J. Hale in Nov. 26, 1863, it held something less than official significance.

Yet, O. Henry knew whereof he wrote. There's no holiday on the calendar quite like Thanksgiving for the American.

It's a day of joyous family reunions and day when men, women, and children come from afar to sit at the family table.

It's a day for those traditional high school football games - and recollections of the exploits of gridiron heroes of the past.

It's a day above all, when Americans see in the beauty of a gracious Being a hope for the future as well as an appreciation of the past.

Truly - Thanksgiving is a real American Holiday.

Yes And No

Pending "final and official" totals assembled by the Secretary of the Commonwealth's office it looks as though Massachusetts voters were determined in overwhelming numbers to put the state's judges out to pasture once they reached the age of 70.

There was no mistaking the emphasis they put behind that "Yes" vote on the judiciary on Election Day. If it could have been measured in decibels it was louder than the big response that went up on the referendum designed to give farmers a break on land used for agricultural and/or horticultural purposes.

Well over a million were recorded against septuagenarian judges and almost the same number expressed themselves on the side of the farmer. Last time we looked the "Yes" vote was well over 3 to 1 against the judges and 3 to 1 for the farmers, on two completely unrelated matters, of course.

The judges ran up against pro-retirement votes in quiet corners of the state where court dockets are comparatively light. The farmers had friendly votes from big city wards where cows are something you see in children's coloring books.

While there may be changes in the final tabulations of the other state-wide referenda appearing on the 1972 ballots it now appears that in all but one, voters generally favored the "Yes" box for their X's.

The single "No" winner appears to have been in referendum No. 6 in which a "Yes" indicated the voter was in favor of a graduated income tax.

The G.I.T. tax was strongly rejected in a vote that pretty generally followed a state-wide pattern.

That "No", on No. 6, of course, was of importance for both proponents and opponents. However, for the close followers of political lore it may help to destroy the myth that referenda - worded in such a way as to elicit a "Yes" answer are generally well on their way to acceptance.

Those referenda votes as well as the ticket-splitting that went on Nov. 7 would tend to indicate that today's American voter has gained a lot of sophistication.

Will It Happen?

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

By JAMES G. COLBERT

Sen. Ted Kennedy Expected To Bind Democratic Wounds

Senator Edward M. Kennedy is the man political observers believe will try to pick up the pieces of the shattered Democratic party and put them back together again.

However, some uncertainty exists as to how responsive the members of the Democratic National Committee, comprised largely of McGovern supporters, will be to Kennedy.

A test will come when the committee meets in December and an attempt is made to oust Jean Westwood from the national chairmanship. She contributed more than her share to Senator George McGovern's defeat by working at cross-purposes with him and insulting old-line Democratic leaders whose support McGovern desperately needed.

When Senator McGovern was declaring that he was 1000 per cent behind Missouri Senator Thomas Eagleton, Chairman Westwood, who had no known voice in the matter, was feeding word to the press that Eagleton had to go.

Now Democratic leaders across the country feel that Mrs. Westwood has to go in the first step toward rebuilding their party after the McGovern disaster.

The McGovern supporters, needless to say, are shaken and shocked by the breadth and depth of the rejection of their man and his policies. While they presently control the machinery of the Democratic party, it is expected they will accept Ted Kennedy as the political leader best able to rebuild the Democratic party nationally and bind its wounds.

Ted supported George McGovern to the hilt both before the Democratic National Convention and during the Presidential campaign. When they were together on the hustings, Ted actually overshadowed McGovern, but this is all the more reason to put him forward as the Democratic candidate for President in 1976.

Senator Kennedy is virtually certain to accept the task of rebuilding the fragmented Democratic party. Whether he also will eventually agree to run for President in 1976 is another matter. He might not.

Ted is still young. He's only 40 years old and will be 44 in 1976. He may prefer to wait until 1980 or even 1984 when the children for whose upbringing he feels responsible will be pretty well grown up while he will still be young enough to seek the Presidency.

His present senatorial term expires in 1976. If he stood for the Presidency that year and was defeated, he would be out of public life. If he were elected President in 1976 and were reelected in 1980, his public career would be over at the start of 1985 when he would be 52 years old. Nixon will be 60 when he starts his second term.

Ted Kennedy enjoys his service in the U.S. Senate and may choose to remain there for another eight or 12 years. In a span of just one decade he has become the outstanding figure in the Democratic party in the United States.

No one is angry with him, not even the Republicans who are relieved that his political timetable did not call for him to make his Presidential bid this year.

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey is being fingered by political pundits as partly responsible for the Democratic debacle.

Humphrey, politically somewhat shopworn, took some support away from Maine's Senator Edmund Muskie and prevented a clear-cut choice between Muskie and McGovern at the outset of the campaign.

The political analysts believe Muskie would have defeated McGovern if Humphrey had stayed out of the fight and that Muskie would have been a much stronger candidate against President Nixon.

They may be right. Humphrey obviously did place his own political hopes and ambitions above the well-being of the Democratic party. But in the final analysis the responsibility for the fact that the McGovern campaign never really got off the ground rests with George S. McGovern. He has been running the Democratic show for the last three and a half months.

Hubert Humphrey wasn't responsible for the Eagleton affair which caused the McGovern campaign to sputter and stall at a time when it should have been moving into high gear.

George McGovern must have known at least a week before the Democratic National Convention that he had the Presidential nomination sewed up.

He should have given some careful thought even before the convention to the choice of his Vice Presidential running mate and had a rundown made on the background of the person he picked to ascertain if there was any reason he shouldn't be tapped.

That was the start of McGovern's downfall. Many people felt he handled the Eagleton case cruelly and ineptly, that he was indecisive, that he said one thing and did another. That was a setback from which McGovern never really recovered.

Out of the Eagleton debacle came the realization that McGovern at that point was unable to control his own staff or run his own campaign office when he was asking the voters to elect him to run the national government of the United States.

The issue which backfired most violently upon McGovern was probably his proposal of amnesty for deserters and draft-dodgers. That was a matter which everyone understood. Most people disagreed with McGovern.

In many respects George McGovern is a very likeable person. He exercised his right to change his mind and revise his position on issues. There's really nothing wrong with that, but some people don't feel comfortable with a Presidential candidate who jumps around to the extent McGovern did.

One highly placed friend of George McGovern described him as a kindly man staggering under a load of good intentions who would make some congregation a wonderful pastor but who lacked executive talent, could not resolve differences even among his closest aides and didn't know how to lead.

That pretty well explains why George McGovern was unable to convince a majority of the American people that he was the man to serve as their President for the next four years.

The Great Nixon Juggernaut Stalled In Kennedy Country

Whenever President Nixon mentioned Massachusetts during his campaign for reelection, he referred to it as "Kennedy country," according to persons close to him.

He presumably was alluding both to the tremendous popularity of Senator Edward M. Kennedy and to the fact that the memory of the late, great, martyred President John F. Kennedy, whom Nixon battled in 1960, still burns brightly in the Bay State.

The fact that Massachusetts is "Kennedy country" is probably the overriding reason why it was the only state in the nation Mr. Nixon was unable to carry in his history-making landslide sweep.

Other factors were that it is an overwhelmingly Democratic and dovish state and that an exceptionally large number of pro-McGovern college and university students voted in it.

People like Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, Attorney General Robert Quinn and State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane also rolled up their sleeves and turned out the political troops for McGovern even though they had not been on his bandwagon in the Presidential Primary.

Many Democratic voters, who had planned to cast their ballots for Nixon, found their parties ties too strong to sever and changed their minds at the last minute.

President Nixon made a stronger showing in almost every Massachusetts city and town than he did four years ago. But he couldn't get over those hurdles despite the fight that was made in his behalf.

The question now is what effect it will have on Mr. Nixon when he looks at the 1972 Presidential election figures during the next four years and realizes that only the Massachusetts voters prevented him from becoming the first President to carry 50 states.

This is what former Boston Mayor John F. Collins, chairman of the Massachusetts Democrats and Independents for Nixon, was trying to avoid when he urged Bay State voters not to be out of step with the rest of the nation, a statement he was criticized for making.

Mr. Nixon will not punish Massachusetts for standing alone against him. He's too much of a political pro for that. But it will be more difficult for people like Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler, Lieutenant Governor Donald Dwight and ex-Mayor Collins to get sympathetic treatment for Massachusetts, and that is what Collins was talking about.

Bay State public leaders will be waiting to see whether President Nixon asks ex-Mayor Collins to take over George Romney's job as Secretary of HUD in his Cabinet.

It would involve a financial sacrifice for Collins who is very happy in his work as a professor at M.I.T. and as an outside consultant. But Collins is a very proud as well as capable man, and if offered the position he probably will accept it in order to try to show the job can be done.

This was the last political hurrah for Nixon as a candidate. He read accurately the mood of the people in 49 of the 50 states. As a result he came out of the campaign arena with banners flying high.

He is now free to do what he thinks is best for the people of the United States. He will not be thinking in terms of another reelection campaign. His margin of victory was so great he does not owe his election to any individual or group.

Richard Nixon now has the opportunity to place himself beside the great Presidents of United States history. He has the ability and capacity to do it. It is hoped he will start by quickly negotiating a final truce in Vietnam.

Collins Made Nixon Vote Respectable In Bay State

Even though Massachusetts was the only one of the 50 states President Nixon was unable to carry, former Boston Mayor John F. Collins did a masterful job in directing the campaign of the Bay State's Democrats and Independents for Nixon.

While Mr. Nixon was brought down in Massachusetts after running wild almost everywhere else except the District of Columbia, he lost the state by less than nine per cent as compared to 31 per cent in 1968.

Percentage-wise, the President improved his showing over 1968 in every city and town in the Commonwealth. This stemmed partly from the effective work done by Collins and his organization.

Collins collected and spent less than $10,000. He couldn't quite overcome the handicaps against President Nixon in Massachusetts. But he did succeed in making the President's run in the Bay State a respectable one.

The best post-election gag this writer has heard is that President Nixon will name Senator McGovern as Ambassador to Massachusetts.

Brooke May Be Tapped For Veep If Percy Bests Agnew

In rolling to an overpowering triumph in the only state George McGovern carried, Senator Edward W. Brooke established himself as one of the political giants of the Republican party.

Brooke has declared that he is not ruling out the possibility that he might be a candidate for President in 1976.

Actually, he probably has his eyes set on the Vice Presidential nomination four years from now.

He might just get it if Illinois Senator Percy defeats Vice President Agnew for the GOP Presidential nomination at the '76 Republican National Convention.

If Brooke can go to that conclave in control of the Massachusetts delegation and in a position to trade, as is entirely possible, he could well wind up in the No. 2 spot on the next Republican national ticket.

Brooke is the one person who could pull over millions of Democratic blacks and liberals to a Republican candidate with whom he was teamed.

He wouldn't exactly be a political powerhouse in the South, but neither, for that matter, would Senator Percy. Political alignments would be changed if Percy and Brooke were the team. They would have to win their fight in the industrial North.

Millions of words undoubtedly will be written on this intriguing possibility during the next four years.

Big Mistake By Mrs. Hicks Was In Running Too often

If this writer were to try to pinpoint one reason Boston City Councilor John Joseph Moakley defeated Congresswoman Louise Day Hicks last week, it would be that many voters felt that Mrs. Hicks had run for public office too often.

Her big mistake, it appears, was in running for Mayor of Boston in 1971. She had been elected to Congress in 1970, a position which in many respects is more desirable than the tough, trying job of Mayor.

If Mrs. Hicks had concentrated on entrenching herself in the position of Congresswoman, she might have been able to beat back Moakley's challenge even though her district was revamped with the obvious intention of making it more difficult for her to achieve reelection.

Instead, she weakened herself by entering Boston's 1971 mayoralty battle and was decisively defeated by Mayor Kevin H. White.

The guessing here is that Mrs. Hicks will attempt to start a political comeback by running for either the Boston City Council or School Committee next year. She likes public service.

Moakley waged an astute campaign. He took a calculated gamble in bypassing the Democratic primary and going directly into the final election as an independent candidate.

Many political observers believed that was a mistake. They thought the Democratic label alone would yield Mrs. Hicks enough votes in a 4-1 Democratic district to defeat Moakley.

But Moakley stressed repeatedly that he was a Democrat and would sit as a Democrat if elected to Congress. His strategy paid dividends in the ballot boxes. He has made it plain that he will not repeat Mrs. Hicks' mistake, will solidify himself in Congress and not run for any other office such as Mayor.

McGovern Coattails Helped Drinan To Reelection Win

Senator George McGovern was unable to advance his own cause in his ill-fated election bid, but there apparently was enough political starch in his campaign coattails in the fourth congressional district to help accomplish the reelection of Congressman Robert F. Drinan.

This was possibly the only district in the United States where McGovern's strength helped a Democratic candidate.

McGovern and Congressman Drinan were close politically. Father Drinan had headed McGovern's campaign in the Bay State's Presidential Primary. They both gained strength in the fourth district in the closing stages of their election battles.

Representative Martin Linsky of Brookline made a very strong fight against Congressman Drinan. In a two-man, head-to-head fight Linsky might have won. But the presence of conservative independent John T. Collins of Newton in the contest was too great a handicap for Linsky to overcome.

Collins polled only 11,135 votes. But if Linsky had received those votes, he would have defeated Father Drinan by a 1759 vote-margin. However, Congressman Drinan won as a result of the big totals he rolled up in Newton and Brookline, will serve on Washington's Capitol Hill for at least another two years while Representative Linsky quite likely will join HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson in Washington.

Fuchs To Speak At Temple Series

Dr. Lawrence H. Fuchs, chairman of the department of American studies at Brandeis University, will be the featured speaker at the program of the Combined Temples Adult Education Series on Tues. Nov. 14, 9:15 p.m. at Temple Reyim, 1860 Washington St., Newton.

His lecture will be entitled "Love and Marriage in American Jewish Life." Dr. Fuchs who holds the position of Meyer and Walter Jaffe Professor of American Civilization Brandeis nas recently published a book called "Family Matters".

He is known for his work in the field of ethnicity and religion in American life and has authored books and numerous articles and chapters in his area of study. Citizens Offer Schools Help

(Editor's note: This letter was sent the superintendent of schools with a copy to the Newton Graphic.)

Dear Mr. Fink:

This letter is in response to an article written by Kenneth Masson in the November 9th edition of the Newton Graphic entitled "Fink Calls for Public Help".

In it you indicated that the School Department needs the public's help in order to do a better job. Admitting that the Department had failed to take the public into its confidence, you said, according to the article, that the public must have confidence in the Department's integrity.

You went on to mention some of the problems confronting the School Department; among them, the physical decay of some of our school buildings, and the need for updating our schools with equipment and instruction supplies while at the same time trying to ekp the budget down.

We are, however, alarmed at the implication of your "Call for Public Help" which seems to be a warning to Newton taxpayers that what you really need is not our help to resolve some of the school problems, but once again our hard-earned money. I quote from the article: "Fink said another problem is that the schools are using '19th century tools'. To change this, however, requires money and if we want to update, Newton must be prepared for the cost".

We wonder why it is that we must always be prepared for the cost of the improvements or services we desire. Do you not ever consider alternatives that would adequately provide us with the necessities without heaping added burden upon the working man? For example, concerning the condition of our buildings, what would be wrong with a massive participation by Newton residents, young and old alike, to clean up, fix up, and paint up the Newton Public Schools? The materials would be provided by the city and the work could be accomplished in a weekend or during the week of a school vacation.

Other cities and towns have tried this quite successfully, and the savings to the taxpayers would be thousands. There is no doubt that you would have more volunteers than your needs require. And the spirit of working together in an effort of this nature coupled with the savings in tax dollars would bring a new pride and respect to our community. It may even help stem the tide of the rampant vandalism and lack of concern for the property of others that is so prevalent today. We would also welcome the opportunity to applaud our school officials, who would propose an alternative to the philosophy of spend, spend, spend.

We, therefore, appeal to you to seriously consider our suggestion. We are prepared to answer your call for help by offering ourselves. But in view of the fact that Newton's tax rate has risen 83 per cent in 5 years, and that an 18 month Fiscal Year lies ahead, we are no longer prepared for the cost where there is a viable alternative. As you yourself have said: It is easy to point to apparent success and failures, but we also have to recognize that traditional practices are not always the right ones."

Super-Packaged Economy Reaps Solid Waste

Editor, Newton Graphic:

The average bottle of ketchup brings together in one convenient package about 14 ounces of ketchup, one-half ounce of metal in the cap, a bit of paper label and about 10 ounces of glass. Most of these facts have little impact on the average shopper, because it is only the ketchup that is wanted. The rest is thrown away.

A lot of everything else we buy is thrown away, too. After the contents are removed or used up, an incredible amount of wrapping paper and empty aerosols, tubes, cans and glass bottles also finds its way to the garbage can.

Each day, the average American discards about six pounds of solid wastes — or about one ton a year. As a whole, Americans presently throw away some 300-million tons of trash and garbage, and this figure is increasing at an estimated five percent a year.

It is piling up so fast that major cities such as Philadelphia and San Francisco may soon run out of places to put it. In New York, where raw garbage is buried in landfills on Staten Island, a city official recently warned that the landfills are getting so high it may soon become necessary to dump solid wastes into the Atlantic Ocean — a practice now banned by law.

This bumper crop of solid wastes is largely the result of an affluent, growing population enjoying the products of our super-packaged economy. For example, soft drink companies have attempted several times in recent years to re-introduce deposit glass bottles — but Americans apparently have become so prosperous that this old idea which yields only a few pennies per bottle no longer works. Another aspect of the urban refuse problem is the one million obsolete automobiles abandoned each year by their owners on both city streets and country roads. They join the 12 to 15 million total inventory of scrap autos already dotting the landscape, along with untold millions of old tires and discarded large appliances.

The problem is compounded by the fact that refuse disposal in this country still relies on the basic processes used for centuries — burning and burying.

Is there an answer to our growing refuse problem? According to minerals experts at the U.S. Bureau of Mines' Metallurgy Research Center at College Park, Maryland, near Washington, D.C., a major portion of the answer may have been found.

Over the past several years, specialists at a Federal research project quietly under way in nearby Edmonston, Maryland, have developed a pilot recycling plant that not only eliminates the need to bury the residue of incinerated refuse, but also processes it into commercially valuable products.

Refuse, according to Max J. Spendlove, Director of the Research Center, is America's only growing natural resource at a time when other such resources are being consumed at a rate that threatens their extinction. Bureau of Mines engineers refer to refuse as "urban ore" — and with good reason. Household garbage and trash contain all the materials that were thrown there. This includes aluminum, iron, copper, brass, tin, glass, paper and plastic. In fact, some of these materials are substantially higher grade than natural ores that are profitably mined and processed for their virgin metals.

The recycling plant developed at Edmonston operates under a simple and ecologically sound theory: since the refuse already contains materials that have been mined and refined, it is wasteful and unnecessary to draw on nature's finite resources to provide new materials. Cost figures developed by the Bureau indicate that the recycling operation can recover enough salable material to pay for itself, and in some circumstances may even yield a modest profit.

Materials recovered from urban refuse are ideal to work with, says project Supervisor Paul Sullivan, and can be used for everything from stereo components and automobile radiators to tea kettles and shovels. Reclaimed glass can be used to produce building bricks, glass wool for insulation, and even "glasphalt," a road surfacing material that substitutes glass for limestone. Reclaimed paper can be processed for an insulating material, as a protein for animal feed, and some of it is suitable for making more paper.

Unlike many recycling techniques that do not even pay for themselves, the garbage recycling plant developed by the Bureau of Mines not only pays its own way but also earns revenue for the municipality using it. It cost $4 per ton, including the cost of amortization of the equipment over 20 years and operating costs, to process 250 tons of municipal residues a day. Bureau of Mines' studies show that minerals and metals worth $15 can be extracted from each ton of residue for a net gain of about $11 per ton at the processing plant. Cost figures are based on the assumption that the plant would be attached to an existing incinerator.

"Until recently, there was only one thing wrong with our process," Sullivan observes. "It is so new and offers so many potential benefits that public works officials have been skeptical. People have been interested, but no one wanted to be the first to try it."

Recently, however, the city of Lowell, Massachusetts, became the first municipality to agree to build and use the new system. A $3.2 million refuse recycling plant, based on the Bureau of Mines' process, and financed by the city, the State and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, will be built to process the incinerator residue of the area's residents. The Bureau of Mines will serve as consultant on the project.

Lowell's recycling plant will be built like the pilot plant at Edmonston, Md. And that means a system of conveyor belts, revolving drums, screens and magnet.

Briefly, the operation runs like this: the residue is fed into the equipment by a conveyor belt traveling to a revolving drum equipped with water sprays and full of 1 1/4 inch holes that sort small particles from large pieces. In subsequent stages, magnets pull out magnetic metals, pieces of nonmagnetic metals are flattened so they can be screened out of the glass and the glass is crushed to a sand-like consistency. Further processes separate metals into aluminum, copper, zinc, and brass, and clear glass from colored. Finally, the particles are washed to remove the last traces of dirt.

Not content to stop now that they have developed an effective and practical way to handle incinerator residues, Spendlove and his staff are focusing attention on another project: recycling refuse taken straight from the garbage can.

"Paper and plastics are valuable, too," according to Martin Stanczyk, supervisor of this project, "and it makes good sense to find a way to recover them for reprocessing. You lose both these materials by incinerating refuse."

Stanczyk admits that processing raw refuse has its problems, but he points out that if successful in the process would eliminate the need for costly refuse incinerators in the future processing system. In addition, it will offer the combustible materials of refuse as products in addition to the metals and glass. Bureau of Mines engineers are certain they can solve the difficult problem of separating lightweight paper and plastics from each other and eventually separate the various types of plastics from the mixed plastic materials.

The raw refuse recycling plant, which is almost completely assembled, employs what Stanczyk calls "air classification." Paper and plastics are fed into huge cylinders where blasts of air separate different weight of paper and different types of plastics, much in the manner that farmers once used the wind to winnow the chaff from their wheat. So far, air classification seems to work well, but the cost has yet to be determined.

"You can't change human nature," says Max Spendlove, to which both Martin Stanczyk and Paul Sullivan agree. "As long as there are attractively packaged items, no-return glass bottles, tin cans and all the other throw-away products available, people will buy them — and throw away the container."

But if the technology being perfected by the Bureau of Mines is any barometer, future generations of Americans won't have to worry about what to do with their garbage. Today's glass ketchup bottles could be part of tomorrow's highway and the morning newspaper might appear again as wallboard. The possibilities are endless. They are limited only by the extent of man's concern for the future.

Newton Study By B.C. To Explore Family Study

Drs. Ronald L. and Ena V. Nuttall of the Boston College Institute of Human Sciences announce that approximately 1,000 families from Newton have been asked to participate in a study funded through the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Designed to explore family life styles, the study will gather information from a total of 500 interviews of families in Lincoln, Bedford, Wellesley and other communities.

"The reason for our study," states Dr. Ronald Nuttall, "is to better understand how families make decision, how family tasks are divided, what families do for recreation, how families differ in community activities, and what the differences are between large and small families."

"Eventually," states Dr. Ena Nuttall, "we hope this information will become part of high school courses in home economics and in social studies and become useful to teenagers who will shortly be forming their own family units."

The Nuttalls said that they chose to interview Newton families because the registrar and school census information was completed and available faster than that of other communities. They stated that families who have been asked to participate in the study were chosen because each has a junior or senior high school teenage member and a certain family size.

They also emphasized that privacy is assured for any family consenting to assist in the study. Of families participating in the study, the mother will be interviewed in her home for about an hour and a half at a time convenient to her.

One teenager from the family (who is attending junior or senior high school) will be asked to assemble with other teenagers in a central location in Newton to fill out a few questionnaires.

The institute will pay small fee for transportation costs to each teenager. Any participant assisting in the study will receive a report of the general results upon request.

KENNETH JOHNSON

Joins Colby's Trustee Board

Kenneth A. Johnson, of Newton Upper Falls, has been elected to the Colby College board of trustees.

Johnson, a 1937 graduate of the Waterville, Me., school is chairman of the department of history at Boston Latin School. He will serve a six-year term on the Colby board.

He earned an M.A. degree at Harvard and studied at the University of Minnesota before being named a John Hay Fellow in humanities at the University of Oregon in 1962. Johnson also studied as a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Nigeria in 1964 and served as lecturer in Afro-American history at Boston State College during 1969-70.

A former member of the board of directors of the John Hay Fellows Alumni Association, between 1968 and 1971 Johnson served on the advanced placement examining committee in European history for the College Entrance Examination Board.

Good Neighbor Night To Be Held Nov. 27

"Thirteenth annual Good Neighbor Night" dinner of the Brotherhood Temple MISHKAN Tefila will be held Monday, Nov. 27, at 8 p.m. in the Copleman Social Hall of the Temple. Herbert S. Lerman, executive vice-president, Newton Centre has been named general chairman of this affair.

Speakers for this event will be His Eminence Archbishop Iakovos, Primate of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America and Dr. Israel J. Kazis, rabbi of Temple MISHKAN Tefila, Chestnut Hill.

Assisting Lerman are members of the following committees: tickets and reservation committee Robert Cotton, Melvin Cerier, Robert Devorin, Martin Hoffman, Harvey R. Fleichman and Ira Myers; hospitality committee; George Body, Martin Alpert, Oscar Einstein, Walter Einstein, George Levy, Richard Steinberg, Maurice Perlman, Harry Wald, and Jacob L. Sieve; sherry hour committee: Alfred Silverman Stanley Gaffin, Maxwell Rosenbaum and Daniel Shrago; and publicity committee; Noah Burtman, Leo Shurfin and Phillip Michaelson.

Golden Promoted To Assistant V.P.

Daniel Golden, 40 Crescent Ave., Newton Centre, has been promoted to assistant vice-president in the mutual funds division of the State Street Bank and Trust Company, Boston.

Golden is a 1950 graduate of Princeton University and has also attended Williams College, School of Banking. Employed by the bank in May, 1953 as a clerk, he subsequently served as assistant secretary.

Active in his community, he is treasurer of Newton's Ward 6 Democratic Committee. He is a member of the Bank Officers Association and the Boston National Bank Cashiers Association.

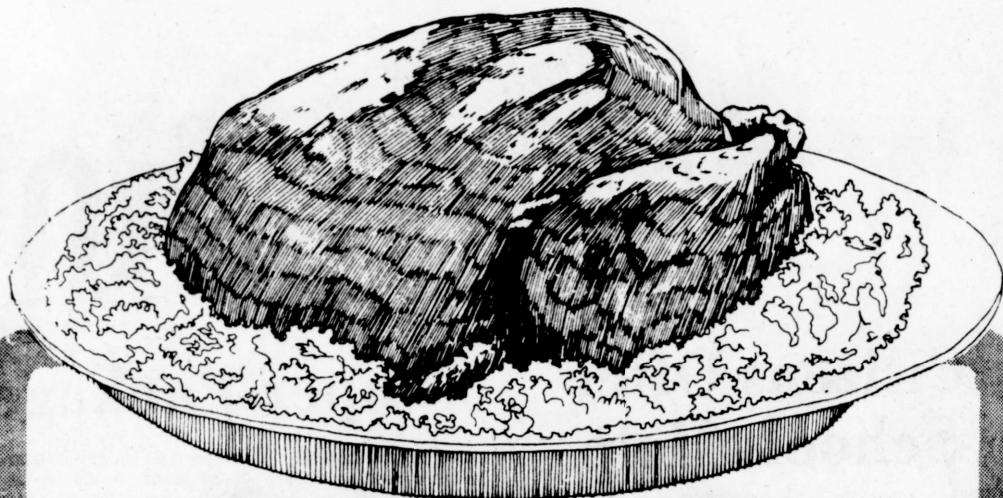

Mrs. Dixon Tabbed Head Start Chief

Mrs. Rosalie Dixon, Newton, was elected chairman of the New England head start directors association, for a second term. The election came at the annual meeting held in Hyannis during Massachusetts head start week.

Mrs. Dixon is the director of child development programs for Community Teamwork Inc., Lowell. She oversees several head start and day care programs in the Greater Lowell area.

She will meet with other head start and O.C.D. officials in the six state region in quarterly exchanges of ideas and feelings concerning the federally funded early childhood education program.

TRAVEL TRAILS
by Julian Roberts

Whether it's impulse-buying or shrewd shopping or even plain good, few travelers these days seem able to resist the bargains offered at the duty-free shops that are installed in most of the international airports of the world... Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport's 15 shops does millions of dollars worth of business in everything from tulip bulbs to tape recorders at prices as much as 30 percent below those of local retail stores.

From London's Heathrow Airport ($20 million a year in profits and rents from concessionaires) to Tokyo's Haneda ($5 million annually), the booming duty-free business goes a long way toward covering the cost of airport operations...

silence this committee and lull the public back into a false sense of security."

He explained: "At the hearing when I showed Deputy Commissioner Flynn a list of five commercial banks commonly known to be in trouble, he stated action had been taken on two cases, action was being considered on one other, and was evasive as to the other two. 'If these banks were not in trouble, why didn't he say so?" Fishman also said the Flynn testified there have been meetings with directors of banks similar to that held with the directors of the Surety Bank.

"This further seems to indicate trouble in the banking community," Fishman said.

Lynn showed on the slides how media production facilities could be built on the second floor, along with a library which featured a comfortable lounge and stacks of books and other materials along the walls.

When questioned about the staff involved in such a project, the Warren Principal replied that no extra personnel would be needed. "It would mean a reallocation of personnel," he said.

Board Member Mrs. Eleanor S. Rosenblum expressed her hope that Lynn would have an architect present at Warren within "six to eight weeks" to appraise the situation.

Douglas, while expressing "enormous respect" for the media in general and its powerful technology, was fearful that the system might tend to overshadow, an eventually replace, the basic learning process.

"We'll reach the point where a child won't be able to sit still for one hour to read a book," Douglas stated.

"Members of the School Committee should find out where you're having trouble in the basic learning process," he told Lynn. "We're going to get to the point where students won't learn English grammar."

Douglas stressed the Lynn's philosophy about the environment could be reversed: "The total environment could be a corrupter." He went on to state that the language used in the IMC Rationale was "bad," that instructors and academic administrators ought to allow the students to concentrate on basic, tried-and-true learning methods.

Member Alvin Mandell echoed Douglas' stance on the issue, foreseeing a "1984" where a child's education consists of plugging in a canned, audio-visual classroom instruction for three hours in his own living room.

After Douglas said that "teachers have moved on the defensive," Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink jumped into the fray, claiming that "95 percent" of academic instruction around the country is accomplished by books, blackboards and chalk, and the human voice.

"The use of the media is a means of concentration," he emphasized. "You don't have to be concerned that schools have gone overboard; the IMC will provide another way that people can learn."

Fink also admonished the group to refrain from being himbled by titles: the Instructional Materials Center, he noted, is simply a long euphemism for "library." By adopting the IMC and similar facilities, he said, "We are creating new kinds of libraries."

Lynn himself then took the floor to defend his own policies and plans by claiming his IMC would reinforce ideas with tools.

Present and future nefia, he said, facilitates instruction. "I see it as a facilitator, not a substitute. We can supplement what we're doing," the principal pointed out, adding a contemporary educational stance of his own: "I he kids aren't buying everything they see on the blackboards."

Obviously enjoying the lively talk, which was a departure from the School Committee's usually mundane discussions of budget figures and cost analyses, the audience warmed to the topic by injecting several comments of its own. Two or three teachers from Warren came out with full backing for the projected Center of their principal.

Charles Hancock, presently affiliated with Warren High, said that when he himself had attended the school as a student in the 1950's the prevailing educational atmosphere was that of a "mental deathhouse," compared to the great progress made in the interim.

At the conclusion of the media debate, a demonstration was given of a slide-tape projector and film-strip projector, two of several items currently in use at Warren, by the School Department Program Division's James Robinson.

Almost in technological response to the various philosophies expressed earlier, the machines, which Robinson wished he "had more of," contributed to the evening's focus by first thrusting on-screen a slide-show controlled by the sound of a child's voice on a cassette and moving pictures of students, and secondly by proving that mechanical gadgets, no matter how sophisticated, are only as different as the men who invent and run them.

The projector balked once or twice, the voice apparently wasn't coordinating the slide changes; and the movie projector threw the film off the sprocket enough times to necessitate Robinson's adjusting the "media" manually.

from one account to another. Now 13 votes will be required for passage.

At last week's meeting, the Finance Committee vote on Pratt's transfer was 5-3 in favor and the vote on Carroll's position was 5-3 in favor.

In Public Works, the vote was 3-3 on Pratt and 3-3 on Carroll. In his resume, Dudman described himself as having spent several years as a senior consultant with Arthur D. Little Inc. He said he was a member of the Social Systems Group within the Management Sciences Division of the company.

His interests, he said, "were centered on the application of mathematics, scientific method and systems analysis to the modeling of social systems and behavioral situations."

He recounted other work in developing guidelines for mass transportation plans, evaluation of educational programs up to the university level and said he is currently conducting a study of a suburban police department to develop new "patrol and dispatch plans."

He is the founder of R.A. Dudman Associates.

He has also been a teacher, worked on optical lens design problems, the translation of foreign languages into English and the computerization of radioactive heat transfer problems, his resume states.

Carroll holds a bachelor of science degree in Civil Engineering from Northeastern University and is currently the executive director of the Massachusetts Association of Transportation Contractors Inc. (MATCO) in Newton Corner.

From 1959 to 1967, Carroll was the Superintendent of Public Works and Town Engineer for Lexington. According to his resume, he joined the department in 1953 and also held the positions of civil engineer and assistant superintendent of public works.

He is a registered professional engineer and land surveyor in the Commonwealth and serves as chairman of the Finance Committee in Dedham. He is also the vice president of the Massachusetts Highway Association and a member of the American Public Works Association.

A thousand bottles of wine on the wall...a

And thousands more in racks, barrels, baskets and bins. Martignetti's has the largest selection of wine in all New England. Wines for every taste, occasion and budget. Don Ryan, our expert wine buyer, travels the world to bring you the finest wines of France, Italy, Portugal, California...almost everywhere. And Don won't sell you a wine he hasn't tasted and approved of himself. At Martignetti's you'll find the prized Château Calon Ségur '28 and dozens of other costly vintage wines. But you'll also discover a specially purchased group of Petite Châteaux...like the delightful Château Grandis. The rare Niersteiner Kranzberg Eiswein from Germany might be next to a pleasant little Liebfraumilch. Sake from Japan. Retsina from Greece. Viña Bosconia Reserve from Spain.

Rec. Dept Starts Winter Program

The Newton Recreation Department's winter programming is getting underway, and scores of activities are planned throughout the City.

Recreation supervisor, Fran Towle, says that on December 2 a weekly open gym program will begin at Day Junior High for junior high and senior high school age girls. The activities to be directed by Mary Ann Beldezsak from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., will include: basketball, volleyball and street hockey.

Other activities reported by recreation supervisor William Barry, include: a three night schedule for boys and girls as follows, Franklin School —

Tue., 7-9 p.m., Junior high boys street hockey and basketball; Wed., 7:00-9:00 p.m. high school boys street hockey and basketball, and Thur., Junior high and high school age girls, 7-9 p.m., street hockey and basketball.

At the Hamilton School on Tue. from 7-9 p.m., there will be street hockey and basketball for junior high boys. Wed., 7-9 p.m. there will be basketball and street hockey for junior high girls and Thur., from 7-9 p.m. there will be a similar program for high school age boys.

Barry reports that the Emerson School indoor program began this week, opening Monday with team basketball from 7-9 p.m. Tue., during the same evening hours, there will be basketball for the high school boys; Wed., same hours, indoor hockey for junior high boys; Thur., same hours, agym program for junior high and high school girls and on Fri. from 7-9 p.m., there will be indoor hockey for high school boys.

Mon. and Wed. afternoons there will be a woodworking class in the basement of the school for Emerson School 5 and 6 graders. In the event classes have to be postponed they will be held on Friday afternoons.

Recreation supervisor Robert E. Doherty reports on the following programs: Underwood School, Mon., Tue and Wed., 7-9 p.m. Mon. and Wed., a general sports program of gym activities for 5 and 6 grade boys. Tue., a program for 5 and 6 grade girls. Bowen School, Tue. and Thur., 7-9 p.m. Tue., 5 and 6 grade boys and Thur., high school boys.

Countryside School, Mon. and Tue., 7-9 p.m., the activities will be for 5 and 6 graders, Mon. for boys and Tue. for girls.

Memorial School, Tue. and Wed., 7-9 p.m. This program for junior and senior high school boys will include, basketball and general indoor sports. According to senior recreation supervisor, James E. Murphy, starting Dec. 2, afternoon basketball programs will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at Weeks, Bigelow, Warren and Meadowbrook Junior High Schools. This will be open to boys of all ages.

A basketball clinic will be held Sat. from 9 a.m. to noon at the F.A. Day Junior High School. Sat. from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. the girls will play basketball.

Barry notes that the winter basketball season is fast approaching. There will be the American "A" and the American "B" divisions for adults 18 years and older. Bill says the teams in the league last year will have first choice. There will be eight teams in the

A division and ten in the B division. The number of teams are limited by facilities and new teams will be accepted on first come, first serve basis. Interested adults should call Barry at 969-3171 for further information.

League play will start the week of January 3, playing two games a night at Bigelow and Warren Junior High beginning at 7 and 8 p.m.

Doherty reports that the Pony League Basketball play for boys 13 to 15 will be at the Warren Junior High on Fri., 6:30-9:30 p.m. There will be three games a night. The league play begins the first week in Jan. and runs through March.

Austin Moore will direct the National division for the boys 16, 17 and 18, running from Jan. through March. The league will play on Tuesday and Thursday nights at Warren Junior High. Games will be played at 6:30, 7:30 and 8:30 p.m.

The Mini-bike program at the site of the former City infirmary, Newton Highlands, will close for the season on Sat. Nov. 18, and will be resumed next spring.

Director Paul Patriacca and safety officer Robert Braceland hope to have a bigger and better program next year.

Starting on a trial basis this year, the program has grown to the point where it now attracts 50 to 60 young people on Sat. afternoons according to Barry, who directs the activity.

The next regular meeting of the Newton Recreation Commission will be held at the Recreation Department Office, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, Nov. 20, at 7:45 p.m.

Newton Dealer In Auto Show

Tom Caey, Ford Cadillac, Newton, is assisting in staging the 16th annual international Auto show in Boston's Civic Auditorium in their Prudential Center Nov. 10-18.

More than 400 cars representing 77 nations and the latest in 1973 engineering, styling and safety advancements will be on view at this annual event.

Novelist To Read From New Book

Novelist-journalist, Dan Wakefield, will read excerpts from a new novel at Newton College, Stuart Administration Building, Centre St., on Thursday, Nov. 16 from 4 to 5 p.m.

The event which will be held in the East lounge of the building, is open to the public. Wakefield, a contributing editor of the Atlantic monthly, is the author of several books and articles. His most recent published novel is "Going All the Way." Wakefield is also the author of an article titled "Getting Out the Vote in New Hampshire" which appeared recently in Saturday Review.

He holds a B.A. degree from Columbia College and was a Neiman Fellow at Harvard in 1963-64. He has served as news editor of the Princeton (N.J.) Packet; staff writer on Nation magazine; a Bernard DeVoto fellow at the Bread Loaf Writers Conference, and a visiting lecturer at the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

He is the author of "Island in the City the World of Spanish Harlem"; "Revolt in the South"; "The Addict, and Anthology"; "Between the Lines" and "Supernation at Peace and War".

KNOW YOUR ZONING

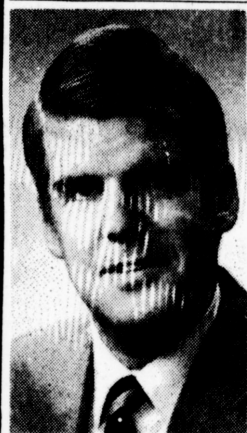

In a nutshell, zoning laws lay out restrictions as to what kind of buildings may be constructed and how they can be used within certain geographic limits. A good community has zoning laws that protect its homeowners. However, they may also put a crimp into future remodeling plans you may have in mind.

For example, if the area is zoned only for one-family homes, you may not be able to use a part of the house for some special use, such as converting an area for an apartment for a family member or rental or using a part of the house for an office or partly for business. There may be height restrictions or lot size limitations.

Before buying, you should know what the zoning is and the geographic limits of residential and business-zoned areas in your locality. It may affect the future value of your property and save you from an unexpected disappointment.

If you have any questions or desire personal assistance in any area of real estate, feel free to phone or drop into our office: LYN MEDOFF ASSOCIATES, REALTORS

Great Offensive Show Crumbles Waltham 36-8

BY DAVID CUTLER

One of the greatest offensive displays Newton High has ever put on, the Tigers crushed Waltham 36-8. The match occurred Saturday, November 11, and should keep the Tigers flying until their regular season finale against Brookline on Thanksgiving. The winning margin could have been even greater, but Newton failed to score their first time downfield. They came away close, though, as they took the opening kickoff and marched the ball on eight plays to the Hawk 8. The next five plays failed to produce a touchdown, and Waltham took over; 50 yards separating them from a touchdown.

This magnificent goal line stand was hardly an indication of things to come. Waltham punted the ball back to Newton four plays later, and in six plays Newton had their first six points. Gerry Kelher twisting and squirming over from the 6. This happened with 53 seconds left in the first quarter. Waltham came back with a 100-yard drive, a fourth and ten situation at the Newton 20. An attempted reverse was botched on the backfield and the ensuing fumble gave NHS possession on the 33. Pete Dion's romps of 17 and 25 yards set up a six yard run by Kelher into the endzone seven plays later. The score was now 14-0. But don't go away.

A minute later Newton has the ball back again and Mark Connolly's electrifying 27 yard touchdown run followed by Bill Steinberg's third extra point of the afternoon increases the lead to 21-0 at halftime.

The Tigers scored for the fourth consecutive time on a 24 yard pass play from Cal Moffie to Jay Tutungian just 2:20 into the period. With a margin of 28 points Newton started to empty the bench. The subs didn't score, but number 3 linebacker (the Tigers only start two) Dave Egelson did make a dazzling interception.

Mark Connolly scored his second touchdown early in the fourth quarter charging up the middle from four yards out. On the conversion a bad snap forced holder Pete McKay to run with the ball. McKay found Connolly open in the endzone and flipped the ball to him for the two points.

The Tigers were now winning 34-0 with 9:11 left in the game. Waltham avoided a whitewash by marching for a touchdown in the next three and a half minutes. The scoring play was a 23 yard toss from second-string quarterback Chris Smith to Wayne Sheck. Even the two point conversion which followed didn't help much as the final score was a resounding 36-8.

In the first half, when all the starters were in there, Newton got 12 first downs to Waltham's 1. The Tigers ran off twice as many offensive plays, and rolled up 246 yards on the ground compared to the Hawks' 51. "We really moved the ball," said Jim Ronayne. "That was a great offensive effort."

Newton must come up with the same outstanding effort against Brookline if they hope to grab the second Class A spot and a post-season bowl berth. Waltham is 2-6, Brookline is 6-2.

Newton Notebook

Mike Coven is in love with soccer.

The enthusiastic two-year Newton South High soccer coach has an eight year love affair with the sport and the love is growing, not diminishing with time.

The Lion booters have responded to the style he has communicated to them better than any other mentor in school history.

Since the 25-year-old American International College grad arrived on Brandeis road two falls ago, the South soccermen, traditionally doormats of the Suburban League and then not exactly overwhelming in the Dual County League either, have played ball at a near .500 clip. Seasons of 5-6-2 and 6-6 are not accomplishments to shout about from the rooftops — unless the team is accustomed to 1-10-1 slates South compiled not too long ago.

Coven's easy-going personality and experience in dealing with kids allows him an easy rapport with his players, even though he is not around Newton South during the day. Coven, who earned a psychology degree at AIC and a master's in Guidance and Counseling at Springfield, spends his days teaching in special education in Bellingham, Massachusetts.

Although Coven spent six years in Springfield, followed by a trip to Europe, he was no stranger to the Newton area when he took over the head soccer reins in September of 1971. He graduated Brookline High in 1964, so was quite familiar with his new surroundings.

Brookline didn't have a soccer team until after he departed so Coven's secondary school athletic career was limited to a stint in the Wealthy Towner's infield on the baseball team.

Coven took up soccer his freshman year at AIC and it was an instant romance. He played four years to varsity soccer at both halfback and fullback and describes his style of play as being "scrappy and aggressive, with fairly good skills. I was primarily a defensive player." He also spent two years patrolling the second-base area for the baseball team.

After surviving six years in the wilds of western Massachusetts, Coven played on a U.S. cultural seminar-sponsored soccer team which toured Europe. The American contingent played a 20-game schedule against European national teams over a two month period. Although the squad's success was minimal — 5-15 — Coven surprised himself by compiling the second-best scoring statistics on the team — three goals and six assists.

Coven's team reflects his personal style of play. The Lions were scrappy, well-coached, and excelled on defense this year. What they lacked, however, was what Coven lacked most of his career, a knack for putting the ball in the net.

"I really love coaching," said the Westwood resident. "The relationship built with the players is very satisfying. But I also like winning. And I think we'll do plenty of that next year."

"If the offense can score," he continued, "we should be really strong next year. We have 16 lettermen returning and that includes most of the starting team."

One theory espoused about South's sudden improvement in soccer concerns the school's shift from the Class A Suburban League to the Class C Dual County League. Coven discounts this a factor, however.

"I think the two leagues are equal," he said. "We play Suburban teams in pre-season scrimmages and do very well against them. Newton and Medford usually dominated that league, but there's quite a drop-off after that. The Dual County League is the same. Lincoln-Sudbury is a powerhouse, but everyone else is even. Next year the league will be tougher. Lynnfield, not a strong team, is moving to the Cape Ann League and is being replaced by Concord-Carlisle, always a tourney team."

Soccer is on a long overdue upswing at Newton South, and if Mike Coven can keep his players hustling and playing aggressive defense, better days are still to come. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

BROOKLINE NEXT — The Newton High School football team will face a tough foe when they take on arch-rival Brookline next Thursday in Thanksgiving battle. In this photo earlier in season Ed Becker makes run against Brockton. It is a possibility that Brookline could meet Brockton again for state football championship. (Bob Grossman Photo)

Lions Come From Behind To Nip Westwood 12-8

Newton South High's gridiron greats prepped for their Thanksgiving Day encounter with Acton-Boxboro by scoring a come-from-behind 12-8 victory over winless Westwood, last Saturday, in a Dual County League game at Westwood.

South burst from the starting gate quickly, building a 6-0 lead after the first series of downs. The Lions took the opening kickoff and marched 73 yards in nine plays for the touchdown. Enroute quarterback Ned Moan hit flanker Kevin Hoban for 14 yards and end Paul Pattison for 13 in key situations. A 15-yard sprint by halfback Peter Maples, the Lions' leading rusher with 79 yards, set up a final seven-yard scamper by running-mate Peter Nathanson.

The 6-0 margin held up through the rest of the first half and into the third period when Westwood, which had trouble moving the football all day, got a break. Back Mike Conway, who provided the losers' only offense with 85 yards rushing, burst through the South line to block Hoban's punt. Conway picked the pigskin out of the air and raced the remaining 43 yards unmolested. Westwood quarterback Dave Whalen kept it himself for the two-point conversion and an 8-6 Westwood lead.

The Lions roared back in the fourth period. South took possession on its own 42-yard line and was immediately set back 15 yards by a holding penalty, one of the many called against the club during the game. Moan completed a short pass to Maples for four yards and then sent speedy Hoban long. Hoban sprinted and then cut to the sideline, hauling in a 52-yard strike before tip-toeing out of bounds. Nathanson contributed a six-yard run and then carried it over from 11 yards out. Moan tried to continue his successful air game with a pass attempt at two points, but was tackled while fading back.

South compiled a 279-yard offense which was almost evenly divided. Four runners gained 137 yards on the ground and Moan completed seven of 17 passes for 142 yards in the air, including three to Hoban. The Lions also rolled up 15 first downs — they just had trouble getting the ball into the end zone.

Despite Conway's success on the ground, Westwood persisted in going to the air. Quarterback Whalen was accurate, 9 for 18, but he couldn't gain much yardage. His tosses only covered 43 yards.

Once again, South's young backfield of sophomores Hoban, Maples and Nathanson, anchored by senior Moan worked well together. Nathanson, who started the season on the bench, has now scored four touchdowns in his last two games. Moan, bouncing back from a foot injury, is still not 100 per cent. Despite his strong passing game he only managed 11 yards on the ground in five tries.

Bedford gained at least a tie for the Dual County League title, Saturday, by tying its closest pursuer, Weston, 13-13. The only unbeaten league squads each scored seven points in the second quarter and six in the fourth.

Lynnfield, which South upset, 20-12, last week, beat Acton-Boxboro, South's November 23 foe, 14-12 behind Mitch Silverstein's two touchdowns. Wayland, which for the first time in the last six years is not going to win the league crown, still showed it has some life left. The Warriors crushed Lincoln-Sudbury, 41-12, after totaling a 34-0 lead at halftime.

Newton South's final game of the 1972 football season will be against Acton-Boxboro on Thanksgiving Day, 10 a.m., at Acton. South is now 3-5. Acton is 4-4. However, the Lions, 3-3, are one game up in the league.

Sports Shorts

It's really too bad that Ross Brooks had to get hurt. The Bruins were playing much better with him in the nets than they had been performing for Eddie Johnston, and Johnston himself admits that he needs a capable replacement from time-to-time. It looks like it just might take a little longer for the B's to get completely untracked and back in the form which won them the Stanley Cup two out of the last three years.

Speaking of winning things two out of the last three years, Johnny Bench pulled a similar maneuver to the Bruins' performance. Bench, last week, claimed the National League's Most Valuable Player award for the second time in three years. This season he batted .270 with 40 homers and 125 RBI's.

Linemen don't win player-of-the-week awards no matter what they do. They get about the same recognition when it comes to balloting for the Heisman Trophy. So it came as quite a shock last week when the Associated Press named Pittsburgh Steeler guard Bruce Van Dyke as its player-of-the-week.

Harvard's "rick Rojas continued his domination over the best cross-country runners in the east, last week, by capturing the Big Three crown in New Haven, Connecticut, over a 4.45-mile course. Rojas came across in 22:27, but Princeton nipped Harvard for the team title with Yale a distant third.

The Bruins' Johnny Bucyk passed his second scoring milestone of the year, last week, by tallying his 1,000th point versus Detroit. Bucyk scored his 400th career goal two weeks ago.

Nobody even noticed, or if they did, they didn't mention it, but the Baltimore Colts had an interesting name on their roster when they breezed into town a couple of Monday nights ago. Skinny wide receiver Cotton Speyrer, 175 whole pounds, used to be a standout player for the University of Texas and hasn't been in the headlines since.

Brown University's football team is improving — ever so slowly. Last year the Providence Bruins were 0-9 on the season. Thus far they're up to 1-5.

The New York football Giants, expected to rank somewhere between the Newton South High Lions and Bridgewater State on the football charts this year, have surprised a lot of people. If you want a hint why, take a look at the NFC statistics before last weekend's game with the Redskins.

Norm Snead is number one in passing with 64.2 per cent completions. Bob Tucker, 29 catches, Ron Johnson, 28, and Charley Evans, 26, are among the receiving leaders. Pete Gogalak is sixth among placekickers. Johnson is third in rushing and tied for second in touchdowns and Evans is two slots behind him. Rocky Thompson leads the conference kickoff returners with a 31.6 mark and Chris Farasopoulos is tops in punt returns with 11.6. In addition, Richmond Flowers, Carl Lockhart, and Pete Athas are among the leaders in interceptions and Tom Blanchard is up there in punting.

It all adds up to a pretty well-balanced team. The big worry now, though, is what to do about replacing Charley Evans. Evans, who broke his leg, is out for the duration and his loss might burst the New York bubble.

Speaking of stats, American International College Little College All-American safety Bruce Laird, now with the Colts, is tops in the league in kick-off returns with a 33.0 average.

Things went pretty much according to form at the New England cross-country championships, last week. Defending champion Dan Moynihan of Tufts romped to an unthreatened 21:51 victory over Franklin Park's five-mile course and Northeastern placed five men in the first 12 to take the team title.

NU's Ken Flanders was the runner-up in 24:11, just ahead of Springfield's Charlie Duggan in 24:14. Randy Thomas, UMass, Bill Gillin, UMass, Joe Crowley, NU, Bill Rowe, NU, Steve Hamel, NU, Bill Cantin, Connecticut, and Jay Haug, Williams, rounded out the top 10. Dave Goldsmith was NU's fifth man in 12th.

Seed gathering MOSCOW (UPI) — The gathering of the seeds of rare and valuable plants has started in the U.S.sri region of the Soviet Far East, the Tass news agency said.

Special teams bring to sorting centers the fruits of actinidia, magnolia vine, Manchurian apricot, pears and other specimens of the Far Eastern flora, Tass said. Requests for the seeds come from more than 100 foreign points, including the United States.

Newton Judo Club Honors 2 Members

The Bay State Judo Club of Newton has awarded "colored-belt" ranks to two of their junior members, as a result of a promotional examination held last Saturday at the club in Newton Centre Playgroud.

Tamara Kan, age 10, of 54 Waban ave., Waban, was awarded the judo rank of Gokyu, or yellow belt. Michael Myers, age 11, of 21 Manet circle, Chestnut Hill, was promoted to the rank of Yonkyu, or orange belt. Both students have been practicing Judo at the Newton Club for about a year.

The Bay State Judo Club is also offering introductory courses in Judo for Adults or Children. Those interested in obtaining more information on these classes may contact the club at 332-5047 or 332-2272. The City of Newton Recreation Department sponsors the Judo program.

Private School Grid Roundup

Bryan LaMarque exploded for touchdowns of 14 and 20 yards to propel Rivers Country Day School of Weston to a 21-0 triumph over St. Sebastian's of Newton, last week.

Bruce Taylor tallied the other touchdown on an 81-yard bomb from quarterback Tom Bell to get things going in the first period. LaMarque scored the two-point conversion after Taylor's burst for a total of 14 points. The Newtonites were never really in the contest.

The Arrows' game before facing Rivers wasn't much happier. They lost, 34-19 to Avon, but sophomore quarterback Tom Giblin connected on 11 of 23 passes for 172 yards, including a 60-yard TD toss.

The Arrows are only 2-5 on the year, but they have something to look forward to next year. The frosh, off a 21-0 rout of Governor Dummer, are now 5-0-1. Peter McManama fired touchdown passes of 45 and 55 yards and hit another pass of 55 yards to spark the victory. McManama should give Arrow coach Joe Guden a pleasant dilemma next fall when he has to decide which quarterback will run the offense.

Mark Vitello Sets Cross Country Mark

Every year the Newton Junior High city meet is run the winner sets a new record. Weeks' Mark Vitello didn't break with tradition. He covered Newton High's 2.6 mile course in 14:32 to crack the year-old 14:40 standard of Tommy Hightower.

Two other competitors went under the 15:00 barrier — Howard Pearce of Bigelow, 14:45, and Vitello's teammate, Ed Konning, 14:59.

Weeks copped the team title with a low score of 26, capturing places one, three, four, eight and 10. Bigelow was second in the team race with a total of 37 points, ahead of Warren, 73, and Day, 99. Warren's top finisher was Bob Freudenberger, ninth in 15:44, and Day's first placer was Jeff Gillboard, 15th, in 16:40.

Newton sophomore Dan Jones of Rivers Country Day School, won the race as expected, but St. Sebastian's cross-country team copped eight places in the top 10, for a 20-43, decision in the Private School League. Jones crossed the line in 13:48.

Dave Walsh, the Arrows' own sophomore sensation, ran all the way with Jones, but finished four seconds off the pace in 13:52. Walsh, who ran third man for St. Sebastian's throughout much of the season, is now top man. He has beaten former leaders Rich Mulroy and John McGoldrick by wide margins in the team's last two outings.

Mulroy placed third against Rivers, with a time of 14:20, and McGoldrick was fourth in 14:34. Dan Murphy, Bob McCue, Steve Maskell, Al Gandolfo, and Steve Shaw, finished fifth through ninth in the contest.

St. Sebastian's completed its season with an 8-4 record, while Rivers was only 2-4.

Another Newton school suffering through a long fall campaign is Our Lady's High. The Lancers are only 1-5, a notch worse off than St. Sebastian's and were recently mauled by St. Clement's, 36-14, in a Catholic Suburban League matchup. St. Clement's 24-point second quarter was what did the Lancers in. Our Lady's entire offense consisted of halfback Tony Colella who churned out 189 yards rushing and scored both touchdowns.

Freedman's Sports Talk...

Celtics Are Red Hot

BY LEWIS FREEDMAN

The arrival of the Golden State Warriors at the Boston Garden, last week, was supposed to be a test for our breaking Celtic heroes. The Warriors, complete with a machine-gun offense featuring Rick Barry, Nate Thurmond, Jeff Mullins, and Cazzie Russell, were 9-2.

The epic battle turned into a monumental rout by the middle of the third period, however, and demoralized the Warriors sufficiently enough so that they were humbled, 121-96, by the Detroit Pistons a few nights later.

What hit the Warriors? A blizzard to be precise. The Celtics' bombers shot with the sharpness of Chuck Connors with the speed and agility of Rod Milburn clearing brush, and passed with the accuracy and exactness of the Boston Globetrotters. That combination could run anyone out of town.

The start of the first quarter wasn't going to make anyone forget the old Celtics — it was more likely to get most fans to forget basketball. It took a minute and 39 seconds for anyone to get on the scoreboard and the caliber of play made it seem like the participants were dodging the storm which raged outside.

John Havlicek, who could have been the prototype for Johnny Tillotson's "Poetry in Motion" got the Celtics moving, and they led, 27-25 at the quarter.

The Warriors are probably still dazed by what transpired in the second stanza. Don Chaney's contortions under the hoop even made Thurmond look like a high schooler on defense and forward Paul Silas' passes and a Havlicek here and a Havlicek there reduced the Warriors' potency to the level of Ding-Dong School. The lead was up to 60-44 before some hot shooting by Barry reduced the margin to 64-54 at the half.

Two notable things occurred during the intermission. It was noted that the evening, November 8, marked Satch Sanders' 34th birthday. Indigenous Janet MacDougall, a 1940 basketball fan, was one of the 7,571 faithful followers, but she differed in one way. It was her birthday, too.

Her wit won both me and my heart, but with 11:02 remaining in the third quarter, despite popcorn and a hot dog as inducements, she rejected my proposal of marriage. However, she graciously accepted the Crackerjack diamond ring I offered as a birthday gift.

My full attention returned to the giants of the hardwood when she gasped — "Wow! John Havlicek is like Plastic Man!" (from DC comics) Havlicek and his amazingly pliable limbs were indeed performing wonderous magic. And equally as astonishingly, Paul Silas, two years ago a 235-pound hulk, was moving with the aplomb of Spiderman (equal time for Marvel Comics).

The way Chaney, Dave Cowens, Hank Finkel, Silas, Havlicek, and Jo Jo White passed, Marquis Haynes couldn't make the team.

Silas, who ended up with 20 points, 13 rebounds, and four assists, was simply unreal. When he took a breather with half the third period left, he got a deserved standing ovation. With 5:17 on the clock in the third it was 87-66 Celtics. Silas, Cowens and Finkel were so effective off the boards that Thurmond, one of the top pivotmen in the league, looked like a tackling dummy just hanging around. Chaney drove down the middle like a train and the whole squad was so dazzling it looked like a scene from the Marx Brothers' At The Circus. It was 104-80 going into the final frame and coach Tommy Heinsohn turned the last fourth of the contest over to the bench.

When the birthday boy made his appearance with 7:06 left, he got a standing ovation and then delighted the crowd by sinking a sweeping hook.

The final tally of 128-111 was that close only because Barry hit for 34 points.

After about a month of play, Boston is on top of the NBA's Atlantic Division with a remarkable record. With the best fastbreak since the old Celtics, there are only two things the new Celtics know how to do — run like hell and win. And who was Bill Russell anyway?

"I think the two leagues are equal," he said. "We play Suburban teams in pre-season scrimmages and do very well against them. Newton and Medford usually dominated that league, but there's quite a drop-off after that. The Dual County League is the same. Lincoln-Sudbury is a powerhouse, but everyone else is even. Next year the league will be tougher. Lynnfield, not a strong team, is moving to the Cape Ann League and is being replaced by Concord-Carlisle, always a tourney team."

Soccer is on a long overdue upswing at Newton South, and if Mike Coven can keep his players hustling and playing aggressive defense, better days are still to come. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

Arts and Crafts At Temple Sinai

Temple Sinai, Coolidge Corner, Brookline, will hold their annual arts and crafts show at the temple, Sunday, Nov. 19, from 2 to 9 p.m. Featured exhibits will include glass blowing, silversmithing, enamel jewelry, home-grown plants, knitwear, candlemaking, exotic foods, and many other crafts. There will be refreshments to take home and to eat on the premises. The event is sponsored by the Temple Sinai Brotherhood, assisted by the sisterhood, and is charmaned by Mr. Theodore Saltzman of Newton Centre. The public is invited.

The Newton South girls' field hockey team completed its 1972 season last week. After getting off to a slow start, the girls were able to "put it all together," dropping only one of their last five games. The team's continued improvement throughout the year is an indication of better things to come.

Newton Lion Pop Warner Team Travels To Canada

Play Ontario As Mosca Meets Dad In Hamilton

BY LEONARD HOLT
The news around Newton these days are that the Newton Athletic Association Lions Pop Warner Football Team will be the first Massachusetts Team to travel out of the country for a football game. The Lions will be traveling to Hamilton, Ontario to play the East Mountain Rough Riders.

Waltham and an All Pro Defensive Tackle for the Hamilton Tiger Cats who will compete for the Grey Cup the same weekend. His son, Angelo Jr., is the star running back of the Rough Riders scoring 15 TD's this season, and is the Lions top threat. The human interest side of that coin is that the Quarterback for the Lions happens to be Mike Mosca, a first cousin of Angelo.

The game will take on many interesting aspects, the first being the fact that the first half of the game will be played under the Canadian Rules and Regulations. And the second half will be played under the American Rules and Regulations.

This is a very special trip for the members of the Lions who only sport a 4-7 record. They will be flying from Logan Airport on Friday morning, Nov. 24th. They will fly into Buffalo Airport and Bus into Hamilton after a tour, which time permitting is expected to include Niagara Falls. The team will arrive back into Massachusetts Logan Airport on Monday.

This trip for the Lions is an expensive endeavor and outside solicitations are urged. Any wishing to contribute may forward their donation to The Newton Athletic Association in c/o Mr. David Sellers, Treasurer, 25 Hardy ave., Watertown, Mass. 02172

N.A.A. Lions Topple Wellesley For 4th Win

BY LEONARD HOLT

The NAA Lions won their fourth game of the year against seven losses by defeating the Wellesley Tornadoes 20-0 on Sunday, November 9th, 1972. The Lions appeared to be hitting harder as the season rolls on, as they are starting to overcome the late start of the late return of a lot of their veterans.

The Lions opened the scoring up in the first period. Mike Mosca, QB, hit Bob Lipson on a 35 yard pass play, Jim Amicangioli rushed the points for an 8-0 lead. In the 2nd period Mosca hit Lipson on the identical pass play covering 28 yards.

In the 4th period Mosca hit Mark Rothmann, the speed merchant, on the right side line who fled 65 yards for the TD and a 20-0 score.

The Lions defense really played well as they recorded their first shut-out of the year. Standouts were Frank Tarantino, who plays great, game after game along with Mark Commerford, two excellent defensive football players. Jim Amicangioli and Gerry Coughlin played a real good game at defensive end as did the interior of the line and the secondary.

Brian Kinsella, Bob Lipson, and Mark Rothmann covered their receivers very well all day. The Lions appear to be improving despite injuries. They have received Andrew Toyias back, however, Sean Daley is out for good, Rich Priore is questionable and Joe Peppers playing chances look dim. Rich Steffans also incurred a slight injury and his status is also questionable.

Offensively Mike Mosca played a good game today after a not-so-good performance last week and the whole backfield of the Lions played very well. Jim Amicangioli, Brian Kinsella, Barry Gale at fullback, Dave Chused-offensive and defensive guards all played quite well. Next week the Lions will host Norwood in a clash between the NAA Lions and the Norwood Powerhouse. Norwood has won their last five games in a row.

The Lions will be going to Canada over the Thanksgiving weekend to play the East Mountain Rough Riders who are 10 and 1. Everybody is looking forward to this and the Lions hope to beat Norwood next week to continue their uphill climb.

Junior Division

In the Junior Midget Division, the last game of the 1972 season was played between the Tigers and the Mustangs, the Tigers winning 6-0. The Tigers Gold Line Stance was the difference in the ball game. Outstanding play of Brian Smith, Sean Foley, Jason Michaels for the Tigers and an overall desire to win the game, proved to be the determining factor. The Tiger defense played outstandingly, the offense showed the defense that they could do the job as they moved the ball down the field in their best march of the year when they were penalized 15 yards and got the first down. This is the first time that the Tigers have been able to do this. John Forti had his best game of the year in running and blocking. Steve Huber and Ricky King played quite well on the outside corners. According to the referees the Tigers line

Tom Gerlach Soccer Star

Tom Gerlach, son of Mrs. Thomas Gerlach, of 262 Otis St., West Newton, Mass., is one of the top freshman prospects this fall, according to the coach of the Haverford College varsity soccer team.

A graduate of Newton High School, where he lettered in soccer for two years, Gerlach is expected by coach Dave Felsen to see a lot of action at the right midfield spot.

"Top is a really top prospect," commented Felsen. "He's moving right in and adjusting to college soccer really well. We're looking for great things from him."

The Haverford soccer team has slated a 14-game schedule this fall. The Fords will take on 11 Middle Atlantic Conference opponents along with non-league foes, LaSalle, Princeton and Drexel.

Last season, the Haverford booters collected seven wins in their final nine games to finish with a 9-6 overall record. Included in that final stretch were victories over favored Drexel, Waltham and nationally-ranked Philadelphia Textile. Felsen hopes to build on last year's successes to improve last season's MAC Southern Division record of 8-4. A returning trio of linemen, along with an experienced fullback crew are the squad's strong points. Pre-season victories over Villanova (7-5), St. Joseph's (3-2) and the Alumni (7-2) indicate that the team is ready to make a serious run at the conference title.

Haverford, a small, liberal arts college, is located in the Philadelphia suburban Main Line community of Haverford, Pa. Despite its small enrollment of 725 men, Haverford offers intercollegiate competition in 12 sports. Nearly every student who wishes to participate may do so.

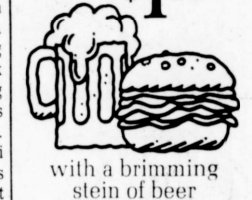

South Places 4 On Soccer All Stars

Newton South's most successful soccer team in school history placed four men on the Dual County League all-star squad, announced last Thursday.

The biggest success story was Lion senior goaltender Ron Berman, who spent the last two years as the club's manager. This year Berman emerged from behind his anonymous pen and statistics to record five shutouts and spark the team to a 6-6-0 mark.

The other three South performers named to the all-league squad were juniors Aris Bidianos, Andy Moore, and Roger Gordon. Bidianos, a two-year regular, was cited at center-halfback, Moore was named as a center-halfback, and Gordon made the team as left wing.

Lifson, Weinstein To Receive Awards At New England Friends Dinner Sunday

The eighth annual National Community Service Award dinner, sponsored by the New England Friends of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, will be held Sunday (Nov. 19) at the Statler Hilton Hotel.

Lawrence L. Suttentberg of Newton is chairman of the dinner.

Special guest will be Sol M. Linowitz, former United States Ambassador to the Organization of American States and Dr. Gerson D. Cohen, new chancellor of the seminary, will deliver the main address.

Maurice H. Lifson of Newton and Lewis H. Weinstein of Waban will receive the National Community Service Award at the dinner.

The award is a bronze plaque conferred each year upon a limited number of communal leaders whose "distinctive and continuing service to the community at large perpetuates the Jewish tradition of involvement in and concern for

Two Concerts
Nov. 20-21

A full orchestra concert and a program of early music will be presented by the New England Conservatory of Music this next week. Richard Pittman will conduct the NEC Repertory Orchestra on Monday, Nov. 20. The concert features Wagner's "Parsifal Prelude," Anton von Webern's "Six Pieces for Orchestra," Op. 6, in the original instrumentation, and Dvorak's "Symphony No. 7" in D minor.

The following evening, Tuesday, Nov. 21, the Collegium Musicum, under the direction of Daniel Pinkham and Kenneth Roth of the NEC faculty, will present its second concert of the current school year. The program includes music of the Italian Renaissance and early Baroque periods, featuring vocal and instrumental works by Frescobaldi, Gabrieli, Monteverdi, and others.

Both concerts this week are scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in Jordan Hall, and are free and open to the public.

Nigerian Night
Thurs., Nov. 16

"Nigerian Night" will be held at the Chapel Hall, Centre St., on the Newton College campus, Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. The event, which is sponsored by the International Club of Newton College, is open to the public at no charge.

Nigerian dances and foods will be featured. Special speakers will include Ijeoma N. Onwenu, a Newton College student whose home is in Nigeria.

He is a professor of hygiene emeritus at Harvard University and consultant on Psychiatry in the Department of Public Health. He is currently serving as vice-chairman of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. The public is invited to attend.

the wellbeing of man."

Weinstein's national posts have included chairmanship of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry, and presidency of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds of the United States and Canada.

Locally, he has served as president of the Jewish Community Council, the Combined Jewish Philanthropies and Hebrew College. He also was general chairman of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies fund-raising campaign.

A colonel in the U.S. Army (Retired), Weinstein has a distinguished military record which includes the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, French Legion of Honor, Croix de Guerre, citations from British Marshal Montgomery, General Eisenhower and General DeGaulle. At the liberation of Paris in 1944, he entered the city with General DeGaulle as American liaison officer.

Reputed as one of the nation's experts in urban renewal, Weinstein was included by President John F. Kennedy as one of the three-member Executive Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing. He has served as chairman of the Massachusetts State Housing Board and the Emergency Housing Commission and drafted the first Massachusetts law outlawing segregation in housing as well as the Commonwealth's first urban renewal legislation.

Weinstein is a trustee of Beth Israel Hospital, Temple Mishkan Tefila, Newton, and the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged. He is a Fellow of Brandeis University and the American Association of Jewish Education, a trustee of the National Foundation of Jewish Culture, and a member of the Executive Council of the American Jewish Historical Society.

Lifson, a member of the Board of Trustees of Temple

Emanuel, Newton, is a patron of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America and of the Associated Synagogues of Massachusetts. He is a trustee of the State of Israel Bonds and the president of the Theodore Herzl Lodge Associates of the Free Sons of Israel. A member of the Market Lodge of B'nai Brith, he also serves on the Greater Boston Council of the Boy Scouts of America. His long and distinguished service to the Zionist Organization of America has been recognized in a Citation of Honor from the group's national president. Lifson and his wife, parents of the late Rabbi Marshall R. Lifson, have endowed several libraries and scholarship funds in memory of their son.

The National Community Service Award will be conferred upon them by Dr. Cohen.

Participating in the presentation ceremonies will be Rabbi Zev K. Nelson, Temple Emeth; Rabbi Samuel Chiel, Temple Emanuel; Rabbi Israel Kazis, Temple Mishkan Tefila.

Beth Avodah School Has New Principal

The lady with the long hair and sparkling eyes at Temple Beth Avodah Religious School is not a student... she's the principal!

Mrs. Judy Aronson, last year's assistant to the principal has been selected co-ordinator and director of the Religious School. By her own definition, she is "a specialist in communication... a non-interventionist administrator, innovator, and dreamer of practical dreams."

A graduate of Brandeis University, she is an active participant in the Alumni Association, and serves on the Brandeis President's Commission on the Status of Women. In addition to being the principal of Temple Beth Avodah, she is an associate of the Women's Opportunity Research Center of Middlesex Community College, where she teaches a class.

Mrs. Aronson was a participant in the Conference of Alternative Pursuits for America's Third Century, which was held in California this past summer, and is a member of the board of Homestead II, an inter-racial youth leadership development camp.

Her background includes educational consultant, home economist, youth leader, camp counselor, folk singer, and religious school teacher, and media sales for WCRB radio.

A Newton resident, she is the mother of three teenagers. She is an involved educator with a positive approach to learning and living. Her understanding of pre-teen and teenage problems has led to many changes in the composition of the school. The classes have been kept small, and the textbooks have been updated. The door to the principal's office is always open, and Mrs. Aronson is constantly available to talk with the young people about any problem that should crop up in the school day. The youngsters are increasingly motivated in their religious school performance because they are so much a part of the temple. The second and third year Hebrew students, for example, participate in a Junior Choir.

The fifth year Hebrew students are producing an original newspaper, voicing their thoughts on everything from world politics and inter-marriage to sports and movies. The seventh and eighth graders in the Sunday School hold a creative service each Sunday morning... and the confirmation Class conducts Family Night Sabbath services. The departmentalized classes make it possible for each teacher to concentrate on his forte. On Sunday (Nov. 19), the parents will have the opportunity of attending school with the youngsters. Parent's Day this year is aptly titled,

"Everything You Have Always Wanted To Know About Sunday School And Never Had The Chance To Ask."

Author To Speak At Jewish Center

Martin Gray, author of the newly published book "For Those I Loved", will be the guest speaker at the Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Center, Sun. Nov. 19, at 8 p.m., at a program in conjunction with Jewish Book Month.

There is no charge for the program and coffee will be served at the conclusion.

Gray, a Polish Jew, relates his story of escape and survival during the years of Treblinka and the Holocaust. "For Those I Loved" has sold over 200,000 copies in France and has been chosen as the main selection of the "Book of the Month Club" for December.

Jewish Book Month, being observed from Oct. 27-Nov. 26, is under the auspices of the Jewish Book Council of America, sponsored by the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), which seeks to develop a year-round interest in Jewish books.

The BBN Jewish Community Center, 50 Sutherland Rd., Brookline, is one of the associated Jewish community centers, a constituent agency of the combined Jewish philanthropies of Greater Boston.

Cushing School Has Threefold Ceremony

A three fold celebration was held recently at the Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center in Hanover.

Formerly known as St. Coletta's School for Exceptional Children, the institution is the final resting place of the late Richard Cardinal Cushing, who asked the Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi of Milwaukee, Wis., to establish the school in 1947.

Archbishop Humberto S. Medeiros of Boston celebrated a private mass at the cardinal's crypt before public ceremonies began. He then celebrated a mass in memory of Cardinal Cushing before a group of more than 500 people in the new Physiotherapy Building which was being dedicated.

Concelebrating the Mass with the Archbishop were: Most Reverend Jeremiah F. Minihan, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston; Most Reverend Joseph F. Maguire, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston; Msgr. Thomas J. Finnegan, Jr., Chancellor of the Archdiocese; Msgr. William F. Glynn, Director of the Propagation of the Faith; Msgr. Joseph T. Alves, Director of Family Counseling and Guidance Centers; Rev. William C. Francis, nephew of Cardinal Cushing; Rev. Richard F. Callahan, Pastor, St. Mary of the Sacred Heart Church, Hanover; Rev. Father John F. Keane, Present

Chaplain of the School; Rev. Father William R. Coen, Former Chaplain; Rev. Father Paul P. Ryne, Former Chaplain; Rev. Father Anthony Deppe, S.V.D., Present Chaplain to the Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi. Rev. Robert L. Jones, Rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Hanover, gave the invocation.

The third event of the day was the presentation of a check from Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Fisher of Waban establishing a scholarship fund in memory of their daughter, Mindy, who had been a student at the school from 1967 until her death in January of this year.

A portrait of Mindy was unveiled and is now hanging in the main lobby of the school. Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Newton, spiritual advisor of the Fisher family, officiated at the ceremony. Sister Shawn, superintendent, accepted the gift from Mr. Fisher and explained that it will enable other students to continue their education and training.

The school offers a special education program for the mildly retarded children who are without serious physical, emotional or behavioral problems. When their academic training is over, the students transfer into the Training Center where they are trained for employment and return to their communities. Since the Training Center was started in 1966, and more than 100 young adults have made use of the facility.

St. Mary's Fair
Sat. Dec. 9

St. Mary's Christmas Fair will be held at the church in Newton Lower Falls on Sat. Dec. 9.

This year you can not only buy Christmas products at the Christmas flea market, but you can also watch the craftsmen demonstrating their techniques and wares.

Mrs. Nancy Bailey, Wellesley

Church's Music Director To Feature Favorite Songs

Lawrence Kisler, director of music at the Centenary United Church, Auburndale, will present a program of organ music in the church sanctuary, 230 Central St., at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The program, which is entitled "Some of My Favorite Organ Pieces and Why I Like Them", will feature the German an French School of composition, ranging from the sixteenth to the twentieth century.

Kisler has been director of music at Centenary Church since 1967. He studied with Dr. Donald Willing at New England Conservatory of Music and with Dr. Max Miller at Boston University.

B'nai B'rith Forms New Unit

The B'nai B'rith Co-ed Singles Unit, a new organization in the Boston area, is open to young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25.

The unit will hold its first open meeting at the Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Centre, Sutherland Rd., Brighton, on Nov. 29.

Temple Emanuel Nursery To Be On TV

Temple Emanuel Nursery School, 385 Ward St., Newton Centre, has been chosen to appear on the "Sonya Hamlin Show" to be aired during the week of Nov. 20.

The television show, featured weekdays from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. on channel 4, has prepared a special program centered around early childhood education and home activities. Various projects and exercises to the very young will be featured.

The following students were selected to participate: Adrienne Rosenberg, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chaim Rosenberg; Meira Shulman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Sidney Shulman; Amy Sheiber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sheiber; Dana Gershengorn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gershengorn; Benjamin Steinberg, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Steinberg; and Martin Hebel, son of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Hebel.

Thanksgiving Day Services At First Church of Christ, Scientist

Thanksgiving Day services open to the public will be held Thursday, Nov. 23, at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Newtonville at 10:45 a.m.

There is no clergy in the Church of Christ, Scientist. The service will be conducted by Edmund M. MacCloskey, the First Reader, and Miss Ruth Houghton, the Second Reader. "I will extol thee, O Lord", will be sung by the soloist, Mrs. Marian H. Haynes, accompanied by Mrs. Shirley R. MacCloskey, the organist.

Individual expressions of gratitude by members of the congregation will be a feature of the service. No collection of any kind will be taken, and all are invited to attend.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon on "Thanksgiving" is this passage from the Bible: "Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing, in every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

The nature of true gratitude is emphasized in commentary to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, including this citation:

"Are we really grateful for the good already received? Then we shall avail ourselves of the blessings we have, and thus be fitted to receive more. Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks. Action expresses more gratitude than speech."

Nature Photographs Displayed At Library

The unique showing of Cambridge artist Eliza McFadden's photographs, now at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St. through Nov. 28, is a rare opportunity to view nature photographs at their very best.

Uncannily perfect, the 30 photographs include images of an unfolding lily, the inside of a tulip, a bee on a hydrangea blossom, and the spiral-shelled whelk. Form both an artistic and technical standpoint, the viewer will find the exhibit compelling.

A well-known and disciplined artist who paints almost every morning, Eliza McFadden used photography initially as a tool to record her paintings, but soon discovered a whole new world of creativity.

"I thought I was really observant," explains Eliza, "but taking photographs really heightens my sensitivity, and concentrating on nature increases my vocabulary of forms, color, and light."

JOSEF ERIC GRODEN CLASSIC GUITAR
527-4358
NEWTON CENTRE

Miss McFadden's photographs, the results of careful preparation and concentrated study, demonstrate a sure sense of design, shape, and form. To create one really choice photograph, the artist may take 20 shots of a particular subject, changing the exposure, manipulating the light or readjusting the focus. The results are stunning.

When not painting or doing photography, Eliza McFadden works with Harvard archaeology professor Dr. Philip Phillips making discoveries about the relationships among the Southeastern American Indians. She researches, writes, and advises on what she sees in particular sets of pre-Columbian artifacts.

Eliza McFadden studied painting at the Boston Museum School from 1949-1953, receiving several scholarships, prizes and awards. She has had one-woman shows at Tufts University, the DeCordova Museum, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Nexus Gallery in Boston. Her works have been exhibited at the Institute of Contemporary Art, the Silvermine Guild in Connecticut, the Boston and Portland Arts Festivals, the Boston University Gallery and the Cambridge Art Association. The Newton Free Library exhibit, with a complementary group of books on photography, will remain on view through Nov. 28.

Main Library hours are Monday-Friday, 9-9; Saturday, 9-5:30; and Sunday, 1-4.

Jewish Exhibit In Recognition Of Book Month

The Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, in recognition of Jewish Book Month, is exhibiting special objects and holiday items loaned by Mr. Maurice Tuchman of the Hebrew College in Brookline.

This year's theme for Jewish Book Month, "Israel: Land of the Book," celebrates the 25th Anniversary of the state of Israel.

The exhibit features a tree of life plate with a Hebrew inscription of the twelve tribes, a scroll of New Israel, two Torah rollers, a spice box and a small silver box with a Hebrew inscription from the Song of Songs.

Selected books on the history of Israel and the Jewish people, fiction by Jewish authors, and books on the traditions of Judaism will be on display and available for circulation.

Main Library hours are Monday-Friday, 9-9; Saturday, 9-5:30; and Sunday, 1-4.

Greenberg On B.U. Dean's List

Fred B. Greenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Greenberg, 151 Truman Rd., Newton, is on the dean's list of Boston University's College of Business Administration. A grade point average of 3.0 on a scale of 4.0 is needed to qualify for the dean's list.

A 1969 graduate of Newton South High School, the 21 year old senior is majoring in business administration. He plans to go on to graduate school.

SPEAKER — Sidney Croll, Newton Highlands, a long-time board member of the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes, will be one of the speakers at the 23rd annual meeting of the Federation at the Chateau de Ville, Framingham on Wed. Dec. 6, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

City Man Given Teaching Award

A Newton man, Wallace Gleekman, has been selected for the American Chemical Society's James Bryant Conant Award in High School Chemistry Teaching for the northeast region, which comprises New England and New York state. Gleekman teaches at Brookline High School.

The award of $1000 and a certificate was established in 1965 by E. I. DuPont de Nemours Co. and awarded through the American Chemical Society to recognize and encourage outstanding teachers of high school chemistry in the United States.

Gleekman is at present on a sabbatical leave of absence in Israel, and will accept presentation of the award on his return next year. In his career at Brookline High, he has been a housemaster as well as a teacher of chemistry and biology, and has been in charge of the science fair and symposium for several years.

Good old days — Such a feat might be impossible now, but the Georgia State Capitol was erected within its budget. The legislature appropriated $1 million for the project, which was begun in 1884 and finished in 1889 with a balance of $118.43.

Solo Performance For Symphony Orchestra

The Newton Symphony Orchestra, now in its seventh season, will present in Newton's Meadowbrook Junior High School auditorium guest soloist Phyllis Moss in the first concert on December 3. Miss Moss, known in non-professional circles of Newton as Mrs. Herbert Graetz, will be featured in Beethoven's 4th Piano Concert.

Music Director, Michel Saxon will conduct the orchestra in a program which also includes performances of Prokofiev's 5th Symphony and Rimsky-Korsakov's Russian Easter Overture.

Guest Soloist

Born in Philadelphia, Phyllis Moss studied under Mme. Isabelle Vengerova and was awarded a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music when she was 11 years old. At 12, she made her Philadelphia debut at a concert of the Philadelphia Symphonietta, and performed as a soloist in New York with the New York Federal Symphony at age 15.

Since graduating from Curtis, Miss Moss has toured extensively which included being a soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra; the Boston Pops Orchestra; the Bamberg Symphony; the Boston Civic Symphony and many other orchestras.

Miss Moss has been on the faculty of Wellesley College as a teacher and performing musician since 1967. In 1961, she and Roger Sherman and Martin Hoehner of the Boston Symphony formed the Boston Trio. The trio has given many performances, at Tanglewood, Jordan Hall, and elsewhere.

"Critique Night" At Art Association

The Newton Art Association plans to hold a Critique Night tonight (Nov. 16) at 7:30 p.m. in the Woman's Club of Newton Highlands, 72 Columbus St.

Members of the Association will bring their paintings to the meeting and Norman Brule will study them and offer suggestions concerning composition, use of color and design.

Brule, is a graduate of the School of Worcester Art Museum, Massachusetts College of arts, Boston University, and has been honored by Bennington College, where he has been awarded the John Hay Fellowship. His teaching career has been devoted to the elementary and secondary schools of Belmont and Lexington.

He has been active in local art associations having served in an official capacity in the Watertown Art Association and the Belmont Arts and Crafts Society for several years.

Brule favors an abstract or impressionistic style of painting and has had paintings on exhibit in many local shows.

The public is invited to attend this meeting. Refreshments will be served by the hospitality committee, consisting of Pertie Y. Holly, Chairman, and assistants, Elizabeth Selden, Elvira Sutor, Helen Clancy, and Jan Holly. Guests will make a donation of $1.

Waban Club Will Hear Book Review

Mrs. Mae Whalen Taylor will review new books on fiction, biography and humor when the Waban Woman's club meets Monday, Nov. 20. Mrs. Taylor has a background in journalism and conducts a television book review program for patients at Salem hospital. She also authors a newspaper column.

Mrs. Harvey Alexander, Jr., with the assistance of Mrs. Boyd Johnson, Mrs. Harold Johnston, Mrs. Edward Lafferty, Mrs. Damon Carter and Mrs. Kenneth Rogers will serve dessert and coffee at 12:30 p.m.

At 1 p.m. Miss Adelaide Ball will describe activities of the Intercommunity Home Makers' service. Mrs. Edward Prien will be in charge of a "Pennies for Art" collection sponsored by the state federation to create student scholarships.

Seven delegates of the Waban club attended the fall meeting of the state federation in Amherst. They were Mrs. Don Fawcett, Mrs. Henry Lambert, Jr., Mrs. Robert McWilliams, Mrs. James Mitchell, Mrs. Joseph Morog, Mrs. Alfred Weaver and Mrs. Darthea Wells.

Would you like your child to feel close to God?

The simplicity of children makes them very receptive to love. And to God.

In the Christian Science Sunday School, children learn that God is Father and Mother to us all. They learn that all mankind belongs to one spiritual family—and how this truth draws members of an individual family closer together.

We would love to meet you and your family this Sunday.

Professor Addresses Aid To Blind

"We serve, we teach, we leave." With these six words, Professor Isaac Michaelson, ophthalmologist, recently described an eye care program developed by the State of Israel on behalf of four African nations to a Boston Aid to the Blind audience.

Visiting old friends in Boston, including Dr. and Mrs. Albert E. Sloane, Chestnut Hill, Prof. and Mrs. Michaelson gave accounts of services extended to the visually handicapped.

He was born in Glasgow and settled in Israel after becoming enamored with the country while in Middle East service with the British Army. Internationally recognized for research on the circulation of the eye, he is professor of ophthalmology at the University Medical School and head of the Department of Ophthalmology at Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Michaelson, a Sabra, is director of the Society For The Care of the Blind in Israel. The organization she heads started to serve 600 blind persons some 20 years ago and now is central to a network of 20 such Israeli societies serving 7000 people. Prof. Michaelson told BAB board members that he visited the African countries at the invitation of the governments of the four nations. After assessing needs of the many visually handicapped people of the African lands, he instituted the following comprehensive program.

First, he left with the government officials plans for construction of small eye hospitals, to be completed in six months. In the time, two native African nurses were brought to his department of ophthalmology in Hadassah Hospital. One was trained to take charge of the operating room, the second trained to run an outpatient department.

At the end of six months, the two nurses returned to their countries along with two fully trained Israeli eye doctors who had received residency training at the eye department of Hadassah Hospital. As a team, they now serve their own communities and train additional nurses and paramedical personnel.

Next the overall plan calls for an African doctor to go to Israel to train in the eye residency program at Hadassah Hospital. On completion of first class training, the doctor returns to his own country and replaces the Israeli physician. Prof. Michaelson, whose pioneering program has received world-wide praise, also conducts a trachoma control program in Ethiopia. Noting that political upheavals have interfered with these international efforts, he declared "Good will prevail".

Active now at an administrative level, Mrs. Michaelson is constantly expanding her program of rehabilitation for the blind. Distinctive approaches are made to two groups: those entirely without sight and those declared legally blind but partially sighted. She started a program in Israel similar to Boston Aid to the Blind for aid and rehabilitation of the blind.

Damon Lodge Honors Gelerman

Maruice Gelerman, past grand chancellor of the domain of Massachusetts, will be honored by the Damon Lodge, No. 12, Knight of Pythias, at the Sidney Hill Country Club, Chestnut Hill, on Thursday evening, Nov. 20.

Past grand chancellor Gelerman is being honored not only by the members of his own lodge, but also by his many Pythian brothers and sisters from the Domains of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. They will come to pay tribute to him in recognition of his many years of exceptionally dedicated service to the Pythian Order.

Festivities will commence with a cocktail party in the Cascade Room after which a banquet will be served in the Tiara Room. Following the dinner the guest of honor will receive the plaudits of many civic, fraternal and communal organizations. There will be entertainment and music.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the conferring of a "Life Membership Award" upon Gelerman by the chancellor commander of Damon Lodge, Barry Schneider.

Hospitals Know How To Make Friends

Going to the hospital can be a pretty trying experience for a child who is overwhelmed by all the uniforms, elaborate equipment and strange terminology. But for 22 third graders from Newton's Mason-Rice School, going to Beth Israel Hospital wasn't scary at all.

It was fun. In order to learn how a hospital functions, Miss Becky Partridge's third grade class recently traveled to the Beth Israel Hospital. They toured a number of the hospital's departments and met many different people with a wide variety of jobs.

They visited the admitting office, main kitchen, laundry, animal farm, radiology department, blood bank, and some of the laboratories. They were surprised to learn how many different people beside doctors and nurses are necessary to make sick people well.

The highlight of the morning's tour was a visit to the Cast Room, where Dr. Harris Yett, Head of the Department of Orthopedics, put a souvenir case on one of the children.

As the group was smacking on milk and cookies after the tour, there were many comments that showed they were no longer afraid of going to the hospital. They took home souvenir surgical masks and caps and a great deal of information about what really goes on at Beth Israel Hospital.

Students had a chance to tour the Beth Israel kitchen which prepares more than 5,000 meals per day.

"A look at what's inside" was provided during a visit to the Beth Israel Radiology Department.

Bernstien To Open Boston's Romantic Series

Leonard Bernstein will open the Boston Symphony Orchestra's romantic series on Wed., Nov. 22 at 8:30 p.m.

Bernstein will open the series with works by Mozart, Wagner and Berlioz. He will begin the concert with Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G minor, followed by Wagner's Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" and will close the concert with three orchestral excerpts from "Romeo et Juliette" by Berlioz.

The romantic series consists of three concerts, which will take place on: Nov. 22, Jan. 25, and March 1.

Subscriptions for the Thursday Series range from $10 to $16.50.

City Policeman Is School Grad.

Detective Richard M. Fobes, the Newton Police Department, was one of 74 graduates of 74 graduates of Attorney General Robert H. Quinn's 24th Basic Drug Abuse Education School, Northern Essex Community College, Haverhill.

Paul A. Good, first assistant attorney general will be the keynote speaker at the graduation, Thursday, Nov. 16.

The two-week school was established in accordance with Chapter 889, the "Drug Rehabilitation Act," sponsored by Quinn in 1969. The program is aimed at presenting to the policeman all aspects of the drug problem, including the history of drug traffic, psychological and pharmacological aspects of drugs, and methods of treating the drug dependent person.

Over 1100 police officials from throughout the state have completed the course.

Turkey Tilts On Tap For Two Newton Teams

By FRANK WALL

The two Newton High School football teams will swing into action in the annual Thanksgiving traditional game on Thursday morning, with the Newton High Tigers looking for a berth in the first high school super bowl when they host a strong Brookline team in one of the oldest rivalries in the state, while the Newton South football team will journey to Acton-Boxboro and attempt to up their league record to 4-3.

Jim Ronayne and his Tigers are rated as one of the top schoolboy teams in the state, sporting a fine 7-1 record, and it has been assured that if the Newton eleven can topple arch-rival Brookline on Thanksgiving morning they will gain a berth in the first High School Super Bowl to be played on Saturday, December 2nd at 1:30 p.m. at the Boston University Field.

One of the teams in the Super Bowl is Brockton who whipped the Tigers by a 34-7 record earlier in the year, but the Newton team is a much improved unit since that first meeting.

It will be no easy task for Ronayne's charges to whip the Brookline team, who have compiled a 6-2 record this year and have a man whom Ronayne calls "The best football player in the state" in linebacker Bill Seibolt.

Chore
"He is the man we must stop and that's going to be some chore. He stands at 6-3 and is a 230 pounder who is the fastest player on the team, and is also used at fullback when the short yardage is needed. In fact, he is probably faster than any player on our team and already has offers from just about every college in the country. He is a

Drug Store Surveillance Increased

Stepped-up police surveillance and additional patrolmen have been deployed near drug stores in Newton in an effort to curtail the series of drug store robberies occurring here in recent months.

Twenty-one local druggists met Monday with Chief of Police William F. Quinn, who mapped out the department's strategy for battling the robberies, numbering 14 in the past three months.

According to Quinn, police officers will work overtime to accomplish the surveillance. They will be checking area drug stores three and four times each night.

Newton police are paid straight-time rates for overtime, Quinn noted.

SHOTS
Three drug store holdups were staged in the past week, one of them involving gun fire. A 20-year-old Newton girl was shot at last Tuesday during the robbery of Langley Pharmacy at 431 Langley Rd.

May Hold Meeting On Lower Falls

Officials from the Department of Community Affairs have promised to meet with the Newton Redevelopment Authority within the next two or three weeks to discuss its problems.

DCA officials declined to comment on what action is being considered in relation to the authority, but withdrawal of state approval of Lower Falls plans might be one of the things being considered.

The Lower Falls project has been held up on several counts since early in the fall. The state had asked that the land be reappraised because the original appraisals were old and had not approved the reappraisal.

An official said another central issue in the matter is the taking of land belonging to Wellesley developer Martin J. Roach. Roach has filed two lawsuits in the matter but a determination has not been made.

Dudman, Carroll To Run Public Works

Appointments implementing the reorganization of the Public Works Department were approved Monday night by the Newton Board of Aldermen 13-10.

The vote paves the way for the take over "shortly," according to the mayor, of the department by Richard Dudman as acting director of Public Works and John Carroll of Dedham as the assistant director.

Salaries approved by board vote are $20,000 for Carroll and $23,000, his regular salary, for current Director of Public Works Willard S. Pratt who will move over to fill the slot of water commissioner.

On a vote of 18-5, aldermen also approved making the current acting water commissioner, Carmelo Tempesta, the superintendent of water.

Dudman's salary is to be $21,500.

Opposition, as it has since the appointments were proposed, centered around Dudman.

DIVIDED OPINION
Alderman Joseph McDonnell, chairman of the aldermanic Public Works Committee, explained his committee's tie vote as "indicative of the divided opinions among the committee."

Those that voted against the package were objecting, he

Dial "M" For Murder

Residents Air Phone Service Complaints

By CYNTHIA BLACK

"The number you have reached has been disconnected."

In Newton, it appears to be possible to dial virtually anyone and get that message — even the operator, according to one resident's testimony.

And trouble completing calls was only one of a host of problems that were covered last week at a hearing on the city's telephone service before the Dept. of Public Utilities (DPU).

The DPU was presented with petitions and letters from less than satisfied telephone customers and spent five hours hearing testimony from the Newton people that decided to appear in person.

Rebuttal

The turnout was so good, in fact, New England Telephone did not have a chance to present its side of the story and the hearing will reconvene on Nov. 27 at City Hall for the rebuttal.

The city, represented by Attorney Sanford Kowal and Assistant City Solicitor Jason Rosenberg, is arguing for a rate reduction until service is brought up to general standards.

Illustrating the lack of service were the people that testified to a plague of delayed dial tones, busy circuits, disconnected calls, failure to have calls dialed completed, busy signals on lines that are not in use, failure of phones to ring at the home of the party called, the inability of operators to complete calls, and crackling static on many calls that are completed.

The testimony of Kay Casten of 72 Oxford Rd., Newton Centre, typified much of what was said at the hearing.

"Some days I can get through all the times and on the other days I can't get a dial tone or I can't complete my calls."

She recalled one incident of trying to reach a baby sitter to tell her she would not be needed. When she could not complete the call, she tried to get through via an operator.

Pity

"The operator told me she pities the people in Newton," Mrs. Casten said.

"Our telephone service is very poor," she said. "I want my phone in case of emergency. We have only one phone system — we can't make a choice for better service."

Mrs. Casten also mentioned a second incident with an operator who could not get her call through.

"We decided I would write to the party and she would keep trying and we'd see who got through first. I never heard from her."

Norman Aronson related his problems of moving his business, getting new telephone numbers, and having the operators fail to give out the new exchanges.

Disconnected

Aronson testified that although there was a written order for referral, for the first two weeks in the new office no calls were being referred and after that people were being referred to the old numbers.

"I've had at least 25 complaints from clients," he told the DPU commissioners.

At one point, he said, he dialed "0" to get an operator and got the recorded message: "The number you have reached has been disconnected."

Another businessman with offices in Newton Highlands, Irving Miller of 855 Chestnut St., Waban, said it is "almost impossible to direct dial a call without operator assistance."

"Delayed dial tones, lack of response and busy signals are a daily occurrence," Miller testified.

He also related a specific incident in which his wife spent 15 minutes trying to call the office one day last month and consistently got a busy signal. Finally, he said, she got an operator to complete the call and got through.

"During the entire 15 minutes," Miller said, "one or both of my lines were free."

Losses

Kowal asked if he felt there were financial ramifications to the amount of time spent trying to complete calls.

Miller said yes.

Reflecting on the potential dangers of a lack of telephone service, Cecily Kramer of 65 Osborne Path told the commissioners of an incident where she was home confined to bed by her doctor.

The doctor decided to change a medication, she explained, and instructed his nurse to call and inform Mrs. Kramer. The nurse called, but the phone did not ring, she said.

By coincidence, Mrs. Kramer said she decided to call the doctor, and after a lecture about leaving home when she was confined to bed, he told her of the change in medication.

"Maybe nothing serious would have happened if I had not found out — but it could have," she said.

Roulette

She also testified to losses of service of up to a week in duration and said she and her neighbors "play roulette going to each other's homes to report phones out of order."

Marilyn Sicurella of 4 Warwick Rd., West Newton, complained of failures on the part of operators to answer.

She said she had taught her children to dial "0" for operator in cases of emergency, but has had instances when the phone has rung "20 times" without any response from an operator.

"I retrained my children to dial the police number," she told commissioners.

She also said that it is impossible to get a dial tone after 4 p.m.

After the delayed dial tone had been brought up several times by witnesses, Attorney Edward Hannefy, representing the Telephone Company, explained that the best thing to do in this case is to just wait. He said that jiggling the phone to speed the process up, or hanging up and trying again does not work as well because callers "lose their place in line."

One woman retorted: "If there's a grease fire in my kitchen should I just stand there and wait until I can call the Fire Dept.?"

Tin Cans

A Chestnut Hill businessman commented that residents might be better off with "two tin cans and some string."

A Wellesley businessman, who arrived at the hearing carrying a shopping bag, testified to problems with his service that have been going on since he opened his office a few months ago. He related numerous trips made to the Route 9 office by telephone company repairmen who assured him that the problem was in the cable and not in his lines.

And then he explained that another repairman had been called a few days ago. He pulled a tangled mass of colored wires from the bag.

"These are all wires that did not belong in the system," he said.

City officials also appeared at the hearing. Mayor Theodore D. Mann was the first to testify before the commissioners and he called on the DPU to require the Telephone Company to allocate sufficient funds for a "speedier correction of all substandard telephone service in Newton before the proposed 1974-75 date."

Tools

State Representative David J. Mofenson said he was "convinced that the answers to many of our difficulties at this time lie not so much in new legislation as they do in the enforcement of laws that already exist."

"I believe the DPU does not have to wait for legislation to act," he said. "It has the tools to protect the consumer."

Mofenson said he thought it should be the legislature's contribution to see that the DPU had the "manpower and staff" to do its job.

"I will continue to press for these changes," Mofenson stated. "We have an opportunity here to strike a blow in favor of the consumer."

He also said that he supports the bid for lower rates "when service falls below satisfactory standards."

Another complaint lodged with the DPU was the metropolitan service area as applied to Newton in relation to surrounding towns.

Unlimited metropolitan service, as designated in the directory, entitles Newton residents to call all metropolitan Boston exchanges, Burlington and Lynn.

The towns of Bedford, Lexington, Lincoln, Needham, Waltham and Wellesley are also entitled to call without a toll: Beverly, Billerica, Brockton, Concord, Danvers, Dover, Framingham, Lynnfield, Marblehead, Medfield, Natick, North Reading, Norwell, Peabody, Rockland, Salem, Saugus, Scituate, Sharon, Stoughton, Sudbury, Walpole, Wayland and Wilmington.

Service

Testifying on this issue, Morris Horowitz of 97 Beaumont St., Newtonville, explained that while he could call relatives in Framingham toll free from his summer home in Hull, he had to pay to call from Newton.

He said he sent a letter in regard to the matter in September and received a reply stating that the policy is not intended to be discriminatory and the rates and areas were established in 1959.

Horowitz said he thought the matter should be revamped, and Kowal commented "I think he (Horowitz) is asking you to take a look at the logic of the situation."

The testimony was presented to DPU commissioner John Verani and commissioners Herbert E. Tucker, Rudolph Sacco, Irving Kane and Edward Seferian.

Attorney Paul Galvani is assisting Hannefy with the representation of the Telephone Company.

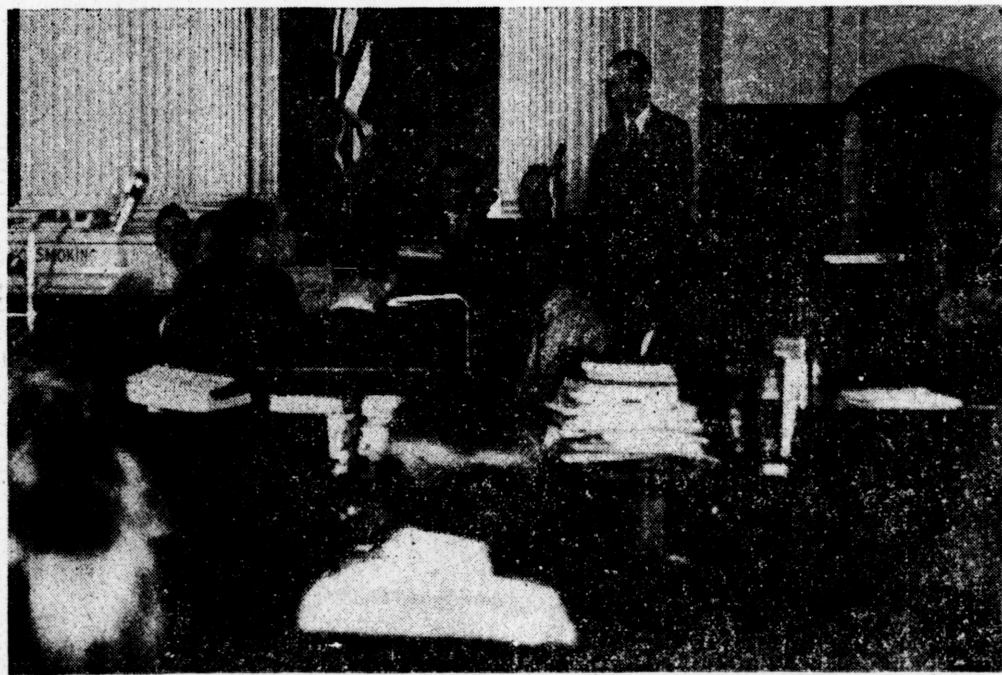

The continuance Nov. 27 will begin at 10 a.m. in the aldermanic chambers at City Hall.

Thank You . . .

I want to thank all the voters who supported me and campaign workers who helped in my re-election to the State Senate.

It was an heartening endorsement of my legislative efforts and I sincerely appreciate your confidence.

Senator Irving Fishman

Using Pesticides In Newton Reviewed By Conservators

Use of pesticides in Newton was the principal subject of discussion at the regular monthly meeting of the Newton Conservators, held on Nov. 8 at the home of Conservators' president, Dr. H. Garrison Wilkes of Waban.

Also discussed were problems of zoning, flood plain protection, and regional transportation issues.

The pesticide report by Mrs. Deborah V. Howard, a director of the Conservators, divided use of chemical insecticides into two categories: mosquito control and plant-eating insect control.

In the latter category, there is the spraying of methoxychlor for control of Dutch Elm disease, and the annual general spraying of the city's trees with Sevin. While the spraying for Dutch Elm disease appears to have some benefit if properly timed in date application, Mrs. Howard said, there is reason to doubt both the safety and efficacy of the Sevin application.

High doses of Sevin have been shown to produce congenital malformations in mammals, though there is no reported human case traceable to the chemical. The question of efficacy is at best unresolved. Sevin kills insects indiscriminately, eliminating both the target insect, the predators that normally keep it under control, as well as honey bees and other pollinating insects.

Thus the annual peak outbreaks of cankerworms that are seen in Newton oaks in early June are not observed in Massachusetts Audubon reservations where there is no spraying. Cankerworms are the small green worms that eat the soft parts of leaves and leave the main stem and ribs, giving them a skeleton-like appearance.

In the mosquito-control program a great variety of chemicals are used. The original purpose of mosquito control which began more than 100 years ago was to protect the public from malaria.

There has been no malaria in this area for many years, and the principal purpose of the program today is nuisance control.

The old standby method of destroying larvae in catch basins either by poisoning or by covering the water with a thin layer of petroleum to clog the breathing tubes is still used. So is the use of Flit MLO (an oil suspension) and Pyrethrum.

In addition fogging with malathion, an extremely toxic chemical, is used. Mrs. Howard recommended that the use of malathion be stopped, if for no other reason than the danger of building up a resistant population that would be extremely dangerous in the event of a new malaria outbreak.

Other pesticide considerations include lawn service and golf course use, and Mrs. Howard appealed for help in monitoring the sale and use of pesticides for these purposes. Anyone wishing to become involved in this or other programs of the Conservators is invited to write to Dr. H. Garrison Wilkes, 129 Moffat Rd., Waban or phone 244-3174.

NEWTON RECREATION COMMISSION — meets on the third Monday of the month (except July and August), at the Recreation Department office, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, at 7:45 p.m. The public is invited to attend and bring requests or suggestions to the commission. The commission is composed of nine members—one for each ward, plus the department head. Seated (from left)

Ward 6, Mrs. Worthing L. West; Ward 8, Dr. Burton D. Levine, vice-chairman; Ward 3, Paul J. Burke, chairman; John B. Penney, recreation commissioner and commission secretary, Marjorie Lesbirel. Standing: Ward 5 Joseph Seldon; Ward 2, Howard Ferguson; Ward 4, Francis Rice; Ward 1, Frank Fitzpatrick, and Ward 7, G. Nicholas Dawson.

Braeburn Home Holds Fall Events

The Braeburn Nursing Home, Waban Square, has conducted numerous events during the fall season.

Residents took a motor trip through Weston, Concord and Stone viewing the autumn foliage. The excursion included a visit to an apple orchard with apples for all the visitors.

Andy Caroselli visited the home and entertained with piano playing. He conducted a sing along with old favorites which led to dancing by a number of residents.

Apple head dolls were displayed in the recreation center by Mrs. Dolly Daniels, Natick who explained the process used in this early American craft.

Afternoon tea has become a regular social hour with home made treats provided by the staff members. Mrs. Jane Kopelman, social worker and Mrs. Barbara Lidman, activities director, have served as pourers.

Frank P. Pickett, Newton organist and choral director, brought his Remecon singers (Retired Mens Glee Club of Newton) for a program of song, ranging from hymns to show tunes.

Nursing home residents have been involved in a service project for the Newton-Wellesley Hospital. More than 1000 bags of cotton balls have been packed by them.

College Representative At Newton South High On Wednesday, Dec. 13

Francis B. Gummere, Jr., director of admissions at Lake Forest College in Illinois, will visit Newton on Wednesday, Dec. 13, to discuss options available to liberal arts students at Lake Forest.

Gummere will be at Newton South High School at 8:45 a.m. that day, and at Newton North High School at 10:15 a.m.

Rec. Dept. Develops City's Sports Events

The Street Hockey programs for both boys and girls sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department have been concluded, according to recreation intern, Austin Moore.

He reports the programs were highly successful in this first year and will probably be expanded next season.

Moore also reports that Newton High School's head basketball coach Jerry Phillips, has volunteered to conduct a Basketball Clinic under the auspices of the Recreation Department.

The program will be conducted Wednesday from 6:15 to 8 p.m. at the Warren Junior High School in West Newton. The clinic will feature "fun drills" and scrimmages.

Rosters are still being accepted for the three divisions of the Newton City Basketball League which begins play the first of the year. Interested Newton teams should call 969-3171.

The age brackets for each division are: pony Junior high, directed by recreation supervisor Robert E. Doherty; National - High school, directed by recreation intern Austin Moore and American - 18 and older, directed by recreation supervisor William J. Barry. Each division will have from six to eight teams playing this year.

Bob Doherty points out that the special class swim program at the Sidney Hill Country Club is now in its fifth week, with Newton Police officer, Gilbert Champagne as instructor.

On Mondays special class students from the Junior and Senior high schools swim. Tuesdays are reserved for students from the Countryside and Hamilton Schools, and Thursdays, it is the turn of the special class students from the Oak Hill School. After the first of the year, the students from the Peabody School will be enrolled in the program which will continue for 12 weeks.

Doherty emphasizes the tremendous contribution that students from Boston College, Pine Manor and Mt. Ida Junior Colleges make to the program by volunteering their services.

The many programs at schools conducted by the Recreation Department through the indoor winter season began operating on Nov. 13, and will continue through spring.

They offer a multitude of activities geared to the interests of all age groups from elementary through college and are conducted on specific nights for boys and girls. Further information may be obtained by calling, 969-3171.

Starting on Dec. 2, the Saturday afternoon basketball

The Second Annual Bookworm Ball, which is co-sponsored by the Friends of the Newton Free Library and the library staff, will be held in the main library building, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner on Saturday, Dec. 2 from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Programs will be held for Junior and Senior high school boys. The program will be offered at the Bigelow, Weeks, Warren and Meadowbrook Junior High Schools and will continue through March of 1973.

In addition to the Saturday afternoon sessions, the program will be conducted between the same hours, 1:30 - 4:30 p.m. on school holidays. This activity has been sponsored by the Recreation Department for seven or eight years, and now attracts an average of 70 to 100 young men at each school. At Meadowbrook, with its four gyms, 40 boys can be playing at one time. Doherty calls this one of the Department's most successful programs.

The Newton Recreation Department will be sponsoring basketball clinics for 5 and 6 grade girls. The clinics will start Saturday, Dec. 2, 10 a.m. - noon at the Day Junior High. During the 8 week sessions, the girls will be exposed to basketball techniques, drills and games. All girls interested should bring their sneakers and appropriate clothing.

Mike Segal's Orchestra, led by Jerry Daddio, Framingham, will include songs of the 50's, 40's and the 30's according to Mrs. Alan Barkin, chairman of entertainment.

Guests will enjoy a gourmet buffet arranged by Mrs. Harry Cohen of the Library Staff and prepared by the Newton Free

Sons Of Italy To Hold Dance

The second Annual Purple Aster Dinner Dance sponsored by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Order of Sons of Italy in America, will be held at the Chateau de Ville in Framingham on Saturday evening, Nov. 25.

All proceeds will benefit the Grand Lodge Charitable and Education Trust Fund.

The committee is headed by Grand Trustee Henry Frisora with Grand Trustee Irene Granara as co-chairman. All proceeds from the affair will benefit the Charitable and Educational Trust Fund.

A champagne social hour will precede the dinner. Among the invited guests will be supreme officers and their wives who will be in Boston for a Plenary Meeting of the supreme lodge, representing their own state.

It is estimated that approximately 1,200 persons will participate this year, topping last year's attendance of 1,000.

Library staff, with dessert and coffee planned for the late-evening intermission.

The Library will be made into a ballroom with decorations arranged by Jim Bottomley of Spaceforms, Inc., Aburndale. Bottomley has won national recognition for his designs and his three-dimensional paper sculptures. The spaceform will remain on view in the Library during the holiday season.

Mrs. George Brewer, chairman of the Ball, and her

Three Runners Are 'Y' Winners

Ron Drogin, Holliston, won for the third consecutive year, the Newton YMCA's sixth annual turkey trot which was recently held at the three-mile Watertown course.

Drogin, who is a supervisor for the Aetna Life Insurance Company, won the 39-and-under division with a time of 15:02.5, which is some 10 seconds off the event record. Dave Voyr also of Holliston, finished second, with a 15:45 time and Bruce Migell, Newton, came in third.

Stan Keyes, Wayland, defended his title in the 40-49 division with a 16:47 time while Mel Holland, Lexington, came in second. Ken Billings, Newton, placed third. He is a self employed electrical contractor.

John Dearden and Socrates Sotir finished second and third behind Pete Chamberlain, Wellesley, in the 50-and-over race.

Twelve-pound turkeys were awarded to the three winners of the events.

Exhibition At Gallery 'Psychiatric'

"The Truth: Do You Like It?", an original "psychiatric" acrylic painting exhibit by Newton artist John Collins continues weekdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Dec. 8, at Polyarts' Main Street Gallery, 863 Main St., Cambridge.

Dealing with the theme of the human condition, Collins' "anti-traditional" works are comments on love, hate, sexuality, time, space and alienation.

A graduate of the Cranbrook Academy of Arts in Michigan, the artist and his wife and nine-year-old son live in a large house he describes as having "six skylight rooms and one waterbed room."

Collins is an art teacher at Meadowbrook Junior High School.

His display at Polyarts is highlighted by poetry and drawings.

Families Needed

At the present time, there are many adolescents in Newton who are in "acute need" of alternative housing, according to David Parachini of the Dept. of Mental Health.

"In a mobile society, the extended family is no longer around the corner," he explained. "Frequently young people who cannot communicate with their own families find escape, either chemical or physical, to be the only alternative available to them."

To respond to this need, a task force composed of staff members from adolescent and family agencies in the community have formed Families Extended. It will be a network of good, temporary living arrangements for young people; emergency homes as well as longer term arrangements.

Built into this program is an in-depth orientation program as well as an on-going supervision for both the foster family and the adolescent.

Families interested in volunteering can call 969-5917 and ask for Parachini or Joan Kuntz.

St. Paul—A new machine is now able to manufacture butter without churning and is said to be satisfactory.

Museum Guides

Four Newton residents will be among 48 trained volunteers who will escort families, organizations and those attending special meeting events at the Museum of Science.

Included in the list are Mrs. Jerome Haller, Newtonville, Dr. G. Kenneth Mallory and Mrs. Geoffrey Smith, both of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Thomas Metz, Newton Centre.

The volunteers have had training in a series of eight classes at the museum which introduces them to its history and purposes and its staff and major exhibits.

Church Ends An Era: Part I

First Church of Newton, in existence since 1664, will hold its final worship service Sunday (Nov. 26), at 3 p.m.

The congregation voted earlier this summer to sell the building, located in Newton Centre, to the Greek Evangelical Church, a metropolitan-wide congregation serving people of Greek heritage.

Rev. Newell H. Curtis Jr., pastor of the Congregational church since 1967, said recently that "after extensive efforts to merge or consolidate with other congregations were not accomplished, and with a large church building and the rising costs of maintenance, and with declining and aging membership, the decision was made to sell the building and to disassemble while there was still a vital segment of the congregation able to execute its will."

On Nov. 14, the church held the last of its congregational meetings, the first of which was held when the church was founded 308 years ago, to petition the court for dissolution and to determine the disposition of its material possessions which are also subject to court approval. The meeting was chaired by Julian D. Anthony.

Concerned about the uses of the material possessions which the church is leaving, the congregation has decided to establish "The First Church Legacy," which will contain its assets of about $385,000.

"This is being directed toward several church related agencies the congregation believes will carry on the spirit of the church's long ministry," Rev. Curtis explained.

Ministries in the City of Newton will be the recipients of about $50,000 for what are called "Newton projects."

This money, Curtis explained, will be entrusted to the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ, and will be administered by the conference's Boston area minister, at least three people from other Newton UCC churches and one person from Andover Newton.

The committee will decide on projects for the benefit of the Newton community which will have been initiated by at least two Newton churches and be ecumenical and non-discriminatory in nature.

The fund, which is not to be tapped for five years, will enable First Church to cooperate in "future developments—not even dreamed of at present" and in that way the church can leave a "visible presence in the city," Curtis said.

Another local grant is $10,000 designated for a Newton-Wellesley Hospital "quiet room." It is envisioned as a room where people can find privacy in the hospital and where families can withdraw to speak to doctors or clergymen. The room will be located in the new west wing near the intensive care unit. There will be an adjoining office for the hospital chaplain.

Another institution located in Newton which is to be remembered is the Andover Newton Theological School that the First Church has had a very close association with over the years. It is to receive approximately $60,000 for permanent endowment.

Other agencies receiving portions of First Church assets are the Boston City Missionary Society, a UCC related mission program in the metropolitan area, $90,000; and the Executive Council of the National United Church of Christ in New York City, $150,000. These sums are also approximate.

Some of the money will become permanent endowments and some is being given without restrictions on the use of the principal. The congregation hopes that it will aid future church mission projects in Newton, Greater Boston, the United States and abroad through United Church missionary efforts, Rev. Curtis said.

"The greatest asset and legacy of the First Church," he continued, "is its people who have served faithfully in many ways.

"Some of our forefathers participated in the early days of the American Board for Commissioners for Foreign Missions (now the United Church Board for World Ministries) and the American Missionary Association, still an agency of the United Church. Hopefully our people will still make contributions to the mission of the church."

First Church, whose history antedates the founding of Newton as a town in the Commonwealth, has acquired many unique objects which require disposal, Rev. Curtis also pointed out.

The Greek congregation, worshipping in the building since Sept. 1, is receiving a number of items from the furnishings, especially items for church use, Curtis noted.

Several objects are going to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, including a John Rogers clock (1764), another eight-day, marble faced clock; an old silver baptismal font; pewter ware, an 1861 silver chalice and communion cups and tankards dated from 1721.

The City of Newton itself will get a Revolutionary War plaque. More than half of the male members of the congregation fought in the war for independence.

The Second Church of Newton was the first of six daughter churches to the original congregation. It withdrew in 1781 to establish a new congregation in "west parish" or "SQUASH END." It is planning to designate one of its rooms as the "Founder's Room" and will display portraits, silver, furniture and an illuminated "Book of Remembrance" that will be placed by the First Church.

The historically valuable church records are to be deposited with the Congregational Historical Society Library.

League Tours City Areas In Preparation For Study

Members of the League of Women Voters of Newton recently visited some of the older and more extensively developed neighborhoods in the city.

The tour marked the beginning of a local league study, "Redevelopment, Rehabilitation, and Conservation of Areas of Newton," in which it plans to examine sites where urban problems exist.

Matters to be considered are: traffic patterns, housing, commercial uses, and a study of public and private solutions to the problems that have been proposed. Anita Capeless is in charge of the study committee.

During this introductory tour, the group observed the effects of the building of the Turnpike Extension on Newton's North side. They stopped at Newton Corner and West Newton Square and discussed local situations with league members living there.

A resident of Newton Corner discussed the need for a foot bridge in that area. At Newton Upper Falls, the league members viewed public effects, such as roads and curbing, of the Concentrated Code Enforcement Program and they were told that 97 houses have been rehabilitated under this program. The Concentrated Code Enforcement Program ended Aug. 31. The group also saw private commercial improvements in the area.

In Newton Lower Falls, the members visited the offices of the Newton Redevelopment Authority (NRA) and talked with Gerald Early, the executive director of the NRA and Joel Leighton, chairman of the Project Area Committee (PAC). They were told that the NRA and the Project Area Committee are now working together and they were told of plans for the redevelopment area. The NRA and PAC are studying the possibility of building six single family homes for low income families displaced by redevelopment in the area.

The study committee plans to meet with members of neigh-

City Will Have Services Of A Director of Development

Regional Administrator James J. Barry of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) announced Wednesday that he has entered into a contract with the mayor of Newton to permit Dr. Donald Levitan to serve as Newton's director of community development.

Levitan, a Newton resident, is HUD's community planning and management representative in the Boston Area Office. He is taking a one year leave of absence from HUD.

When Levitan assumes his new duties on Nov. 27, he will become the first federal employee in the New England region to join the staff of a city chief executive under provisions of the Intergovernmental Personnel Act. Other employees of United States agencies in Region I, including six from HUD, have accepted a wide range of positions with state and local agencies under this act.

M. Daniel Richardson, Director of the Boston Area Office, witnessed the contract-signing at Regional Administrator Barry's office in the John F. Kennedy Federal Building, and joined in extending best wishes to Levitan.

Working directly under Mayor Theodore D. Mann, Levitan will be responsible for looking into and coordinating all federal and state programs which may be of assistance in the development of Newton. The Intergovernmental Personnel Act protects his rights under Civil Service and assures him a position within his grade upon completion of his service to the municipality.

Mann told the HUD Regional Administrator that he feels "extremely fortunate" to have such a highly qualified man to assist him in the important community development field.

Levitan, an employee of HUD since 1965, is a graduate of Boston College; earned his Master's degree at the Maxwell School, Syracuse University, and received his Ph.D. from the Graduate School of Public Administration of New York University. After serving at the New York Regional Office in various capacities, he came to the former HUD Field Office at Boston in 1968, and he transferred to the Boston Area Office when it was established over two years ago.

Levitan lives with his wife, Evelyn, and their four children at 249 Homer St., Newton.

Environment Agency To Offer Education Program

The Regional office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recently announced plans for a new environmental education program that will be offered to elementary schools throughout New England.

John A. S. McGlennon, regional administrator of EPA said the project is being called the Elementary Education Ecology Program and will be carried out in the six-state region in February of 1973.

The regional EPA administrator said that the goal of the project is to "instill a greater awareness, a greater concern, a greater appreciation, for the environment."

"What we are asking is for each elementary school teacher to set aside some classroom time during the month of February for a discussion on the environment," he said.

As a regular assignment, each student would be asked to do some outside reading and prepare a poem, short story or poster about what they have learned. These assignments would be graded, with the two best from each class being sent to our Public Affairs Office. Certificates will be given for the best articles submitted to us," McGlennon explained.

He noted that brochures explaining the program will be sent to each elementary school principal in New England within the next five weeks.

"We hope that every elementary teacher, and every elementary class, will participate in this project," McGlennon concluded.

REAL ESTATE VS DOW JONES

When talking about fortunes made in investments — the mind normally equates with the stock market. However, when we compare the results over the past decade between stock market profits and real estate increases, we'll see quite a dramatic difference in dollars.

In the decade from January, 1960 to January, 1970, the Dow Jones Industrial average jumped from 688 to 800 — an increase of 16 percent in ten years.

In 1960, the average sales price for a single family house in many suburban areas of major cities was $18,307. Ten years later, the average price had increased to $27,022 — an appreciation of 47.6 percent. Nationally, the increase in real estate value has been somewhat less dramatic — 32% — but even that is double the Dow.

No matter how you slice the cake, an investment in real estate over the past decade has proven to double stock market increases. And the trend appears to be widening in favor of real estate.

Newton Students Visit State's Water Areas

Eight students of Newton High School's Marine Biology Class recently joined the members of Newton Junior College's class in Biological Oceanography in examining five stations (areas) of Boston Harbor and Massachusetts Bay.

The Rocket II, a 104 foot fishing vessel, owned and operated by Capt. Matt Hughes, provided the floating laboratory for the all-day study.

The black hydrogen sulfide muds of the inner harbor had not changed since the spring study, nor had the high carbon dioxide or low oxygen content. However, at the second station off Deer Island, the mud was gray, which was a sign of oxygen.

Salinity increased as samples were taken farther from the mouth of the harbor and coliform bacteria of human waste were found in high count at all harbor stations, but not in the bay. The layering of warm water over cold, called thermocline, was not apparent even at the last station some 12 miles from port.

Nitrates and phosphates necessary for algal growth were checked for the first time this season, but students making tests found less than one part per million of both.

Mary Moore of the New England Aquarium's Educational Division and the Aquarium's photographer Mary Crowe accompanied the group, led by W. Hahn of Newton Junior College and Harold (Sandy) Wiper of Newton High School.

Students from Newton Junior College performing the on-board experiments. From Newton were: Mark Burns, Carol Colletti, Evan Dame, Mary Jo Deppisch, Gary Goodwin, Al Lepera, Marshall Leydon, Norman Westlund, Frederick Wickstrom as well as Kelly Bruke, Elizabeth Holston, David Kiley, Robert Lewis, Bruce Loree, Brian Maroney, Paul McQuiston, John Miller, Mark Slayton, Clement Virgilio.

Students participating from Newton High School were: Scott Barden, Nancy Burke, Steven Bottomley, Joanne Cappello, Vanessa Friedman, Eduardo Lee, Scott Saroff, and William Seaward.

Phone Company Pays Record Tax

New England Telephone this month paid a record property tax of nearly $1.4 million to the city of Newton for this year.

Local telephone manager Paul C. Duncan said the 1972 tax bill was the highest the company has paid to the city.

State-wide the company's property tax paid to cities and towns comes to more than $56.1 million this year — also a record tax bill for the company.

Duncan said New England Telephone paid property taxes to 349 Massachusetts cities and towns in 1972.

Hitchhiking

Hitchhiking — especially by young women — is a not-so-funny story here in Newton.

Sure, there are the tall tales of fun and frivolity connected with bumming rides to school. But for every account that brings a chuckle there are a dozen sickening reports of violence and viciousness related to young women who sought and received rides they will never, ever forget.

In Boston right now there are cries to stop school girls from thumbing a ride and to penalize drivers who pull over and offer a lift. The uproar follows the slaying of a young college girl who had the habit of thumbing a ride to class. Some believe she hitched her last ride just before her body ended up in a nailed closet that became her coffin.

Nothing that gruesome has happened in Newton. But it will. It's only a matter of time if the hitchhiking continues.

Newton is one of the few communities in the state to really do something about young girls hitchhiking. Some months ago, without a note of fanfare, Police Chief Quinn ordered Newton's policemen to ticket prospective hitchhikers. The action came to light when schools and colleges reopened after the summer.

The policewoman traveled in an unmarked car and handed out over 200 tickets. Offenders paid a dollar fine. Traffic officers were also told to ticket those who violated the state and city law.

Some people laughed at the policy. Others steamed that it was inconvenient. But the procedure remained in effect. And the number of hitchhikers along Commonwealth Ave. and Washington Street began to go down.

Results? "A marked decrease" in the number of young Newton women assaulted.

That's what crime prevention is all about. And it works. You'll be hearing about other communities that will be following Newton's hindrance to hitchhikers.

Why Go To College?

An outfit out in St. Louis which calls itself RICD is planning to do some folks around here a favor. RICD's spelled out cognomen is Regional Industrial Development Corporation, with some of the best known names in Missouri on its letter-head.

Its major reason for existence appears to be devoted to getting high school students to skip any bright college years once they nail down their diplomas.

The RICD folk have nothing against colleges. Many of them went to university leading marts long enough to get degrees. What they are trying to do right now is to get more students into technical education courses and/or some private trade schools.

The Executive Director D. Reid Ross has accumulated some statistics. They show, he claims, that 80 per cent of the jobs created in this decade will require skills and training other than a four-year liberal arts course.

"You can go into plumbing and make a good living," says a haunting one-minute TV-radio commercial. "You no longer need college to get out of the economic bind. At a two-day Career Fair 25,000 young high schoolers showed up. Many educators are beating the drums for the idea.

The U.S. Office of Education has funded a study of the program and has asked RICD to make some revisions so that it can be tried out in other cities — like Boston.

Can our Harvards withstand a frontal attack? Or will there be a compromise with labs devoted to showing a future brick mason about to mix up a batch of cement, taking over some of the hallowed lecture halls?

"Old Smoky"

Several moons along with a number of seasons have come and gone since the quarrel over the efficiency of Wellesley's municipal incinerators first erupted.

Originally it appeared to be a little neighborhood squabble and those you can usually stamp out easily. "Old Smoky," it was alleged by some of her close neighbors, was scattering too much fly ash around their properties.

The complainants hinted further that "Old Smoky" left much to be desired as an efficient consumer of trash. It turned out that this was not a usual neighborhood complaint. Soon the state government, up to its knees in new ecology legislation was demanding something be done to break "Old Smoky" out of its bad habits.

Pretty soon on petitions brought by complainers "Old Smoky" was hailed into the courts. Soon, too, Needham residents became upset by some of the fly ash reaching their yards.

Wellesley's Selectmen pleaded for patience. They were more anxious than anyone else to put "Old Smoky" in good working order. They are still working on the problem. The court and the state, neither of which could come up with a satisfactory answer after all this time has adopted patience too.

No one seems to know whether or not there's a future life for "Old Smoky" as a top-ranking trash disposer.

It seems, however, that hours of hearings and testimony by experts are no absolute answer when man-made machines go wrong.

Newton Man Is Man of Year

Dr. Harold Turner, Newton, will be honored as Man of the Year at the Annual Red and White Ball of The Vocational Training School of the Greater Boston Association for Retarded Children at the Sheraton Boston on Dec. 10.

Turner is a nationally regarded dental surgeon who specializes in working with retarded and handicapped children.

Arthur Sherman, Newton, will be the dinner committee chairman and Morris Gordon, Newton, is the president of the GBARC.

Attending the dinner will be Governor Francis Sargent.

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

By JAMES G. COLBERT

New Rift Develops Between 2 Top GOP Leaders in State

A new rift has developed between the two top Republican liberals in Massachusetts — Governor Francis W. Sargent and Senator Edward W. Brooke.

Brooke, who won reelection by a massive margin over Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney, obviously feels his plurality could have been even greater if he had received more effective help from the GOP leadership in the state.

Like most political observers, Brooke also blames Sargent for the decline of the Republican party in Massachusetts while Sargent has been Governor.

Republican legislators, for example, are becoming almost extinct on Beacon Hill. They no longer can muster enough strength to sustain a gubernatorial veto in either the State Senate or the House of Representatives.

Yet, Republican candidates have won the Governorship in four of the last five elections. John A. Volpe achieved three of the GOP victories, and Francis Sargent won once. Endicott Peabody interrupted the string of Republican triumphs in 1962.

While Governor Sargent does not deny his responsibility for the decline of Republican strength in the state government, he does declare that Senator Brooke is one of the top GOP leaders in Massachusetts and must also assume part of the blame.

That is true up to a point. But Brooke does not have the patronage power which Governor Sargent possesses. In fairness to Mr. Sargent, he recognized that he needed more than Republican support to get elected in 1970, and he did what was necessary to line up Democratic and Independent voters behind his candidacy.

Sargent and Brooke both have built up their own political empires although there are indications that Governor Sargent's is crumbling. Neither has strengthened the Republican party as such.

Governor Sargent says he tried in the election campaign just ended, and the fact is that he did. But the fact also is that his efforts were ineffective.

He spoke at 26 fund-raising events held to assist Republican candidates for various offices. He raised money for the Republican State Committee and made contributions to the campaigns of a number of GOP candidates for the Legislature.

The Governor obviously is puzzled as to why those efforts did not accomplish more than they did.

Brooke, now secure in the U.S. Senate for another six years, declares that he will try to help rebuild the Republican party in Massachusetts, adding that he thinks he knows how to do it. The implication is that he learned how during his recent campaign for reelection.

The disagreement between Brooke and Sargent could hurt Sarge if he stands for reelection in 1974 and could injure Brooke in 1976 if Sargent should be Governor then.

In the meantime, the public airing of their row could spur both of them into more energetic efforts to strengthen their party. In the light of the poor showing of Republican candidates for the State Legislature, President Nixon's strong run across Massachusetts is all the more remarkable. In some districts Mr. Nixon received four times as many votes as the GOP legislative contender.

His political coattails in this state were about as limp as it's possible to get.

O'Neill Now Expected To Be New No. 2 Man In Congress

It will be a good thing for Massachusetts if Congressman Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. of Cambridge wins election as the new Democratic Leader in Congress and assumes the position held by Hale Boggs who disappeared while on a flight in a small plane in Alaska.

The Bay State lost some of its clout on Capitol Hill when John W. McCormack retired from the Speakership and the late Philip J. Philbin was defeated by Congressman Robert F. Drinan two years ago.

Washington observers now believe that O'Neill has lined up the necessary support to beat back challenges by Congressman Sam Gibbons of Florida and Congressman F. F. Sisk of California.

O'Neill, who is well liked and respected by his colleagues, has served as the Majority Whip in the national House for the past two years.

If he wins election in January as the new Majority Leader of the House, he might become Speaker in 1978.

Carl Albert of Oklahoma has declared that he will step down from the Speakership in 1978. However, there is no certainty he will be able to serve as Speaker until then.

A fight will be made to replace Albert as Speaker in January, and there has been talk of backing Wilbur D. Mills against him although there is some doubt Mills would agree to stand against Albert.

If the seniority system prevails, Albert will be reelected Speaker, and O'Neill will become his Majority Leader.

O'Neill has served 10 terms and 20 years in Congress. He was the first Democratic Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and is one of the most popular men in public life in the Bay State.

Westwood Ouster Fight May Test Ted's Power In Party

Senator Edward M. Kennedy's influence with the persons who presently control the machinery of the Democratic party, many of them McGovern supporters, may be tested at the December meeting of the Democratic National Committee.

A number of Democratic Governors and old-line party leaders want to oust Jean Westwood from the chairmanship of the official Democratic national organization.

Mrs. Westwood has served notice that she will fight any attempt to replace her. That in itself would not mean much except that Ted Kennedy apparently desires that she be allowed to continue as the Democratic national chairman.

How far Ted would go in his efforts to save her is not known. The guessing is that he would not do much beyond making known his wishes and would not make an all-out battle in her behalf.

The situation is fraught with political complications as far as Mrs. Westwood is concerned.

Several influential Democratic chieftains are backing Robert Strauss of Dallas, Texas, former Democratic national treasurer, for the chairmanship.

Former Democratic Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, aligning himself with those who believe Mrs. Westwood should get the heaveho, praised Strauss as a man "who would acquit himself extremely well as chairman if he wants it."

However, Texas Secretary of State Robert Bullock has appealed to Ted Kennedy to block the election of Strauss, declaring that such a move would be tantamount to handing over the Democratic chairmanship to John Connally, head of the Democrats for Nixon in the recent campaign, who, Bullock said, is trying to maneuver himself into a position to get the Republican nomination for President in 1976.

O'Brien, a top aide to the late John F. Kennedy, replied that Strauss is a "100 per cent Democrat" and is capable of doing a good job.

The final decision as to whether Mrs. Westwood is retained or removed as chairman will be made, of course, by the Democratic National Committee members, most of them erstwhile McGovern supporters and a new breed of politicians.

They have control of the party machinery, and they may be reluctant to relinquish it. They may not be swayed by the wishes of Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson, both of whom they rejected for the Presidential nomination: Larry O'Brien, whom they refused to reelect as chairman, or even Ted Kennedy who meets their standards at least as well as did George McGovern.

Senator McGovern apparently will make no attempt to maintain control of the Democratic party machinery.

He already is endeavoring to restore his fallen fortunes in his home state of South Dakota where he was defeated in the Presidential campaign and where he must stand for reelection in 1974.

McGovern gambled a great deal in the strategy he adopted in his run for the White House. As a result he faces an uphill fight to retain his Senate seat.

The hard fact about Mrs. Westwood is that she is too abrasive to handle the task of pulling together the various elements in the Democratic party.

She did little to promote harmony in the McGovern campaign when it was desperately needed. She made no secret of her scorn for some Democratic leaders at the very time McGovern was trying to enlist their support.

When Senator McGovern was announcing that he was 1000 per cent behind Senator Thomas Eagleton as his Vice Presidential running mate, she was telling newsmen Eagleton had to go. She was one of those who helped to create the impression that George McGovern couldn't run his own office, much less the nation.

She has only herself to blame for the fact that many Democratic leaders, whom she insulted and offended, now believe she is not the right person to head up the job of rebuilding the Democratic party.

If the national committee members are unresponsive to the party regulars, as they may well be, they may find it difficult to raise the money to keep their organization in operation. A lot of Democratic politicians would probably just ignore the committee in such a turn of events.

Democratic chieftains are privately disturbed that Democratic strength in a Presidential election hit its peak in 1936 when Franklin D. Roosevelt carried 46 of the 48 states, losing only Maine and Vermont to Alf Landon, and has been eroding steadily since then.

FDR won by successively smaller margins in 1940 and 1944. Harry S. Truman survived in an upset in 1948. Dwight Eisenhower was the victor in 1952 and 1956, and John F. Kennedy won by a wafer-thin margin in 1960.

Lyndon B. Johnson won by a landslide in 1964, but that was a campaign much like the one just ended. Barry Goldwater was an inept candidate and, in the opinion of a majority of the voters, was too radical.

This doesn't mean that a Democratic candidate no longer can be elected President. Edmund Muskie might have won this year. It does mean that Democratic leaders cannot count on the election of a Democratic President simply because the country is electing a Democratic Congress.

It also means that the old Democratic coalition of labor, urban bosses, farmers, southern Democrats and ethnic groups, including blacks, no longer exists because the groups who comprised it no longer have common interests.

Senator McGovern in the Presidential Primaries did not have the support of labor, the urban bosses or the southern Democrats. He was defeated because of that and because he misread the signs which he thought indicated that the United States was ready for a revolution in politics.

Governor's Cabinet Fails To Fulfill Bright Promises

When John A. Volpe, then Governor, held a dinner meeting at the Sheraton Boston Hotel near the close of 1968 and unveiled a plan for installing a Cabinet at the head of the state government, the claim was made that this would mean substantial savings for the people of Massachusetts.

At the start it would cost a few million dollars, the listeners were told, but it would result in a more efficient and economical operation of the state's business, and in two or three years the taxpayers would be benefiting from the savings which would be achieved.

A Governor's Cabinet, in truth, was the idea of John Volpe. But Francis W. Sargent, then waiting to assume the duties of Governor when Volpe went to Washington to join the Nixon administration, concurred with Volpe and later implemented the plan.

Governor Sargent could have scrapped the Cabinet proposal as easily as he applied the axe to some of the men Volpe left behind him, but he put it into effect instead.

That was just about four years ago, and Mr. Sargent has served almost all of the intervening period. He finished the last two years of Volpe's term and is now nearly half-way through his own term.

If the operation of the state government has become any more efficient and economical in that period of time, it is not visible to this observer.

Governor Sargent has twice increased state taxes during that period. In fairness, the first time he did so was to obtain money to pay bills he inherited from former Governor Volpe. His second tax hike was to pay his own bills.

Now the people of Massachusetts are confronted with the bleak prospect of still another tax increase next year to meet the rising cost of state government.

Since the voters disregarded the advice of Governor Sargent and killed the proposal to amend the State Constitution to allow the enactment of a graduated state income tax, the likelihood is that the sales tax will be boosted next year to provide a greater volume of revenue.

The sales tax may be increased from three to four or five per cent; or the limited tax might be made a general one which applies to everything, including food and clothing.

Massachusetts voters confounded the politicians a few years ago by approving the sales tax when an attempt was being made to repeal it. Many people, it seems, would rather prefer to pay their state taxes in pennies each day rather than dollars four times a year.

Indications are that they will be obliged to pay out more pennies more often next year. Meanwhile, the results produced by the so-called Cabinet system of state government are somewhat below those bright promises of late 1968.

Small States Fight To Save Electoral College System

One strong impression the election left on this writer is that the system of having the electoral college choose a President should be scrapped and that he should be elected by popular vote.

The one-man-one-vote principle applies in almost all elections in the United States except the most important one, that of President.

Under the present method of electing a President, a vote in Massachusetts is not as important as one in Alaska or Nevada in terms of the percentage of an electoral vote it represents.

George McGovern received only 17 electoral votes, 14 in Massachusetts and three in the District of Columbia. Even though he made a poor run, he polled a far higher percentage of the popular vote than he did of the electoral votes.

The winner-take-all concept in the battle for the electoral votes in each state is basically wrong.

One candidate can defeat another by a paper-thin margin in a state and pick up all its electoral votes. The losing contender can poll more than two or three million votes in a state and have nothing to show for it.

This was one of the arguments advanced against the winner-take-all Presidential Primary in California last June. Everyone agreed that it was wrong but that in fairness to Senator McGovern the rules should not be changed after the game had been played.

There is time now to change the rules before the next game is played and the next election is won and lost.

The argument against winner-take-all Presidential Primaries applies even more strongly to the electoral college system of picking a President.

The small states, of course, have fought to preserve this system and to maintain the power they wield in Presidential elections and at national conventions. In the light of some Supreme Court rulings, this writer would guess that the electoral college might be ruled unconstitutional.

Superintendent Replies

Editor, Newton Graphic:
Here is a copy of my reply to the letter from Mr. Julius Freedman of the Newton Citizens for Action on Taxes, published in last week's Newton Graphic. Mr. Freedman commented on an article by your reporter, Kenneth Mason, which appeared in The Graphic on November 9.

Dear Mr. Freedman:
I hasten to respond to your letter. Most of the quotations to which it refers do not adequately reflect the content of my remarks, therefore welcome the opportunity to respond to your specific suggestions and comments.

First let me assure you that I am concerned about finding ways to keep down the school budget. This concern looms large in our considerations of programs in every area of the school department.

As I said in my talk to the PTA Council, the rate of increase in the school department budget over the last several years has been lower than that of the city budget. This year, aside from state mandated programs, increases in Blue Cross-Blue Shield, and the cost of moves to new buildings, the increase in our operating budget was 3.8 per cent—this despite better than a 5 per cent increase in the cost of living.

In 1968 the cost of schools represented 49.2 per cent of the total city budget; in 1969, 49.1 per cent; in 1970, 49 per cent; in 1971, 48.4 per cent; and in 1972, 48.3 per cent. This includes the cost of bonded indebtedness for three new buildings: Bigelow, F.A. Day and the new high school. AS you probably know, nationally suburban school districts have accounted for 56 per cent of their community budgets.

Your suggestion concerning the assistance of parents and students in painting and refurbishing buildings is a good one, and has, in fact, been done in several instances. The need, however, is greater than may be implied in your statement. Parents and students cannot fix leaky roofs, inoperative plumbing, buckling floors, collapsed stairways, falling ceilings, insufficient wiring, and a host of other repairs—a legacy of long years of neglect, whose costs are now double and sometimes triple what they would have been had action been taken at the proper time.

We are doing everything we can to hold down costs while maintaining quality education. Unfortunately we cannot do in our city schools what state, city and national administrations have been unable to do.

I should be happy to continue this discussion if you would like to telephone or come in at any time.

Sincerely,
AARON FINK
Superintendent

Citizens For Life Hail Out-Of-State Vote On Abortion Question

Editor, Newton Graphic:

Massachusetts Citizens For Life hails the overwhelming majority votes for life in the states of Michigan and North Dakota. There, in state-wide referenda, a clear cut majority voted for life and definitely against casual abortion.

In Massachusetts, 21 communities were carefully chosen by the pro-abortion groups so that only selected voters had the opportunity to declare themselves on the abortion issue. Obviously, therefore, these communities are not representative of the state as a whole. As a result, Massachusetts affords little solace to those who would bring casual abortion to our midst.

Given the peculiar circumstances of the abortion-repeal pushers selecting the referendum areas in our state, the Massachusetts situation can only be characterized as muddy.

If all Massachusetts voters had been given the opportunity thought "urgency was no excuse for a bad plan."

"I have the gravest reservations, not only about Dudman, but also about the nature of the governing relationships this set-up will cause," Cohen said.

INCINERATORS
"I object to a Public Works director with no experience," the alderman continued. "I have been told Carroll does not have any experience with incinerators, yet Dudman doesn't have any at all."

Mayor Mann, after the appointments had been approved, said that he was "pleased" with the outcome.

"I thank all of the aldermen that supported the reorganization," the mayor said.

"This is only the first step in an attempt to revitalize a department that has had many problems," he added.

Stating that Dudman will take over "very shortly," Mann said that he has been sitting in on snow meetings, has gone to the yards in the city to study them and has "met some of the people and become more acquainted with the problems."

Mann also said that his only regret in the matter was the "loss of two months of preparation time for the snow season."

Carroll, working for MATCO in Newton Corner, has stated all along that he will have to give the organization two months notice before he can leave. Aldermen, discussing this subject, are expecting him to join the department after the first of the year.

The vote on the issue was as follows:

In favor: Aldermen Michael Antonellis, Alan Barkin, Wendell Bauckman, Ernest Dietz, Louis Egelson, Robert Gaynor, Jackson, Michael Lipof, Jason Sacks, Sidney Small, Robert Tennant, Edward Uehlein, Eliot Cohen.

Opposed: Aldermen Richard Bullwinkle, David Cohen, Thomas Concannon, Harry Crosby, Peter Harrington, Matthew Jefferson, Andrew Magni, McDonnell, Richard McGrath, Edward Richmond. Alderman Lois Pines was absent.

Dudman-

said, to "the entire series of moves being made here that are all related to the question of who should be the director of public works."

Mann decided several weeks ago to designate Dudman a temporary appointment to remove him from needing board approval.

McDonnell pointed out that although the board "was not voting directly on Dudman, the mayor has made it clear he intends to appoint Dudman acting director."

NO EXPERIENCE

"Some members of my committee did not feel that Dudman has the education, experience or qualifications to assume the position and any move that would effectuate his appointment should be opposed," McDonnell said. "Others argued that an assistant is not needed."

"No member of the committee doubted Carroll's qualifications and the vote against him was because members felt the assistant's job was not necessary or because they thought he should be the director and not the assistant."

Arguing in favor of the appointments, Alderman David Jackson said that the mayor had found Dudman "related to people at the working level and could see efficiencies that could be implemented."

"He (Dudman) can work on data systems and between he and Carroll the department can be shaped up, trimmed down and the job can be done without waste within two years."

PRATT
Jackson said he had originally suggested that Pratt, "one of the city's biggest problems and biggest assets," be made the water commissioner.

"I urged the mayor to hang on to Pratt during the reorganization," Jackson said. "His 42 years of services are of inestimable value."

Ald. David Cohen said he

Become More Peripatetic For The Sake Of Your Health

Editor, Newton Graphic:

Ancient Greece had it all... even a school of philosophers known as the peripatetics. Garbed in chitons and sandals and sporting long beards, they strolled about from place to place discussing the natural world around them. Indeed, these ancients established much basic philosophy of creation, while considering the total environment in which they lived.

However, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health is not suggesting that we all wander about as latter-day Aristotles or Stratos. It does suggest, though, especially now during the renaissance of nostalgia for the oldtime lifestyles, that we become more peripatetic for our own good health. Plain, old-fashioned walking is something we should do more. It's an easy exercise that practically everyone can do everyday of the year, and best of all, in this time of rising costs for just about everything, walking is still free.

Modern times suggest that life is almost unlivable without a set of wheels under us. Yet new thinking in urban renewal programming promotes more interest in walking. Ynew malls and promenades with trees and planted areas that incorporate total community living within walking distance, invite residents to walk and enjoy pleasant surroundings. Strange that the new thinking comes at the precise moment that people show disenchantment with so-called modern living, with its air and noise pollution, overcrowding and artificial tempo.

Let's consider the benefits of walking as one of the few tax-free pleasures left to us. To begin with, walking satisfies the vagabond spirit in all of us. It's an outlet. It gives a breather from the almost stifling obligations of this age. And to boot, it automatically exercises body muscles and stimulates better circulation in our sedentary lives. It is also considered the safest of all exercise. Walking is wonderful for the mind. A stroll in the open gives one a chance to think, like the philosophers of old. As the road winds the nerves unwind. It is a time to clear fuzzy cobwebs of depression and relieve daily tensions. The trick of walking for enjoyment is to think of it as mild adventure.

Comfortably shod, start walking gradually. Guard against a lengthy trek right off the bat. You'll only end up with stiff muscles, weary head and probably toes pointed straight ahead, not turned in or out, to distribute the body weight equally on the feet. Hold the shoulders erect and wear a comfortable outfit. Most important of all, take a good look at the world around you.

When possible invite an enthusiastic companion to join you; this makes a good walk better. Teach children the value and enjoyment of walking. Parents should insist their children do errands on foot and walk back and forth to school.

Today, with so much concern for losing weight and keeping physically fit, remember that just plain walking is the easiest aid to keeping a sleek figure and good muscle tone. Walking also offers a great mental gymnastic, it forces your powers of observation to sharpen up. You're not whizzing by in a car so you have the time to really look and see.

The act of enjoyable walking is still worth cultivating.

Newton College Comes In 3rd

Newton Junior College students won third place at the New England Forensic Tournament held at the University of Southern Connecticut, Nov. 11.

In its sixth year of competition, Newton Junior College was the only two-year college competing against a field of approximately 30 four-year institutions, including Yale, the University of Maine, Penn State, Middlebury College, and Emerson College.

Walter Donohue, a second-year student, won third place in the pentathlon, which includes five events: persuasive, interpretive, extemporaneous, impromptu, and after-dinner speaking.

Michael Dathe, a first-year student, won third place in persuasive speaking and Anthony VanRiper of the Newton Junior College Department of Humanities, won the first place trophy in original poetry.

An added distinction for the College is that they won the most trophies in the tournament.

The Newton Junior College Speech team is under the direction of Mrs. Cindy Lawton, assistant professor of speech at the College.

Nature's Ways

Let us consider words for birds.

For instance, how did Lincoln's sparrow get its name? (Don't bet on your first thought!) And what do the impressive scientific names of birds mean in translation to English? For example: Say's phoebe (Sayornis saya).

Recently, Edward S. Gruson, who has such a well-developed sense of humor that one wonders why he became a birder, rounded up much bird-name information in a new volume "Words for Birds" (published by Quadrangle Books, New York).

Let's take Lincoln's sparrow first. If you're a normal citizen who earns a living tending your own business, you probably never have heard of the bird. It's an insignificant little bird that breeds across North America from Alaska to Maine and undoubtedly passes through your home town twice annually since it winters in the U. S. from California to Florida. But you have heard of Lincoln, you say? Come now, Thomas Lincoln of Dennyville, Maine? That's who the sparrow was named after.

In 1833, Tom Lincoln went to Labrador with the great American painter, John James Audubon. While in Labrador, Lincoln shot a previously undescribed sparrow which Audubon painted for "Birds of America" and named for Tom.

And how does a scientific name such as Sayornis saya originate? Well, Charles Lucien Bonaparte, a lion of American ornithology between 1824 and 1831, gave the group of birds scientific name Sayornis. How does it translate? Well, ornithology (study of birds) should give you a clue. "Ornis" is Greek for bird. Sayornis becomes "Say's bird."

We could go on and on about misspellings and misidentifications involved in birds' names. But why bother? Gruson has covered the ground beautifully.

How Tom Say won the honor of having a bird named after him is an involved story. Around 1800 Tom went to work for the Philadelphia Academy of Natural History for 75 cents a week. Which proves that zoologists were underpaid even in those days. He was not the organization man that he could have been. He tended to wander off with a paint box, recording the shellfish and insects of North America.

Say edited Bonaparte's ponderous "American Ornithology" in 1825. The chore earned him immortality as a bird name, but probably little else. The next year Say arrived at New Harmony, Indiana, which was a commune of 19th Century misfits. Here Say completed two monuments of American zoology: "American Entomology" (insects), and "American Coelology" (shellfish).

Printing still was primitive in the 1820s, so Say had to draw his bugs and shells in outline and hand them out to other persons known as "colorists" who hand painted the colors. One of these colorists of exceptional talent was Lucy Sistaire. Say married her. For a century-and-a-half there has been a rumor that he married her to save paying her a salary. GREETING THE NEW PRESIDENT of the National Association for Mental Health, Mrs. Helen Wright of Washington, D.C., are left, Mrs. Eugene Nelson of Norwood, a founder of the Norfolk Mental Health Association, and right, Dr. Ann Lake of Dedham, its president.

Attend Mental Health Assembly. In Detroit

All fifty states were represented in Detroit November 14-17 at the Annual Assembly of the National Association of Mental Health.

Among the Massachusetts delegation were Dr. Ann Lake of Dedham and Mrs. Eugene Nelson of Norwood who were encouraged in the complex problem of mental health and mental illness by the increasing number of young people, minority group representation as well as the number of men from all walks of life who took time to attend.

"Citizens Making the Difference" was the theme which covered a wide range of needs, among them health insurance to cover mental illness, prevention of mental illness caused by social conditions with their special impact on children, and the urgency of restoration of Congressional approved funds vetoed by President Nixon which would give impetus to mental health centers for early health care easily available at the community level.

Irving Chase of Concord, Mass., outgoing national president, underlined the fact that less than 7 percent of mentally ill people receive treatment, 1.4 million nationwide, and had said nationally on the "Today Show" that he felt "the Eagleton affair" in the long run would benefit the cause of mental health in the demonstration that one could recover and resume effective living.

Edward P. Morgan of American Broadcasting Company, November 15 luncheon speaker, gave what the Detroit News called a "blistering, often bitter speech" and asked the Assembly "How do you assess the value judgements of a country which authorizes 30 new submarines at $1 billion each, yet limits federal spending on mental health to less than $750,000. He said also he felt Americans were unhappy and beginning to think about questions of fulfillment, an indication being "worshipping idols like snowmobiles, motorcycles and souped-up cars, spending $15 billion yearly on alcohol, $1 billion on male grooming and yet have not the money or ingenuity to get 20 million people of poverty."

Miss Amy Vanderbilt, Awards chairman, made a number of awards, among them one to an employer whose workers numbered one-third recovered patients, to Percy Knauth of Connecticut, an author whose account, "A Season in Hell" in Life Magazine, told of his own recovery, and to Senator Warren Magnuson, Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman, for his efforts toward funding Community Mental Health Centers.

Westwood Bridge Club...

Not All Hands Call For A Game Contract

Not all bridge hands can be played in a game contract states Joseph Vaas, director of the Westwood Club. The partnership should be aware of situations where they do not have the required 26 points between them and therefore stop below the level of game, if they get into the bidding at all. Take today's hand for example

NORTH		EAST
S. 9 6 2		S. A 7
H. A Q J 6		H. K 5 2
D. 9 5 4		D. A 3 2
C. A K 2		C. 10 8 7 5 4

WEST		EAST
S. K 10 8		S. A 7
H. 9 7 6 4		H. K 5 2
D. Q J 8		D. A 3 2
C. Q 9 6		C. 10 8 7 5 4

SOUTH		NORTH
S. Q J 5 4 3		S. 9 6 2
H. 10 4		H. A Q J 6
D. K 10 7 6		D. 9 5 4
C. J 3		C. A K 2

In today's hand South was the dealer and passes, West passes and North makes a call of one heart. The principle of this hand is contained in this moment, the time when North is about to make his opening bid. Before he makes his bid of one heart he should be thinking of his rebid. In this hand he must be aware that his partner has passed, does not have 13 points. So when North opens the bidding he knows that his side does not have a game; therefore he must make his decision now that his first bid will be his last. He must resign himself to passing if his partner should respond. Also he should pass if his partner is not able to respond.

Now, when East passes South responds with a call of one spade. The hand should be passed out here and when West makes a lead, possibly the queen of diamonds, South will find that with careful play he will be able to make two spades; losing no club tricks, two diamonds, one heart, and two spade tricks. Thus this North-South pair is in a very comfortable contract-one spade-making two.

The hands appearing in this column have all been played at the Westwood club. This club is open to all area residents and is located in Westwood on Rte. 109 directly behind the Police Station at the American Legion hall. Games are in progress every night of the week and start at eight o'clock (Sunday at seven). Also there is a Tuesday 10:30 a.m. game and a Sunday 2 p.m. game. For further information phone 326-6806 or 326-9724.

V. A. Newsletter

The Veterans Administration hopes to hear soon from 22,000 widows of Spanish-American War veterans who received notices which could mean larger pensions.

The VA letters, which were sent in late September to 32,000 widows, reminded them that a new law, effective August 1, gave them the option of choosing a pension under the same rules that cover other war widows or continuing under the "old law" which grants a small pension to Spanish American widows without regard to income.

VA officials said 10,000 widows had responded by the third week in October. Not all widows will benefit from the change, VA stressed. Depending on her income, a widow of a veteran can receive as much as $87 per month under the new law, but if her income exceeds certain limits she may not be eligible for any VA payment.

There are no income limitations of Spanish-American War widows who now receive $70 to $75 per month.

A widow who receives the special Spanish-American War widows' pension cannot switch to the new system unless her income is low enough to qualify her for a higher amount. Those who are housebound or who need special aid and attendance are eligible for an additional $55 per month under both the old and the new law, it was pointed out.

Widows who advise VA of their decision to change before Dec. 1 will receive increased payments retroactive to August 1. Those who reply Dec. 1 or later will be paid increased benefits effective from date of receipt by VA.

Once a widow chooses to be covered under the new law, VA stressed, she may not choose to again be covered by the old law. For this reason, widows whose income may fluctuate in the future and cause them to exceed income limitations should remain under the old law, was the cautionary word from VA.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Veterans and their families are asking thousands of questions concerning the benefits their Government provides for them through the Veterans Administration. Below are some representative queries. Additional information may be obtained at any VA office.

Q.—How many Vietnam Era veterans are turned down for G.I. Bill benefits or disability compensation because of an other-than-honorable discharge?

A.—A VA study done during a three months period of this year shows that only 6 out of every 1,000 applicants were turned down, and most of these were discharged for "WILLFUL AND PERSISTENT MISCONDUCT."

Q.—I received a general discharge from the Army after 13 months of active duty. Am I entitled to schooling under the G.I. Bill despite this type of discharge?

A.—Yes, and to all other benefits for which you would qualify—the same conditions that prevail for those with an honorable discharge.

Q.—I read somewhere that I am entitled to an annual clothing allowance of $8150 because I have an artificial leg replacing one that was shot off in Korea. If so, where do I apply?

A.—You should have received by now a formal notice of potential eligibility from the VA with a simplified application form. If you did not then write the k where your records are stating that you wear a prosthetic device (or use a wheelchair) that tends to wear out or tear clothing, and that you receive service connected compensation for the disability. Your letter will be accepted and processed as a claim for clothing allowance.

Newton Centre Gardeners Meet

A commonsense approach to windowsill gardening was the subject discussed at the meeting of the Newton Centre Garden Club on Tuesday, Nov. 21, at fellowship hall of the First Baptist Church, Newton Centre. Mrs. Raymond C. Cronin, a noted specialist in the arts of gardening, was the speaker.

A coffee hour preceded the business meeting which was presided over by Mrs. Henry S. C. Cummings of Newton, club president. Hostesses were Mrs. Frederick J. Warren and Mrs. Shepard F. Williams of Waban, and the pourers were Mrs. Worthing L. West and Mrs. Otis Stephenson, both of Newton.

Miss Bernstein Marries Mr. Bruckner in Boston

A gazebo canopy, white lighted lattices, white and yellow mums, roses and carnations decorated the Oval Room of the Copley Plaza, Boston, for the Nov. 5 wedding of Hollis Ann Bernstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore H. Bernstein, Newton Centre, to Herman Michael Bruckner, Waltham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bruckner, Norwalk, Conn.

Rabbi Benjamin Rudavsky performed the single ring ceremony. A reception followed in the State Suite and Oval Rooms of the Copley Plaza. The couple left for a wedding trip to Costa del Sol, Spain and Tangier, Morocco, North Africa.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory pau de soie gown with seed pearls accenting the wedding band neckline, long sleeves and bodice. A matching beaded camelot headpiece held her long veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and stephanotis.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Norman Bruckner of East Windsor, N. J., sister-in-law of the groom. Miss Pam Shain, New York City was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Trudi Hotch, Utica, N. Y. and Mrs. Joseph Paster, Waltham, a cousin of the groom. The attendants were identically dressed in marigold silk jersey empire gowns. They carried a single yellow rose.

Dr. Norman Bruckner, East Windsor, N. J., was his brother's best man. Ushers were Richard Baker of Brighton, Paul Bergman of Hyde Park,

Newton YMCA Holds Bazaar

The Newton YMCA Women's auxiliary will hold its annual bazaar Thursday, Nov. 30 at the Newton Y.

On sale will be gift items, holiday decorations and arrangements, stuffed animals, dolls, felt Christmas tree skirts, fancy waste baskets, dried arrangements and cone wreaths. In addition, there will be a treasure corner where china, glassware, silver, antiques and bric-a-brac will be sold. Mrs. Peter J. Martin will have an unusual jewelry corner.

Project committee members, Mrs. Charles E. Smith, Mrs. John R. Swanton, Jr. and Mrs. Philip B. Hamilton encourage members and friends to make and donate gifts, toys and decorations. Miss Adelaide Ball and Mrs. Monte G. Basbas will welcome contributions to the treasure corner.

Persons may call Mrs. Smith at 244-4997 for collections and contributions.

President of the auxiliary is Mrs. R. Emerson Sylvester. Miss Ball is the first vice-president and the second vice-president is Mrs. Charles W. Laffin.

No date has been set for the wedding.

TRAVEL TRAILS
by Julian Roberts

In dating circles, two may be company and three's a crowd... But this well-known formula definitely doesn't apply where vacation islands are concerned... Take the U.S. Virgin Islands, for example... This attractive Caribbean three-some — St. Croix, St. John and St. Thomas — provide an alluring combination for vacations-in-the-sun... Each have their own distinctive personality and few who visit them are likely to be disappointed... Largest of the three islands is nearby St. Croix, whose serene atmosphere lure visitors back again and again... St. Thomas has lush, hilly terrain and dazzling white beaches; marinas for all types of fishing craft... The smallest, least developed island is St. John, an idyllic retreat for nature lovers...

ARE YOU AFRAID OF OLD AGE?

Are you afraid that health and vigor are slipping away from you?

The Bible explains that these come from God. That God-given energy is like a "well of water, springing up into everlasting life."

You can begin to learn how to prove this in your own experience by coming to a Christian Science service this Sunday. We'd love to welcome you.

Note: paper will also be available and volunteers will assist the patients in writing letters. Some of the funds will also be used to buy items for individual patients who have no family resources available.

The fair will include a white elephant table, holiday decorations, baked goods, handmade articles and a children's table. Persons wishing to donate items to the fair may leave them at the hospital's main desk.

This is the first year for the fair. Acting as the hospital's coordinators for the fair are Mrs. Marsha Gray, R.N., of Ashland and Mrs. Dolly Rice of Marlborough.

Drugs-

No one was injured in the incident, but the two robbers made off with a supply of drugs and about $150 in cash, police said.

Newton's latest drug-related holdup occurred Sunday afternoon, when a pair of masked robbers armed with a gun and knife took drugs and $253 in cash from Oak Hill Pharmacy at 1197 Walnut St. in Newton Highlands.

The drugs included undetermined amounts of Demerol, cocaine and morphine, police said.

The robbers were described as young, wearing army fatigue jackets. The first brandished a "small silver revolver" and ordered the store clerk and pharmacist to the rear of the building where they were told to lie on the floor.

He and his partner, whom police say carried a switchblade knife, then tied the two store employees hand and foot with a length of nylon rope.

DRUGS AND MONEY
The robbers took green plastic bags from their pockets and filled them with drugs and money from the cash register.

As the pair left the store, they warned the clerk and pharmacist to remain on the floor and not to call police for 20 minutes. The employees complied.

Only the day before, the Newton-Wellesley Hospital at 2014 Washington St. in Newton Lower Falls was held up by a lone robber who made off with a large supply of drugs.

The incident was reported to Newton police at 6:49 Saturday morning by Julie Adams, night supervisor on the sixth floor.

The robber apparently entered the sixth floor by the back stairway. He wielded a knife, which he pointed at nurse Joanne Lambert, 15 Haverstock Rd. in Franklin, and orderly John Drew of 84 Clinton Rd. in Brookline.

ON DUTY
Also on duty on the sixth floor at the time were nurses Jane Hillman, 49 Turner St. in Waltham, and Alice Paterson of 11 DeForest St. in Newton Lower Falls. They were not threatened by the robber, police said.

The robber ordered the hospital employees to fill with drugs a paper bag he carried.

He put the bag of drugs into a green shoulder bag he had with him.

The pills taken included various quantities of nembatal, seconal, phenobarbital, percadan, demerol, dilaudid, morphine, codeine and pantapone, according to police.

The robber fled by the left rear stairway, police said.

DESCRIPTION

He was described as about 25 years of age, white, six feet tall, weighing about 180 pounds and having a full beard and brown eyes.

He was wearing dark pants, a long greyish-brown coat, brown boots and brown glasses. Hospital employees said he appeared very calm during the entire incident.

His get-away vehicle reportedly was an older model red-and-white station wagon.

The outbreak of robberies is currently the "top priority" issue of the Newton police department, according to Chief Quinn.

"We have almost all the daytime detectives now working on this at night, and everyone is geared up for the program," he said.

Local druggists are considerably disturbed by the spate of robberies, said Quinn, and have expressed appreciation for the police force's cooperation.

ARRESTS

Arrests have been made or warrants issued in five or six of the recent robberies, he said. Those arrested are all awaiting trial, some free on bail, he said. None of the suspects are local.

Quinn has attributed the outbreak of drug robberies to the absence of heroin in the area due to federal control of imports. Many of the robbers appear to be addicts on cocaine, he said.

The market for cocaine has increased proportionately as the heroin supply has tapered off, he said.

Police officers have been told to use "special caution" in drug store robberies, due to the possible nervousness of robbers who are suspected of being addicts.

"Even our success in identifying and apprehending these robbers does not seem to eliminate the problem," said Quinn. "Federal statistics indicate there are 300,000 addicts in the country."

Baraban Attends Monaco Course

Dr. David J. Baraban, Littlefield Rd., Newton, went to Monaco recently to conduct a three day course on "Periodontal Prosthesis" as part of the Division of Continuing Education at Boston University School of Graduate Dentistry.

This is the third year that Boston University dentists have offered an education program encouraged by Prince Rainier and the Monaco Department of Health.

Dr. Baraban presented his course to 70 French and 30 American dentists taking part in the program which is directed by Dr. Herbert Schilder at Boston University and by Dr. Yves Fisore, acting associate director for Boston University in Monaco.

Bride's Father Performs Bliss-McDaniel Nuptials

Fall flowers decorated the Park Street Congregational Church, Boston, at 2 p.m. Saturday when the Rev. Sidney Kidd Bliss, assisted by the Rev. Arnold Olson, officiated at the marriage of his daughter, Winifred Marie, to George William McDaniell.

The bride's parents, who formerly are from Newton, reside in Dover. Parents of the groom, Dr. and Mrs. James G. McDaniell, are from Atlanta, Ga.

A concert by church organist, Mr. R. Rice Nutting, preceded the ceremony. The bride wore a candelight satin gown, designed and hand made by friends, trimmed with heirloom lace and small buttons, Victorian sleeves with cuffs of lace, and an old fashioned high collar pinned with an antique cameo. She carried an old fashioned nosegay of stephanotis and ivy.

Maid of honor, Miss Ellen Roberts, wore a long cranberry velvet gown styled with a portrait neckline, full sleeves, and antique crocheted buttons on the bodice. Bridesmaids were the Misses Jeanne Elizabeth Anderson and Karen Shepard Ashley of Lexington and Jane Marie Delli Prisco of West Newton. They wore sapphire blue velvet gowns. Dr. Stuart McDaniell of Atlanta, Ga., was his brother's best man. Ushers were Dr. Charles Art and Philip Hildreth of Atlanta and Sidney K. Bliss, Jr., of Dover.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church parlor. Refreshments were prepared and served by church friends of the bride's family. Sunday school teachers of the bride poured coffee and Sunday school classmates poured punch.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Bliss chose a peacock blue velvet gown trimmed with metallic brocade. The mother of the groom wore a gold silk gown.

The bride attended Newton public schools and Dana Hall Occidental College in La. Her husband was graduated from the University of the South, cum laude, and Brown Univ. He is a doctoral candidate in American History at the University of North Carolina. He was in the Peace Corps in Toga, West Africa and served two years with the U. S. Army in Vietnam.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Chapel Hill, N. C., where they will reside.

Garden Club Will Meet on Tuesday

The monthly meeting of the Newton Highlands garden club will be held Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Clifford W. Rust, 36 Oak Terrace. A brief business meeting will be conducted by the president, Mrs. Robert H. Searway.

Plans for decorating the Jackson Homestead for the Christmas Open House Dec. 10 will be finalized by Mrs. Eliot F. Tucker, chairman, and her committee: Miss Adeline Graham, Mrs. Leo A. Handy, Mrs. Howard G. Hobbs, Mrs. Russell N. Holbrook, Mrs. Herbert E. Johnson, Mrs. Warren B. Kennedy, Mrs. Thomas E. Ruden, Miss Mildred Russo, Mrs. Clifford W. Rust, Mrs. Carlton L. Shaw and Mrs. Robert H. Searway.

The program for the evening is a green wreaths workshop for which each member will bring her own equipment. If there are questions, please call Mrs. Clifford W. Rust.

Newton Pianist Will Perform at Donor Luncheon

The annual donor luncheon of sisterhood, Temple Emanuel, Newton will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 29 at 12 noon, in the community hall at 385 Ward street, Newton Centre. The outstanding entertainment will feature Beatrice Dobelle and Renee Bancourt, accompanied by Elena Kenner, noted pianist.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling either Mrs. Albert Cohane at 332-2851 or Mrs. Mike Green 332-5252. Mrs. Daniel Kagno is luncheon chairman.

Christ Child Society

Members of the Christ Child Society will serve tea to guests at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 18 at Our Lady of Mercy church hall in Belmont. Mrs. Henry Swaabe of Belmont will lecture on "Home plants and objects d'art."

Newton residents who are assisting Miss Catherine Denehy of Chestnut Hill in arrangements are Mrs. Edward E. Narcus, Mrs. William H. Ellis, Mrs. Daniel Mulkeen and Mrs. Neal O'Hara.

Campus Notes

Sondra Langer, Elizabeth Everett, and John S. Robinson, all of Newton attended the 53rd Conference and Official Delegate Assembly of the New England Teacher Preparation Association at the New England Center for Continuous Education, Durham, N. H., on Nov. 12 and 13.

Bonnie Callander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Callander, Newton Centre, has been named by Trinity College, Burlington, Vt., to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," the annual publication lists the country's outstanding leaders.

Callander has been an active member of the Triple Key Honor Society which is the student service organization and was president of her class during her junior year. On Campus she has served as a resident assistant in the dorms and a member of the handbook committee.

She has been a Dean's List student during her four years. A human services major, Callander plans to live in Scotland for a year after graduation and then pursue graduate studies.

Donna Meyers, a sophomore at Boston's Berklee College of Music and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Meyers, Kenrick St., Newton, will perform on piano with the College Concert Band on Tuesday evening, Dec. 5.

The concert, under the direction of noted composer-conductor John A. Baticchi of the Berklee Faculty, will feature the world premiere of "Canzona and Overture," which was composed especially for the Berklee Concert Band by Peter Hazzard, also of the Faculty. The remainder of the program will include works by Praetorius, Milhaud, Schumann and Hindemith.

Meyers courses at Berklee include Arranging, Composition, Improvisation, Solo and Orchestral Performance, as well as studies in the Humanities. Upon graduation from Berklee College of Music, she will be qualified for a career as musician, teacher, composer, and arranger.

Newton Faces Brookline In Big One, South is Ready

Tiger Win Can Give Them Berth In High School Bowl

By DAVID CUTLER

The running game has always been the most potent weapon in high school football. This is especially true in the season, when the frigid air and poor footing increase the hazards of passing. Newton High School's confrontation with Brookline in the Thanksgiving Day Classic at Dickinson Stadium will feature two of the strongest ground attacks since the British met Napoleon at Waterloo.

The Tiger offense has been improving since the season began. In the early going the line's play had been questionable, but it has solidified into what Brookline Coach Ed Schlutz calls "the toughest part of their offense."

In the backfield Newton's strength has never been in doubt. Cal Moffie and Ed Becker are probably the best quarterbacking duo Newton High has ever had. They are both excellent leaders, sharp signal-callers, and talented runners when the occasion arises. Their passing, although infrequent, has been accurate. There have been two aerial touchdowns this year.

Gerry Keliher, Mark Connolly, and Pete Dion are Newton's bruising backs. An example of their power is the 250 yards NHS rolled up on the ground in the first half against Waltham November 11. This unit, which averaged only eight contests, now scores more than 20 a game.

The Indian attack is a fierce one, too. Halfbacks Gary Travis, Bruce Gutierrez, and fullback Bill Siebolt form a backfield which Newton coaches Jim Ronayne and Norm Walker agree is "the best we'll face all year." QB Bob Simmons has led the club to victories over Suburban League opponents Arlington, Waltham, and Weymouth North.

Other Brookline victims have been Boston Technical, Boston Latin, and Weymouth South. The blemishes on their 6-2 record were put there by Brockton, 14-8, and Peabody, 6-0.

BOW TO BROCKTON

Newton High started out slow. Their opener was a 7-0 squeaker over Everett. Suburban League Champ Brockton then dealt them a 34-7 defeat. The tide turned against Weymouth South, whom they dropped 10-0. Since then the Tigers have gone wild, outscoring the opposition by a 150-57 margin. They currently sport a 7-1 mark.

One big reason for Newton's offensive success has been Cal Moffie. The junior quarterback has taken the starting job away from senior Ed Becker. His superb running has been the highlight of his play. "Cal's going to be the starter against Brookline," stated offensive coordinator Norm Walker.

points in the Tiger's first three "there's no way you could change that now."

A lot more hinges on this game than second place in the Suburban League. There is, of course, the legendary rivalry between the two schools; for Newton there is more. Winning this contest will mean snagging second place in Division I and a chance to meet the first place team at Boston University's Nickerson Field on December 2 to decide the Division Championship. The first place team is arch-enemy number one, Brockton.

"All that matters now, stated Walker, "is to beat Brookline and get a shot at Brockton."

The added pressure on Newton could have either a positive or negative effect on the Tigers. Whichever, Brookline Coach Schlutz admits, "I'd rather be in their position than ours."

But being an underdog means little in the Newton-Brookline game. Having the home field has been a jinx the past three years. It's the team which runs the ball hardest, fastest, and farthest which will win.

Suburban League Standings

Brockton	5-0-0
Brookline	3-1-0
Newton	3-1-0
Arlington	2-3-0

South Line Is Key In Battle Against Acton-Boxboro; Game Tossup

By Lewis H. Freedman

Asst. Sports Editor

Every Thanksgiving Day some brazen team breezes into town for a one-night stand and then disappears over the horizon never-to-be-seen again.

In the last half-dozen years the South eleven has faced Hingham, Oliver Ames, St. John's Prep, and played a couple of open dates. This year's turkey for Turkey Day is Dual County League foe Acton-Boxboro, a squad one game behind the Lions in the standings with a 2-4 record.

According to the coaches involved, the confrontation tomorrow, at Acton, promises to be a classic battle between size and speed—Newton South's large line versus Acton-Boxboro's fast backs.

"It's going to be a difficult game for us," said Acton coach Ed Leary. "Newton South is physically big and we're the smallest team in the league. We've had trouble all year with big teams and I think we'll have our hands full this time, too."

"Our backs are very fast," he continued, "and we have a good passing attack, but field conditions might be a factor. Any game at 10 a.m., this late in a New England fall, might find itself with a frozen and slippery field."

Acton is a tiny team. It's biggest player is tackle Dan Saganitch, who started the season at 195, but according to Leary, is now at 182. The entire AB starting line-up weighs between 160 and 182 pounds.

Lion mentor George Winkler is not anxious to concede Acton's advantage of speed in the backfield. "They have good speed in the backfield, at least half of it, but I certainly don't know about great overall team speed. Our scouting reports don't indicate that. Their backs are good, but no faster than the other good backs we've faced this year. And I don't think they have the team explosiveness of Stoughton."

Harrington has completed about 45 percent of his passes and forms a deadly throwing duo with his freshman brother Kevin. Kevin has hauled in 20 passes this fall and has also intercepted five in the defensive secondary.

Acton, expected to be a strong team this year, has been a disappointment. The squad is only 4-4, with losses to Weston, Bedford, and Lynnfield, all by one touchdown or less. AB beat Maynard, Foxboro, Westwood, and Lincoln-Sudbury, and also fell victim to Wayland, 29-0. South lost similarly to the Warriors—30-0.

"We've killed ourselves this year," observed Leary. "WE'VE BEEN AVERAGING 4.7 PENALTIES A GAME AND THAT'S BEEN THE DIFFERENCE. We could be 7-1."

The Lions, thus far, have been an equally erratic team. They are 3-5, but could easily be 5-3. South lost to Weston, 7-6 on a fluke play and fell to Rindge Tech, 15-13, as well as experiencing demoralizing losses to Wayland, Stoughton, and Bedford. Newton South beat Westwood, Lincoln-Sudbury, and Lynnfield this year, and has a two-game winning streak.

Injuries have played a major part in determining the outcome of South's season. The team has suffered an inordinate amount of bad breaks, and they have proven costly because the team does not have the depth—it is a sophomore-laden group.

There are two reasons for South's recent success. The first is the backfield combination of sophomores Peter Maples, Pete Nathanson, and Kevin Hoban and senior quarterback Ned Moan. Moan's foot injury has hindered him since the first game and he still cannot run on it, but he has proved very useful as a signal-caller and he and Hoban have jelled well as a team since Hoban moved to flanker.

The second reason is injuries. The squad outlasted them. "We always need luck in the injury factor," said Winkler. "We don't have depth. We needed one good experienced back this year to make the difference. Moan would have been the one we needed. He would have been the guy to break a tackle and inspire the squad."

12 Days Rest

South will be coming off a beneficial 12 days rest when the whistle blows—and everyone will be as healthy as possible. The team is also coming off a hard-fought 12-8 win over Westwood.

"Our defense won the game against Westwood," commented Winkler. We weren't consistent on the ground and the kids had too many missed assignments, but the big play helped us (two long passes from Moan to Hoban). We just didn't execute the way I had hoped."

"We have the momentum now," he said. "It kind of takes the sting out of a losing season if you can win your last three games."

South will start a line-up of Ned Moan; runningbacks Peter Maples and Peter Nathanson; flanker, Kevin Hoban; ends, John Staulo and Paul Pattison; tackles Bob Taglienti and Andy Moynahan; guards, Jim Caruso, and Mike McDonald; and center, Dick Taranto.

Acton-Boxboro will be going with: Quarterback, Joe Harrington; fullback, Darryl Schwartz; halfbacks, Brady Mayer and Jim Churchill; ends Kevin Harrington and Jay Shuttle; tackles, Dan Saganitch and Mike Roy; guards, Shawn Bowdoin and Rich Lamere; and center, Tom Kennedy.

"I think it's going to be a low-scoring, tough game," was Leary's final observation. "If it's cold, with their size, they'll try to ball control us."

"We've matured," Winkler said. "We had the opportunity to quit this season and we didn't. I hope our size will be an advantage. It was against Westwood. I think we can win it."

If the Lions conquer Acton, they will compile a winning record in the Dual County League. Their final mark will still be a game under .500, at 4-5, but the season will have turned out better than it looked earlier.

Newton South Lions

By LARRY GROIPEN

The Newton South Lions, 3-5 on the season to date, close out their 1972 football schedule tomorrow, against Acton-Boxboro (4-4) at 10 a.m. in Acton.

So far this year the South Lions, have moved the ball 1,154 yards on the ground, 329 yards of which has been gained by Steve Bucavallas, 5'10", 172-pound senior fullback.

Another new addition to the Lion backfield, is a 5'6", 145-pound sophomore from Meadowbrook Jr. High, Peter Nathanson, who has exhibited tremendous aggressiveness. As it stands now he leads the club in scoring with six touchdowns, four of which were accumulated in the last two games. He has totaled 30 out of the 98 points South has put up on the scoreboard this season.

The Newton Notebook

At a recent gathering of sportswriters in Boston, an interesting argument surfaced. The consensus of most of the sports experts was that Boston College tried to play teams on a football schedule it was not equipped to play. One writer, a staunch BC supporter, who also happens to attend that institution, conceded it as a possibility, but offered some refuting evidence.

The BC fan argued that the number of alumni from his school currently and recently performing in the pro football ranks indicated that the Eagles were not out of their depth—they just weren't too hot this year.

A quick scanning of the 26 pre-season rosters of the major league teams reveals that 11 Chestnut Hill grads dotted the pro football lineups.

Listed on various teams were: Dan Sullivan, guard, 11 years pro; Jack Concannon, quarterback, nine; Fred Willis, halfback, two; John Fitzgerald, center, two; Bill Thomas, halfback, rookie; Tom Bougous, fullback, rookie; Ed Rudeout, defensive back, rookie; Bob Hyland, guard, six; Mike Evans, center, six; Jim Whalen, tight end, eight; Kevin Clemente, linebacker, rookie. However, since that time Bougous, Rudeout, and Clemente have been cut, Concannon was dropped, picked up, and now I'm not too sure where he is. The biggest disappointment, though, was Bill Thomas. Thomas was the number one draft pick of the Dallas Cowboys, this year—the 26th player selected in the draft, and he did not make it.

Discounting the Eagles' recent pro misfortunes, the BC writer has a point. That is a lot of guys to have kicking around the pro ranks. But it's still hard to say that the Eagles are playing the schedule that's best for them in light of the recent shellacking they took from Georgia Tech. Forty-two to 10 is an ugly score no matter how you look at it.

Over the years the Eagles have had some pretty awesome running-backs. The all-time BC rushing leader is Fred Willis with 2,115 yards. He was followed by such impressive names as: Brendan McCarthy, Mike Holovak, Joe Johnson, Harry Crump, Alan Miller, Bougous, Ed DeSilva, Dave Bennett, Joe Diminick, Al Cannava, and Thomas.

number one. He has proven the most durable of them all, anyway, but age might be a factor now. The bumps and bruises accrued when he strays from the pocket now, might not heal so quickly. The fifth man, in second-place, is Y. A. Tittle. The most yards a passer ever gained in a season was 4,007 by Joe Willie Namath. No-one is on target to reach that goal this year, though Namath, the most explosive quarterback of them all, is the closest.

Pass Receiving

Is Don Maynard healthy this year? Will he be back next year? If the answer is yes to either of the above, we could have a brand new all-time leading pass receiver. The top man now is Raymond Berry with 631 catches, but Maynard is dangerously close with 603. Down the list we have Lionel Taylor, 567, Lance Alworth, 527, Bobby Mitchell, 521, Billy Howton, 503, Tommy McDonald, 495, Don Hutson, 483, Art Powell, 479, Boyd Dowler, 474, and Pete Tetzlaff, 452. Lance Alworth, with a little bit of luck, and a little bit of health, could be on top before he hangs them up.

There are now five passers who have thrown for 30,000 yards or more. Four of them are active. The leader, Johnny Unitas, with 38,657, however, is healthy, but not active, rotting away on the Colt bench. Strangely, two of the other three active leaders are incapacitated by injuries. John Brodie and Sonny Jurgenson both cracked the barrier this season, but both are now sidelined for the duration. Jurgenson might be all through—his Achilles tendon injury is serious. Brodie will most likely be back. Fran Tarkenton is both the youngest, at 33, and the healthiest of the top group, and therefore the most active. Barring a couple of seasons filled with injuries he'll be

A Look At Pro Football And The Record Breakers

By LEWIS H. FREEDMAN

Right about this time of year the energetic football fan is diving for his nearest record-book or wishing he had not disposed of the SPORTING NEWS' last offer when it arrived on September 21.

The time has come to cheer your favorite player on as he tries to make football history chasing the record of his choice. With five games left there's still plenty of time, so if you have your own record-books read along, and if you don't by now you'll never find one, so this is for this season.

because he's been injured, but Willard is a good bet to move into the top 10 next fall if he doesn't sooner.

As far as one season goes, none other than Jimmy Brown, with 1,863 yards, is the top banana. This is the thing to watch. A couple of big games by Redskins Larry Brown could put him within reach of the other Mr. Brown's never-before touchable mark. Brown has 996 yards with five games left. It isn't likely he will make it, but he could come surprisingly close.

Private School Grid Roundup

It's been a long season for Our Lady's High of Newton, and it just keeps on getting longer. Last weekend the Lancers dropped their sixth straight decision, 6-0, to St. Mary's.

It was one of the best team efforts of the season for the disheartened losers, as the Lancer defense was ferocious against the run, limiting St. Mary's to 18 total yards on the ground. Our Lady's had better luck, churning out 121 yards on land, including 84 by star halfback Tony Colella, coming off a 189-yard effort.

Statistics don't always tell the story in a game, however, but one statistic which tells the whole story of this game was St. Mary's' 115 yards in the air. Ninety-one of them came on one play: End Bill Dionne gathered in a short pass from Rich O'Donnell and scampered 91 yards for a touchdown and the ballgame.

Among the top 10 rushers of all time, only two active players are prominent figures. Jim Brown is the leader with 12,312 yards, 2,500 ahead of second-place Joe Perry. Jim Taylor, John Henry Johnson, Don Perkins, LeRoy Kelly, Steve Van Buren, Rick Casares, Dick Bass, and Bill Brown follow. The active men are Kelly of the Browns and Brown of the Vikings. Kelly has 6,074 yards entering this campaign and has already passed Perkins to move into fifth. Within two games he should pass Johnson's total of 6,803. In 13th place we find the 49'ers' Ken Willard, only 100 yards behind Brown. Although Brown isn't seeing much action this year, neither is Willard,

N.A.A. Lions Head For Game In Canada

By LEONARD HOLT

The Newton Athletic Association Lions will leave Logan Airport, Friday November 24th to play a game in Hamilton Ontario Canada where the East Mountain Rough Riders will host them for the weekend. Prior to the game the Lions will tour Canada and visit Niagara Falls. The Lions who have been studying Canadian rules for the past two weeks are all ready for the game. Good Luck Lions . . .

The NAA Lions dropped their 8th game of the year against four wins, by a score of 22-6 against a real good south shore league Norwood football team.

The Lions opened the scoring in the first period when Quarterback Mike Mosca hit Mark Rothman on a 72 yard pass play. The kick-off was returned by Norwood's Ted Willis to the Lion's three yard line. Two plays later Rich Keefe scored on a three yard plunge, and the extra points were scored on a pass from QB Bob Johnson to Rich Murray. Later in the period, a good ground game, on the muddy and slippery Highlands field resulted in a Norwood second score, a one yard plunge by Rich Keefe.

Again extra points scored on pass from QB Bob Johnson to Rich Murray. This was the only scoring until the third period when Norwood took over control of the ball on the opening kickoff and moved all the way down the field finally scoring on a QB and the extra points failing, with the score staying, 22-6. The Lions, however, overall looked pretty good, handicapped by their loss of veteran players due to injuries and their mud covered field. The Norwood Nitros who are in the Hamcock South Shore League and who sport a 7-1 record didn't play as well as some anticipated, but added another win to their merit.

Outstanding performances were displayed by most of the Lions, special mention should be given to Mark Rothman, Danny Bradley, Frank Tarantino, Mark Comerford, Bob Lipson and Mike Mosca, for their good jobs.

FINE JEWELRY - WATCH, CLOCK AND SILVER REPAIRING

NOVEMBER 22, 1972

Dear Friend:

Peterson's will close its doors — my ownership will cease as of the close of business — January 27, 1973.

I am entering another field of endeavor that is challenging and interesting — and it is with great sincerity of purpose that I will affiliate myself with the new venture.

My appreciation is great for your patronage, and that of many, many others — all of which contributed toward making Peterson's the fine store it is.

Preparations for an amazing Going-Out-Of-Business Sale have been made to commence Monday, November 27th, 1972. Every piece of our quality Jewelry, Watches, Rings, Pins, etc., have been marked at unusually low discount prices. Reductions of 30% to 50% and even more are in effect on most merchandise. Everything will be sold down to the bare walls!

Because of the circumstances all sales will be final — nothing exchanged — and on a cash basis only. Of course Master Charge and BankAmericard will be accepted.

You are most cordially invited and welcome to participate in this Sale. In closing — my thanks to you for your patronage, I am

Sincerely Yours,

Jason Sacks
Peterson's Jewelry.

Dinner Is Featured At Holiday Fair

A special dinner will be featured at St. John's Church Holiday Fair, at Lowell Ave. and Otis St., Newtonville on Friday, Dec. 1 at 6:30 p.m. The dinner, which will be chicken a la king, will be served at $3 per person. Doors will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and lunch will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. under the direction of Mrs. William S. Baker and her committee. No reservations are necessary.

The Fair will be a bonanza for the bargain minded, with such holiday gifts available as homemade aprons, very special holiday decorations, handmade garments for children, toys, food made by the gourmets in the parish, dolls, knitted goods made by ladies with years of experience, plants, books, unusual cheeses, and many attic treasures which have been donated by unselfish people.

Among those who have been dedicating much of their time to insure the success of the Fair are Mrs. Philip Jacobs, Jr., Mrs. Frank Wheelock, Miss Emily P. Burdon, Philip Jacobs, Jr., William Greeve, Mrs. C. Evan Johnson, Mrs. H. Scott Brent, Albert Kamborian, Mrs. Eaton Webber, Mrs. Dominic Strazzula, Mrs. Albert Lythgoe, Mrs. Stanley Benson, Mrs. Arthur A. Sasahara, Mrs. Paula Holmes.

Special assistants include Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Fogg, Jr., advance sales coupons; Mrs. Leon Slayton, decorations; Mrs. Helen Fuller, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur Dexter, assistant treasurer. Messrs. Eaton Webber and Harold Rice will be cashiers. The Rev. William C. Lowe, Rector of the parish, invites the entire community to attend.

COMMITTEE OF THE YEAR AWARD — Dr. Donald Hight, chairman of the Massachusetts division of services committee of the American Cancer Society presented the society's first committee of the year award to Sister Mary Elisabeth, Waltham, chairman of the Prospect Valley Branch Service Committee which includes Newton, Waltham, Wellesley, Watertown and Weston. Given annually to deserving recipients, the award represents a recognition of the past efforts of the committee who served the largest group of patients and whose methods techniques and organizational structure were deemed to be the highest calibre in the state.

Worship Service Friday

A family worship service will be held at 8:15 p.m. at Temple Beth Avodah Friday (Nov. 24). In keeping with the Thanksgiving season, the young people of the temple will bring to the service a special food offering to be shared with less fortunate families.

Rabbi Robert Miller will chant a blessing for all children in the congregation with birthdays this month. Following the service, a film will be shown honoring the 25th anniversary of the Israel.

The congregation will celebrate the first night of Chanukah on Dec. 1 at 8:15 p.m. with a family worship service and the presentation of a holiday play by fifth grade Hebrew students and members of the Junior Youth Group.

City Resident Heads Research Program

For the last 25 years Wentworth Institute has been conducting research and development work for the U.S. Air Force.

This year a Newton resident, Martin J. Davin, Newton Highlands, is heading up the program. Davin, who was the principal speaker at a recent convocation dinner, said that 55 projects have been conducted for Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories, a division of the Air Force Systems Command of U.S.A. Air Force, during the quarter of a century.

During one period, when involved with experimental balloon flight instrumentation, these balloons measured 75 feet higher than the Prudential building and 456 ft. in diameter. These balloons, whose instrumentation was designed, developed, fabricated, assembled and installed at Wentworth, were used to study atmospheric conditions in the range of 25 miles in space.

In many cases these balloons were recovered in such good condition, that they could be reused," Davin said. In one three year period, 72 units were recovered by offering a $25 award to the finders.

In one instance, Davin explained, it was necessary for the local sheriff to intervene to determine whether the finder or the owner of the land where the equipment landed should receive the twenty-five dollars. In another case, he reported, the finder sent a Christmas card, writing, "Who says there's no Santa Claus."

The range of research and development work over the 25 years has included instrumentation for German V-2 rocket, work on Aerobee rocket, atmospheric studies, data storage units, spectroscopy studies, pulse generators, radio astronomy instrumentation and data, and semi-conductor studies, he told the gathering.

He listed three projects presently in the Wentworth lab. These involve rocket instrumentation, a falling sphere project for the measurement of atmospheric density, and assistance in the installation of a meteorological system for a 15,000 ft. runway at the Air Force Flight Test Center at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The Aerobee rocket has been used for mapping all detectable infra-red sources in the night sky, Davin explained, in pointing out that Wentworth is

Counseling Group Holds Dinner And Workshop

The Family Counseling Service, Region West, recently held a dinner and workshop.

The purpose of the evening was a joining of minds of the Board members of Region West and its staff and several resource people. It was hoped they would increase their knowledge of the social problems and would initiate a plan of action for the Agency's role in social advocacy.

The workshops were held on housing, welfare, family planning and culture identity versus assimilation. This latter group was led by Dr. John M. Cullinane of Newton and participating in the discussion was Sister Frances George from the State Department of Education and Hubert E. Jones a Fellow at M.I.T.

The group felt that assimilation produced an artificial man. It was thought that the Family Counseling Service must move in and help when another agency needs it, in trying to forward the position of minority groups and give the people clear choice and a chance to stand on their own.

The Family Planning group, led by Mrs. Catherine White of the Waltham staff, acquired a knowledge and a perspective of the subject from Richard

Rogers of the Massachusetts Planned Parenthood

Association and Mrs. Elaine Pinderhughes of the Putnam Children's Center and Mrs. David Proctor of Wellesley and a volunteer at the Pregnancy Counseling Inc. in Boston.

The group felt that the Family Counseling Service should move towards family planning for health reasons. They decided that as a family agency it is their responsibility to bring information and help to all people regardless of their status in life.

Mrs. Joseph Messer of the Wellesley Housing Authority and Mrs. Agnes Rogers of the Brookline Tenants Association discussed the problems facing the middle income families who desires to move up and can find no option available and the land shortage facing Massachusetts in the near future

They recommended that Region West gathers statistics on the kind of housing available and the needs of the people and that the agency takes on the job of educating the community to the neighborhood development.

An aid to the Families of Dependent Children's mother focused the welfare workshop on the everyday problems facing a welfare mother and her children. It was brought up that if she has a desire to go to work, the mother should be able to locate her children in a good day care center. She suggested that the Family Counseling Service could train mothers to run a day care center themselves, or with the overload of cases at the welfare office, perhaps could train capable people to help the social worker.

This group also advocated a health plan for the middle class, who do not qualify for Medicaid but have a hard time meeting their medical expenses. Thought was also given to the aged and their lonely existence.

At nine p.m. the group reconvened to discuss their findings and to initiate a plan of action the Family Counseling Service could accept.

Verses Set To Music

A Newton musician and composer has taken several popular verses and set them to music.

Written by Elana Kenner, the songs are based on light verse taken from "UNHOLY WRIT," a collection of poetry by Mollie Kruger, nationally syndicated columnist in the Anglo-Jewish press. The songs are being performed at concerts this fall by Rene Rancourt, a popular local tenor with the Boston Opera Company, and Soprano Victoria Morham of Peabody.

Mrs. Kenner, wife of Rabbi Samuel Kenner, hit upon the idea of setting the amusing verses to music last summer. Obtaining permission from the author, a free-lance writer in Washington, D.C., she turned five of the poems into songs and plans to do more in the future, creating an "Unholy Writ" song book to be used by interested performers.

The two favorite songs now being performed for local organizations are "Bar Mitzvah," a humorous description of persons attending synagogue services where a Bar Mitzvah is being held, and "Summer Camp," a comparison of Biblical mothers like Leah and Rachel to modern American mothers.

Holiday Dinner Party Is Headstart Success

Newton's Headstart recent holiday dinner party was a huge success according to Anthony J. Bibbo, executive director of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc.

Turkey and a festive atmosphere coordinated by Dola Merrit was served to the 30 Headstart children, staff, families, and friends of the program with Mayor Theodore Mann present as special guest of honor.

Ginger Denham coordinated the hostesses and Carol Robinson handled reservations for the affair. Many parents and staff all contributed this most traditional event.

Newton's Headstart Advisory Committee has been most active with some recent fund raising and organizational activities under the leadership of William Hollman. Membership and officers will be selected at the next meeting of the Advisory Committee scheduled for Wednesday evening, Dec. 12.

This Advisory Comm., which is unique among the five communities participating in Communities United, applicant agency under the Office of Child Development, includes: nine parents, four board members from the NCSC, Inc., four members from the community at large, and a liaison person from the program site (the First Unitarian Society of Newton).

Each of the groups listed selects their own membership, while a nominating committee selects the four members from the community.

Samuel Turner, 17 Lodge Rd., West Newton, will join Mrs. Edward Landy, Mrs. John Taplin, and Arthur Martin as representatives from the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc.

Residents Given Recognition

Two Ndwton residents received recognition in the November issue of the Newton-Wellesley "Newell Post" for their years of continuous service at the hospital.

Mrs. Elma Walcott was given recognition for ten years of service. She began as a formula room aide in 1962 and transferred to the laundry two years later and is currently employed as a seamstress in the linen service.

George Stewart, Auburndale was recognized for his 30 years of service. He joined the hospital's housekeeping department in 1942 and transferred to the maintenance department 10 years later. He was promoted to his present position as general maintenance man in 1955.

Future concerts will feature faculty members Phil Wilson, Gary Burton and Herb Pomeroy.

concert Tuesday, Dec. 5.

Featured will be the world premiere of "Canzona and Overture," composed especially for the band by Peter Hazzard of the college composition department. The works of Praetorius, Milhaud, Schumann and Hindemith will also be performed.

Bavicchi, instructor of composition and music history, was recently named the recipient of the 1972 ASCAP Award, an honor which has been his for 10 consecutive years. A composer of music for orchestra, band and chamber ensembles, his works have been performed throughout the country and have been published by Oxford University Press. He is also conductor of the Arlington Philharmonic Orchestra and the Belmont Community Chorus.

The Dec. 5 concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. in New England Life Hall. It is part of the 1972-73 series of free concerts presented by Berklee College.

Aldermen Try $600 Salary

After sifting through an array of salary proposals Monday night, seven of 10 aldermen present voted in favor of paying themselves $600 per year as of 1973.

The sum, said to be favored by Mayor Theodore D. Mann, would be termed a reimbursement of expenses at the rate of $50 per month and would cost taxpayers $14,400.

The proposal, including a second clause calling for the establishment of an nine-member panel to study the salary question and make a recommendation to the Board of Aldermen, will be reported to the full board at its Dec. 4 meeting by the Legislation and Rules and Finance committees. Members of the Legislation and Rules Committee voted 3-2 in favor of the proposal Monday night after a "committee of the whole" meeting called to discuss the pay question ended.

Finance

The Finance Committee will have a chance to discuss the item during the recess in aldermanic proceedings next Monday.

Board members voted 13-9 last month to pay themselves $2,500 per year as of 1973 and the measure was vetoed by the mayor.

Mann declined to comment directly Tuesday when he was asked if he would favor any proposal to pay aldermen during their current term. He said answering the question would "tend to undercut their (the aldermen) action" and he would "wait and see what comes before me" before commenting.

He also said that he found the concept of paying aldermen for reimbursement of expenses "a more acceptable proposal."

Newton-Wellesley Holdup Hearing December 7

A court hearing is scheduled Dec. 7 for the case of a 19-year-old Medford man charged with a Thanksgiving Day hold-up and kidnapping at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The man, Paul M. Sullivan of 35 Cotting Rd., Medford, was arraigned Monday on the charges and sent to the Middlesex County House of Correction in lieu of $10,000 bail.

Sullivan was arrested by Newton Police Monday after he was arrested by Brookline police, arraigned on assault charges, and released on bail. Last Thursday's robbery was the latest in a rash of drug-related holdups that have plagued Newton for the last two weeks. It was also the second time in a week that Newton-Wellesley Hospital was hit and police also charged Sullivan with the Nov. 18 hospital robbery.

Newton Detective Capt. Walter D. Drew said Tuesday that Sullivan had been undergoing treatment for heroin addiction.

The detective, elaborating, said Sullivan had commented he got into "difficulty" after his dosage of methadone had been cut back as part of the detoxification program.

The Thanksgiving Day incident began at about 6:30 p.m. police recounted, when a man approached nurse Jacqueline Myers at her fourth floor station and ordered her to take him to the nurse's station where he believed drugs were kept.

According to police, Mrs. Myers said she convinced the man drugs were kept in a special locker and he ordered her to open it.

The man, she said, emptied the contents of the locker into a pillowcase and put the pillowcase into a green bag. He then started toward a rear staircase, taking Mrs. Myers with him and they encountered two security guards.

Mrs. Myers said the man then held a knife to her neck and forced her to leave the hospital with him. The pair went to Mrs. Myers car and she said he drove out onto Washington Street, turned down Commonwealth Avenue and then went to Centre Street and into Brighton where he let her go.

Mrs. Myers said that she then went to a nearby residence and called police.

Newton police also reported recovery of most of the drugs stolen in the hold-up when they searched a Brookline apartment.

Police Chief William F. Quinn said Tuesday that drug addicts

Firefighters, City Meet With Mediator

Newton firefighters and city negotiators are scheduled to meet with a state mediator Friday over contract talks.

The two sides were unable to reach a final agreement at a bargaining session last week, according to city officials.

The contract offered by the city contains basically the same provisions that were agreed to by other city unions, including salary increases, pensions and benefits.

According to the mayor's administrative assistant, James Salter, salaries were not the stumbling block to settlement. He said firefighters apparently were interested in securing a one-year agreement instead of a two-year contract that had been negotiated with other unions.

Salter also said that firefighters have had their work week cut from 46 to 42 hours while their pay remained stable. The reduction in hours, he noted, was tantamount to a pay increase and was studied by federal authorities for some time before they decided it was permissible under federal wage guidelines.

He went on to state that Newton firefighters are pressing for "full manning," the use of a full complement of men on all engines and ladders at all times. He estimated the cost to the city would be $750,000.

The union also faces the problem of having to act before the end of the year on the contract or face the necessity of an act of the legislature to collect retroactive pay after the deadline.

He explained that at the end of the calendar year, the city cannot take money for back pay out of the 1972 budget. Only lawmakers could okay such a move.

The firefighter's representative, Atty. E. David Wanger, said that the union wanted a one-year contract.

He explained that the union firefighters signed a three-year pact in 1970 that had a reopen clause for 1972. A two-year agreement, he said, would ultimately result in a four-year contract instead of a three-year agreement.

He also said that the one-year proposal would cost the city less money than the first year of the two-year package Mayor Theodore D. Mann's administration proposes.

Bargaining, he pointed out, has already gone through fact finding at a cost of $500 to the city and the fact finder recommended acceptance of the one-year deal proposed by the union.

(Second in a series)

A poignant ending and symbolic beginning marked the service Sunday as the First Church of Newton brought its 308-year ministry to an end and the Greek Evangelical Church began a new ministry of its own.

A driving morning rain storm had passed and sunlight broke through in time for the historic 3 p.m. service. An estimated 600 people packed the church for the celebration.

At an earlier morning service of the Greek congregation, a golden altar cross, duly inscribed, was passed from the moderator of the First Church, Julian Anthony, to the Greek Evangelical moderator, Lazaros Kantargos, a ceremonial completion of the property transfer.

Bright yellow chrysanthemums, placed in honor of the 16 ministers of the church, banked the chancel. Other flowers, yellow, gold, copper and bronze, were placed throughout the building in memory of those men, women and children, who, down through the years, had been members of the congregation.

Choir

The director of music, Audrey McDowell, invited anyone who had ever been a member of the choir over the years to join in the formation of the Celebration Choir. Seven members of the Greek choir also joined. Mrs. McDowell chose four anthems, one using the tune of "Old Hundredth," dating from the early 16th century, had a setting by Vaughn William. The other three, "Northfield," "Amazing Grace," and "Wondrous Love," were arrangements from Early American hymns.

The Prayer Response was written by David C. Jenney at the age of 13 which he wrote when he was a First Church choir boy.

The prelude and postlude were works of Handel arranged for piano and organ and performed by Mrs. McDowell and James Roth.

Procession

The opening procession was led by Dean Emeritus Vaughan Dabney of Andover-Newton and the Rev. D. R. Ross Anderson, retired from national denominational service. Both men are honorary deacons of First Church.

Dean Dabney carried a Geneva Bible, printed in 1577, and presented to the Rev. Jonathan Homer, the fifth minister, by Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin. Dr. Sanderson carried a 1731 Communion Cup, a rubbing from the inscription on the Cup was used on the cover of the program. It read, "The Church of Christ in New-Town in New England."

The Service itself was in six parts. Praise included the processional hymn "God of Grace and God of Glory" which had in it the relevant words, "Grant us wisdom, Grant us courage, For the facing of this hour."

Litany

Dr. Gerald Cragg, Brown Professor of Ecclesiastical History and acting dean of Andover-Newton Theological School, gave a litany of Thanksgiving which read in part:

"For this church gathered three centuries ago in the covenant of grace

We thank thee.

For all who in this place have sought and found peace and assurance, comfort in sorrow, strength in trouble and hope at all times,

We thank thee."

The Word - included readings from the Old Testament by Rabbi Murray I. Rothman of Temple Shalom; the Epistle by Msgr. William A. Granville, pastor of Sacred Heart Church; the Gospel by Mrs. Clarendon L. Southmayd of Bow, N. H.

former member and deaconess of First Church.

Reflections presented by Rev. Avery Post, president of the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ and by the Honorable Theodore D. Mann, mayor Newton, who read a Proclamation which he then presented to the minister.

Prayer and Meditation included the Celebrative Prayer by the Rev. Oliver Powell, Ara Minister of the Massachusetts Conference. The hymn reflected the historic beginnings of the church, dating as it does from Pilgrim days: "Oh God, Beneath Thy Guiding Hand, Our exiled fathers crossed the sea."

Controls Proposed For Parcels Over 9 Acres

A proposal that would regulate open space in the city's remaining major land parcels has been placed before the Board of Aldermen by Ald. Edward Richmond.

Currently before the City Planning Committee, the proposed amendment to Chapter 25 of city ordinances defines a "major parcel" of land and sets down qualifications for percentages of open space that must be maintained.

Richmond explained that his amendment is based on a 1969 Open Space report prepared by the Newton Planning Dept. which stated that if 15 per cent of the land parcels could remain open space, the "open space needs of the city would be satisfied."

Definition

A major parcel is defined as "undeveloped land consisting of nine or more acres" and the amendment would allow developers to increase the number of dwelling units allowed for additional percentages of open space saved over 15 per cent.

The proposal reads in part: "Permit the development of major parcels, provided that 15 per cent of each such major parcel to be designated by the Board of Aldermen, shall be used as permanent open space for park, playground or conservation usage; provided further that the number of dwelling units permitted under existing zoning ordinances for such major parcel shall be increased by five per cent."

It goes on to state: If 20 per cent of such major parcel is designated for park, playground or conservation usage, the number of dwelling units permitted under existing zoning ordinances shall be increased by 15 per cent."

Percentages

Continuing, it provides that if 25 per cent of the parcel is dedicated for open space, the number of dwelling units would be increased by 25 per cent. The Richmond proposal also stipulates that when designating the open portion of the land, the Board of Aldermen will try to "preserve as many natural features as feasible, such as hills, ponds, water-courses, wetlands," and that the public will have access to all of the designated land.

The aldermen said he hoped the new amendment would "contribute to saving open space in the city," but declined to predict how fellow-aldermen will react to it.

Land Use

He said after the City Planning Committee got finished with it, it would probably go before the Land Use Committee.

There are 24 lots in the city that would be affected, ranging from a nine-acre parcel in Newton Lower Falls to the Charles River Country Club 219-acre parcel.

Among the major parcels in the city are: Norumbega Park, Calvary Cemetery, Albemarle Golf Course, Woodland Country Club, Brae Burn Country Club, Chestnut Hill Country Club, Newton Cemetery, the Webster Estate, Volante Farm, Murley Farm, and Mt. Benedict Cemetery.

Standeers Debate Stymied

The latest round in the lengthy debate over whether or not school buses should have standees has been stymied temporarily by a report from City Solicitor Melvin J. Dangel.

Dangel told the aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee Monday night that the city's new fleet of school buses are not equipped with hand grips for standing passengers.

Without them, Dangel said, buses cannot carry standees. Despite his report, the L & R Committee voted in favor of reopening the standee question they had banned last year with an ordinance. The School Committee, meanwhile, has agreed to study the costs and

Traffic Guard Dies In Crash

Newton school traffic supervisor, Mrs. Sylvia J. Frechette, 45, wife of a Newton policeman, died in a traffic accident early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Sylvia Frechette who was the wife of Newton patrolman John H. Frechette, 97 Floral St. Newton Highlands, was trapped in her vehicle for 15 minutes following the Route 9 crash before Newton firemen could free her, police said.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, a police spokesman said. The accident happened minutes after she left her patrol post.

Phone Service Hearing Ends, Rate Question Still Unanswered

By RICHARD HULL

After establishing that telephone service in Newton was below par, the question of a rate reduction was left pending as the three-day hearing of the New England Telephone Co. wound up here this week.

Conducted through Tuesday by the Department of Public Utilities, the hearing was limited to discussion of city telephone service and a motion by Sanford A. Kowal, representing Newton, to relate service to rates was denied Monday by DPU Commissioner Francis Tucker.

Tucker said the DPU set a policy when it began conducting this series of hearings last month to limit testimony to service. He told Kowal that did not stop the city from petitioning for a hearing on rates.

Responding to the denial, Kowal said: "If you don't relate rates to service, you will never get effective movement from the Telephone Company or any other company."

Attorneys for both the firm and the City had quizzed residents, consultants, and Telephone Company employees in an attempt to ascertain the efficiency of telephone service in the Garden City.

The meetings were held in Newton at the request of Mayor Theodore H. Mann, who intends to propose a plan to the State Department of Public Utilities

(DPU) which would, if passed, provide a lowering of rates for New England Telephone customers who experience bad service. It would mean a 10 per cent reduction of flat rate monthly service for anyone in Massachusetts with inadequate service.

Coleman To Speak At Newton Art Association

Loring Coleman, Concord, will be the guest speaker at the Newton Art Association at the Workshop-Woman's Club of Newton Highlands, 72 Columbus st. on Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7:30. Coleman, head of the Art Department at the Middlesex Schools, says, "My paintings, however meticulously rendered, are basically abstract. My concern is to say what I have to say by means of the best design I can put together. My paintings undergo quite a process of preliminary sketching and changing forms to effect balance of light, dark, warm and cool color, without making a literal copy of what I have seen."

Coleman is a member of the American Watercolor Society, Boston Watercolor Society, Allied Artists of America, Guild of Boston Artists, Concord Art Association, and the Knickerbocker Artists of New York.

His paintings are found among the collections of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; Parrish Museum, Southampton, Long Island; Maryhill Museum, Washington; Butler Institute of American Art, Ohio; National Academy of Design; Concord Public Library; and many Boston banks.

Refreshments will be served under the direction of Pertie Holly and Jan Holly and their assistants, Elvira Sutton and Helen Clancy.

Rabbi Rothman Leads Open Forum Tuesday

Rabbi Murray I. Rothman of Temple Shalom will moderate an open forum on "The Middle East Crisis from a Judeo-Christian Perspective" on Tuesday (Dec. 5) at 8 p.m. in the faculty lounge of Worcester Hall on the Andover Newton Theological School Campus.

Guest speakers will be Rev. Ronald G. Whitney, Paul Parks and Eytan Gilboa.

Whitney is the director of urban ministry for the Springfield Council of Churches and the author of "Impressions of Israel." He paid his last visit to the country in February.

Parks, model city administrator for Boston, is a consultant to the Mayor's Committee for the Administration of Justice, and a member of the National Board of Americans for Democratic Action.

Gilboa, an Israeli, is currently at Harvard as a teaching fellow in international politics.

The program continues a series presented by Andover Newton Theological School's "Experiment in Christian Education."

Club's President To Speak In City

Thomas J. Connelly, past exalted ruler of Brookline Lodge, number 886 and the present New England governor of the Kiwanis Clubs, will be the Memorial Day speaker of the Newton Lodge of Elks, Number 1327.

The music soloist will be Luigi Vena, who sang at the late President John F. Kennedy's funeral. His accompanist will be Emanuel Zambelli.

The Elks' ritual will be conducted by the Newton Lodge of Elks and the Brookline Lodge of Elks, officers. The program will be at the Newton Lodge, 429 Centre St., Newton, on Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. A collation will be served after the services.

The chairman for the evening will be Paul Cavicchi, Jr., Newton Lodge, and George McGoldrick, P.E.R., Brookline Lodge.

feasibility of installing the hand grips.

Since the ordinance was passed by a previous Board of Aldermen, approval of a petition to overturn it from the state legislature is necessary to rescind the ban.

The School Committee has argued that not allowing standees is costing the taxpayers money while opponents point to student passenger safety as the primary reason for keeping the restriction.

The full Board of Aldermen will have a chance to vote on whether or not the State Legislature will be petitioned on this matter at its Dec. 4 meeting.

WHAT COUNTS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — All-American tailback Billy Taylor won the most important vote of all, that of his peers, when the Michigan lettermen elected him the Wolverines' senior athlete of the year.

APPRECIATION DINNER — to honor coach John Eldert and backfield coach Robert Carr was held by the Frank A. Day Varsity Football players at the F. A. Day Junior High School on Tuesday, Nov. 21. Front row, left to right are: co-captains, Steve Cononico, Steve Marchessault and Don Morrell. Rear row, left to right are: Tom Silk, M.C., coach John Eldert, coach Robert Carr, vice-president John Shaw and principal Van B. Seasholes. Award plaques were presented to the two coaches. The team in addition to the awards are also giving the coaches team jackets. The master of ceremonies for the evening was Tom Silk. In attendance were: the varsity team; parents of the players; team managers; cheerleaders; principal and Mrs. Ernest Van B. Seasholes and vice-principal and Mrs. John Shaw. The F. A. Day Varsity team ended their season with a 5-2 record.

Warning From Chief On Holiday Criminals

Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department issued a holiday warning to Newton citizens.

The Chief stated: "It is sad that as we approach the holidays, we must increase our vigilance for burglars, handbag snatchers, pick-pockets, car thieves, and drinking drivers."

"Each year we get reports of houses being broken into while people are out shopping, or cars broken into and Christmas gifts stolen, or we take victims of drunken drivers to hospitals. I would suggest extra thought on the part of each citizen to protect himself, his family and property, and perhaps by following these simple rules, we might minimize the problem this year."

He said: "(1) Have a light burning at home if you shop evenings; notify neighbors, a good neighbor is the best form of protection; (2) Lock all gifts in the trunk of the car rather than the back seat where they are highly visible and an invitation to a possible thief; (3)

Carry pocketbooks with a hand on the clasp to discourage pick-pockets; (5) Carry only necessary amount of money and a minimum of personal papers, keys, etc., in the event a bag is taken and (6) Drive carefully and defensively at all times and in particular where there may be holiday parties."

The Chief stated "with the excitement generated by the holidays, many of us drop our guard, and a happy holiday becomes one remember by loss. Vigilance could guarantee a happy holiday."

Levinson Is Named Heart Fund Chairman

Mark J. Levinson of Needham has been named district chairman for the 1973 Heart Fund campaign by Raymond N. Shorey, Heart Fund regional chairman for the west suburban area of Boston.

Levinson's district includes Newton, Milton, Needham and Wellesley. He will coordinate Heart Fund activities in these communities during February. "Millions of volunteers throughout the country will be calling on their neighbors this coming February as part of the continuing nationwide effort to combat the cardiovascular diseases, our nation's number one killer," Levinson said. "The success of this great effort requires the cooperation of every one of us."

Levinson is an attorney and a partner in the firm of Warner and Stockpole. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, received an LL.B. degree from Boston University Law School and an LL.M. from Harvard Law School.

An active Heart volunteer, Levinson has served as Needham community chairman for the past two years.

"While we hope that everyone will give generously in February, we also hope that people learn that premature death from heart disease, can be prevented in many cases through proper diet, exercise, maintaining normal body weight, eating foods low in cholesterol and having regular checkups," Levinson added.

City Now Has 2 Recycling Areas

The city of Newton now has two areas where citizens can take glass, cans, and paper for recycling.

One, is on the north side of the city at the Rufford ave. disposal site opposite the incinerator and the other is on the south side of the city, at the Elliot st. Yard, on Elliot st.

These areas are open from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday at the Rufford ave. site.

Japanese beetle infestations cover 22 states from Maine to Georgia and west to Illinois.

Free Library To Show Film On Urban Poverty

"A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," is the free film scheduled at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, on Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m.

Elia Kazan's first film, made in 1945 and adapted from an autobiographical novel by Betty Smith, centers around 12 year-old Francie Nolan's struggle for a meaningful life in urban poverty.

The tree is symbolic of the girl who is made strong through adversity. Kazan's film is an account of the period between childhood and maturity.

The film features Dorothy

McGuire, Joan Blondell, Lloyd Nolan, Peggy Ann Garner, James Dunn and James Gleason. Peggy Ann Garner, as Francie, and James Dunn, as her father, won academy awards for their performances.

A selection of feature films, documentaries and family films are screened at the Main Library throughout the year on Tuesdays at noon, Thursdays at 2:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Film listings are available at the nearest library. Main Library hours are Monday-Friday 9-5, Saturdays 9-5:30, and Sundays 1-4.

Education Panel At Warren PTA

A panel of Newton curriculum coordinators who will discuss programs and philosophies in their major subject areas, will be featured at the Warren Junior High PTA on Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 7:45 p.m.

The discussion will be geared to bring out the effort of the work being done by these people on the education of Newton's children.

Harold Beattie will moderate the panel consisting of Robert Zeeb, English; Edward Lerner, social studies; Preston Shea, foreign language; Arthur Short, math; Daniel Malia, technical vocational and Robert Kilburn, science.

Small group discussions with the various subject coordinators will follow, giving parents a chance to discuss current programs and future directions in a particular area.

Green Elected

Hudson S. Green, Newton, has been elected a Trust Officer of the United States Trust Company, a subsidiary of UST Corp. of Boston.

In his new position, Green will be responsible for Trust and Estate Administration.

He comes from the Bank of Delaware in Wilmington, Delaware where he was a Trust Administration Officer. Prior to that association he had been with the Guardian Life Insurance Company of America.

Green is a graduate of Marietta College in Marietta, Ohio, and attended graduate school at Widener College in Chester, Pennsylvania. He has also done work at the American Institute of Banking and the University of Delaware.

A native of Mount Kisco, New York, Green grew up in Bernardsville, New Jersey.

David Susskind Speaks At Sidney Hill Brunch

"Don't despair of your T.V. set, it will grow up!" said David Susskind to a United States States Trust Company audience of 500 women with behind the camera anecdotes and social commentary.

During the recent meeting, Susskind recalled his first broadcast in 1958 with Nikita Khrushchev, then Soviet Premier, which resulted in hate mail, loss of program sponsorship and a vivid exchange of views with the Russian leader at the height of the cold war.

He also talked of Bertrand Russell's prescription for dealing with English radicals: "We put them in the House of Lords, and never hear from them again."

He responded to a question from the audience on abortion with the statement that "the State should stay out of the bedroom," and supported efforts like those in Massachusetts to enable prisoners to re-adjust gradually to society, to reduce the number of repeat jail sentences.

This was the last in 1972 series of Banker's Brunches hosted by the United States Trust Company at the Sidney Hill Country Club. Earlier speakers were Ralph Nader and comedian and social critic Dick Gregory.

A Helping Hand For Christmas

"In affluent Newton it may be hard to believe that we have over 700 families and individuals who need an extra helping hand at Christmas, but that is the number anticipated this year, based on last year's work of the Christmas Service Committee," Charles J. Doherty, president of the Newton Community Council and Community Chest said.

"From donations generously made by individuals and organizations the Christmas Service Committee has, for over 30 years, made it possible for some individuals and families to have 'a little extra' to use at Christmas, whether it be for children's toys or clothing, a holiday dinner or special treat for the elderly.

"Without these funds, small though they may be, many families would not be able to make any special expenditures for the holiday season," he continued. "What we need are many small donations from people who would like to share in helping a local person in need at Christmas. Also needed are some generous citizens and organizations who will surprise the Christmas Service Committee with sizeable contributions."

This year the work of this Committee is being sponsored by Church Women United in Newton and the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs. The committee arranges for the distribution of all funds collected and provides an added service which helps to avoid duplication of effort by different organizations.

Checks made payable to "Christmas Service Committee" may be mailed to Christmas Service Committee, 848 Beacon St., Newton Centre, 02159. Any questions may be directed to the treasurer, Mrs. Jean Bartlett, at 969-0498.

Schmidlein's Come Up With One More Winner

Kevin Schmidlein of Waban was narrowly nosed out of first place last week at the National Junior Frisbee Championship in Las Vegas, Nev.

In garnering runner-up honors, Schmidlein succeeded in upholding the "one-two" punch of Newton's identical Schmidlein twin champions.

His 15-year-old brother, Kenneth, swept the championship field in 1971 in Las Vegas.

Kevin's efforts earned him a $500 savings bond and a trophy and ended a round of wins that started at the Angier School playground. He won the Massachusetts and New England championships.

The national event features competition among 11 regional champions throughout the United States.

Reportedly, over 1.5 million boys and girls, 15 years old and under, competed in various phases of the competition that began early in the summer all over the country.

The winner of the contest was Paul Wilson of Charleston, W.Va.

Skills tested in determining the winner are distance and accuracy. Included are straight tosses into a circle, backhand left and right curves into a circle, sidearm or underarm left and right curves, a backhand skip and an underarm or sidearm skip into a circle.

The twins, who have played with the frisbee for about four years, are 10th grade students at Newton South High School.

The two now plan to set back and coach the efforts of the 11-year-old brother, Jim, whose caught the frisbee bug.

Public Housing To Be Topic Of Democratic Committee Meeting

Newton's public housing program for families will be the subject of an open meeting of the Ward 7 Democratic Committee next Tuesday (Dec. 5) at 8:45 p.m. at Grace Episcopal Church, Church and Eldridge St., Newton Corner.

James A. Miller, vice chairman of the Newton Housing Authority, and deputy executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, who authored a major report on low-income housing sites while he was Newton's planning director, will join a panel. It includes: veteran alderman Joseph McDonnell; chairman of the aldermanic Housing Committee; and Sandy Shick, past chairman of the League of Women Voters Human Resources Committee. Gordon A. Martin, former vice-chairman of the Democratic City Committee, will moderate.

Dr. Cavin Leeman, Ward 7 Democratic Committee chairman, stated: "During the busy election campaign just completed, the crucial issue of public housing for families in Newton has not received the amount of attention it merits. Plans have been made, but much remains to be done, and the Ward 7 Democratic Committee hopes that this meeting will provide the impetus for constructive public concern."

all Newton residents are welcome at this panel. "Public Housing in Newton. Where do we Stand?"

ONE OF THREE mini-bike tracks on the land of the former Newton City Infirmary off Winchester St., Newton Highlands, is demonstrated by these riders. The program, inaugurated by the Newton Recreation Department this year, proved successful and it is expected, will be expanded next season. The program is directed by Paul Patriacca, extreme left, and the Safety Officer is Robert Braceland of the Newton Police Department, walking at right.

City Prepares For Ice Skating

Recreation Commissioner John B. Penney says that the department will operate and maintain three natural skating areas and a dozen flooded skating areas this winter.

The natural skating areas will be at Bullough's Pond, Crystal Lake and Ware's Cove. Flooded skating areas will be available at the Ward School, Bowen School, Spaulding School, Memorial School, Newton Highlands Playground, Lincoln Playground, Hamilton School West Newton Common, Boyd Park and Allison Park.

Penny reports that the Recreation Department has activated a recorded message Skating Information Telephone Service, which will continue through February of 1973.

Information about skating conditions at Bullough's Pond, Crystal Lake and Ware's Cove, as well as conditions at the Toboggan Shute at the Newton Centre Playground can be obtained by calling 969-2851, seven days a week, 24 hours a day. Conditions will be reported by members of the Recreation Staff who will keep abreast of changing weather conditions.

People are requested not to call the Police Department or the regular Recreation Department telephone number or City Hall. All skating and tobogganing information is available at 969-2851.

Commissioner Penney advises skaters that the Board of Aldermen has set regulations for ice skating safety standards and that these regulations will be enforced by the Recreation Department. According to the regulations, no person shall skate or walk on ice over a publicly owned body of water under control of the Recreation Department over two feet deep unless it is a designated skating area. The areas are Bullough's Pond, Newtonville, Crystal Lake, Newton Highlands and Ware's Cove, Auburndale.

The safety standards posted in all schools and libraries in Newton include the following: "In general, the thickness of the ice required before public skating will be allowed in the designated skating areas will be a minimum of 4 1/2 inches as measured by Recreation Department personnel. Weather, temperature and ice conditions will vary the thickness necessary for safe public skating.

Thspubli is warned that signs indicating "No Skating", "Danger" and "Thin Ice", will be posted for everyone's safety. Moving these signs or disregarding their warning messages could lead to a tragedy. No person shall move any sign or barrier, or go into an area indicated as dangerous, or refuse to obey the reasonable directions of Recreation Department personnel or Police Officers."

Special Trust Fund Set Up In Memory Of Eileen Gill

A special trust fund in the memory of the late Eileen Frances Gill, Chestnut Hill, an employee of the First National Bank of Boston, has been established by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gill, with the bank's Old Colony Trust Division.

Miss Gill, 25, was shot to death by a man on a street near the bank on August 15. The Gills said the money contributed to the fund will be available to children of current and retired non-officer employees of the bank for use primarily in defraying education expenses.

The trust was created as a result of interest expressed by family, friends and bank colleagues of Eileen in making contributions that would appropriately perpetuate her memory. Old Colony's Charitable Committee is administering the fund. Inquiries may be directed to Edward N. Dane, secretary of the committee.

Miss Gill was an accounts receivable analyst in the bank's Factoring Division since February, 1969. She was graduated from Newton High School in 1964 and the University of Massachusetts in 1968. She later attended evening classes at Boston College.

Homestead Plans Reception

The city's Centennial and the part played by "Newton Pioneers in Religion" in the community's growth and development, will be honored by an open house at the Jackson Homestead, 527 Washington St., on Sunday, Dec. 10 from 2 to 5 p.m.

The Homestead is open to the public and there is no admission charge. The event is one of a series marking the Centennial of Newton's incorporation as a city in cooperation with the Mayor's City-side Centennial Commission.

The Homestead's exhibits focus public attention on the part played by Newton's religious leaders and organizations in the life of the community. Names of Newton's distinguished citizens of the past are found throughout the records of the various churches that will be on exhibition.

Mrs. Orin E. Skinner, co-chairman of exhibits with Mrs. John D. Fox, who has collected the many items that will be shown, points out that the present exhibit is limited to the earlier groups.

During the next ten weeks the exhibitions will be changed to include those of the present time and more recent years. The collection of data and articles is much too large for a single showing at the Homestead, Mrs. Skinner indicated.

The records and historical articles of approximately twenty churches of the earlier years of Newton will be found in the Homestead's exhibits. These are on loan to the museum thanks to Mrs. Skinner who contacted the various groups.

Hostesses for the open house are: Mrs. Everett H. Potter and Mrs. Robert P. T. Coffin co-chairmen; Mrs. Albert E. Burgess, Miss Margaret K. Murphy, Mrs. Hugh M. Tomb, Mrs. R. Emerson Sylvester, Mrs. William F. Pounds, Miss Betty Haldane, Mrs. Edward C. Kelley, Jr. of the friends of the Jackson Homestead.

Others are Miss Elsa Badger, Mrs. Charles A. Lytle, Mrs. Russell M. Monto, Mrs. Joseph B. Moulton, of the Newton Highlands Woman's Club.

Other hostesses are Mrs. Robert L. McWilliams Mrs. J. M. Swift, Mrs. William A. Martin, and Mrs. John F. Jenkins of the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs. Also Mrs. Armand Pottey, Mrs. George E. Eames, Mrs. Ralph W. Hamilton, Mrs. Robert L. Billings, of the Newton Upper Falls Woman's Club.

Day Camp Can Use Mini-Bus

Approval has been given by the Newton School Committee for the Community Center Saturday Day Camp to employ the Peabody School mini-bus for transporting children participating in the weekend activities.

The bus will pick up the youngsters, Newton children aged 7 to 12, at their homes, and take them to the Day Camp which is being conducted at the Hale Reservation in Westwood. While there, the youths engage in a variety of activities including cooking, rock-climbing, carpentry, and arts and crafts.

The Day Camp, a non-profit enterprise, is run jointly by the Newton Community Services Center and Boston College, and is staffed by B.C. School of Education graduate students and seniors. It will run through June.

Transportation problems had been plaguing the counselors, who had been previously arranging car pools and picking up the youngsters in their own automobiles. Director John M. Cullinane of the School Department's Pupil Personnel Services recommended the use of the Peabody School mini-bus, which is not in use most weekends.

The School Committee approval is expected to facilitate the Day Camp's operation. Michael Gardner of the Community Center will drive the vehicle, which will be utilized for Day Camp transportation only when not in use by Cullinane's staff for a special project.

Day Camp personnel will be responsible for gas and oil, and will drive the mini-bus an average of 22 miles each time they use it. Marilyn Gordon, acting director, Special Education, will coordinate the use of the Peabody bus.

Republican Group To Hold Meeting

The Newton Republican Committee will meet at the work shop, Columbus St., Newton Highlands, on Thursday evening, Nov. 30.

A principal item of the agenda is the election of a treasurer to succeed Mrs. Charlotte Hirshberg, who resigned to accept a position requiring her full time.

Reports will be received from the chairman of the eight Newton Republican Ward Committees and plans set for the year ahead.

Gaynor Asks Newton To Relieve Real Estate Taxes

Alderman Robert Gaynor, Ward One, Newton, has proposed to the Board of Aldermen and to Mayor Theodore D. Mann, that any funds received by the City of Newton from the Revenue Act of 1972, be given solely to relieve the real estate taxes and not for any other purpose.

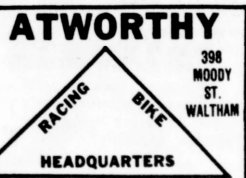

He said that the homeowners of Newton have been "aggrieved by the over burdening tax rate on real estate," and therefore all the money that the city receives from the Act should go to this cause.

The Revenue Act of 1972 was adopted by the U.S. Congress and Senate and approved by the President. Because of it Massachusetts will receive certain funds to be distributed to the various cities and towns in accordance with the percentage allotted to the state. The City of Newton is expected to receive about $729,000.

Newton's Centennial

There's a gala celebration shaping up here in Newton that marks more of a beginning than an end. It's the coming observance of Newton's 100 anniversary as a city.

The actual events entwined with the celebration open in early May. The festival format includes religious observances, a centennial ball, a flower stall mall, pageants, festivals of performing arts, historical tours, a record making centennial parade and many other events that will stand out like tall candles on the birthday cake.

The ideas — and there were many — behind the birthday is to have something for everybody and that includes the pioneers, Newton's present 92,000 residents, and the generations to come who will live here.

The party planners haven't missed.

And the most vibrant note that will make the celebration a success is the all-out spirit of volunteering, lending a hand, helping out, that pervades the many meetings and discussions centering on the spring festivities.

If the hundredth year celebration were staged by a commercial firm the bill would be staggering. But the volunteers, the known and not so familiar on every committee, are offering their services without charge.

No one corporation could ever hope to hire the talented residents who have come forward from the 14 villages. They live here. They are proud of their city. And the Garden City is proud of them.

What the volunteers are doing today for Newton goes far beyond this centennial. It's the unselfish start that best measures their mark on the next hundred years of this city.

Dumps vs Buildings

For some time now Plymouth's County Commissioners have had right on the top of their list of most needed things within their jurisdiction a new Probate Court building along with facilities for a Registry of Deeds.

They knew the exact spot for the structures. It was on eight acres of land on South street in the town of Plymouth. The county owned the property. Everyone seems agreed on the need for the facilities.

So why the delay?

The good folk of the town of Plymouth, at least a majority of those who showed up for a Special Town Meeting the other night made it abundantly clear they don't want any sparkling new county buildings on that site.

They want to keep it as it is — A TOWN DUMP.

The County Commissioners were willing to strike a bargain in the matter. If it was made clear, if Plymouth returned the land to the county and found itself a dump elsewhere the commissioners wouldn't take the town to court and wind up with both the land and commensurate damages as well.

"OK go to court," was the ringing response of the majority of TM voters.

It seems Plymouth got a lease on the South street property back in 1942. It was to be good for 50 years. Town authorities didn't waste any time hiring architects and hauling in Indiana limestone for the construction for municipal buildings. They went into the best sanitary landfill operation around. Basically, it was a dump. It looked like a dump. It served as a dump.

Now the county claims certain terms of that 50-year lease have been violated. It's continuance as a dump will ruin its potential as courthouse site, they mean.

"So what?," argues Plymouth. "Take South street and we have no dump and the prospect of finding a new site are bleak, indeed."

There it stands? An old-fashioned prosaic dump or stately halls of justice?

This isn't the first instance of clashes between local communities and counties with question of ecology and waste disposal lurking in the background.

Some of those smart-appearing members of this year's young bar class might well start exploring the wisdom of specializing in those fields. They are going to take up a lot of our courts' time in the very near future.

Junk Mail Ally

The Registry of Motor Vehicles took a pretty severe lambasting from many motorists during the last legislative session when it succeeded in beating off attempts to halt its practice of selling lists of the holders of motor vehicle agencies.

It parried all kinds of criticism and stuck to its main argument. "What's wrong?" proponents of the sales asked, "if we are able to bring in a little cash to the public treasury?"

This year the Division of Marine and Recreational vehicles announce it plans to get into the act. It is pretty confident it will be able to find a lucrative market of snowmobiles and the like. The confidence is pretty soundly grounded.

The householder who finds his daily mail made up to a great extent by "junk mail" these days has probably long ago forced himself to accept that experience as one of the penalties of modern life.

If there's any consolation in the fact he now knows some answers to that question — "How in the world did they ever get hold of my name and address?" Playing a role as chief supplier is his own state government.

TARGET PRACTICE

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

By JAMES G. COLBERT

Sargent Allows Court Chaos; Now Can Pressure Council

Governor Sargent's determination to apply pressure on the Executive Council for the speedy approval of the 38 new judges he nominates almost certainly will cause a chaotic condition in Massachusetts courts when the over-70 judges are forced to retire from the bench.

Mr. Sargent has been urged and advised to call a special one-day session of the Legislature for the enactment of a law allowing a chief justice to recall for temporary service certain jurists forced into retirement by the new "over 70 and out" amendment to the State Constitution. He declined to do so.

That action, which should have been taken earlier this year and could still be taken, would have made possible an orderly change-over in the courts.

But it would have deprived the Governor of the club he obviously hopes to use to pressure the Executive Council into swift confirmation of his judicial nominees to end the court chaos.

From Mr. Sargent's standpoint it may be an astute political maneuver, but it also illustrates why the esteem in which he is held has dropped during his term of office.

It is another instance of his giving top priority to his own personal political considerations.

Under the provisions of the constitutional change adopted by the voters Nov. 7, judges, who have reached their 70th birthday, must retire the moment the recent election returns are certified by the Governor's Council.

They include some of the most able and experienced judges in the Commonwealth. Some of them presumably will be sitting on cases or have matters under advisement at the arrival of the moment when they must take off their black robes and step down.

This is a mandate of the people. No one quarrels with their decision or their right to amend their own State Constitution. A couple of judges remained on the bench after the time when they should have retired.

As Probate Court Judge Robert Gardiner Wilson put it, the barn was burned down to get rid of two or three horses.

However, it was known months ago that Referendum Question No. 7 probably would be approved and that this crisis in all likelihood would develop.

Francis W. Sargent is Governor of the Commonwealth and the public leader responsible for setting up the machinery to make possible an orderly transition and to avoid any unnecessary chaos.

He didn't do that. All he did was set up a 12-member panel to recruit and screen judicial appointees. In the end he will make his own decisions as to who should be appointed to the bench and who shouldn't.

The 38 judges must get out the moment the election returns are certified by the Executive Council. Governor Sargent cannot nominate their successors until that actually happens.

Under the law the Council must table the nominations for at least a week before acting on them. The Council members probably will need more than a week to examine the backgrounds and deliberate on the qualifications of 38 potential judges.

In the meantime, the Massachusetts courts will be bogged down in what probably will be the worst judicial crisis in the State's history.

But Governor Sargent will be in a position to tell the Executive Council to hurry up and approve his judicial nominees in order to terminate the chaos which he allowed to develop. It's not a very statesmanlike procedure.

Ted Would Have Made Much Stronger Run Against Nixon

One interesting Gallup pole, which received only scant attention in the aftermath of the election, showed that President Nixon, who won a landslide victory over Senator George McGovern, would have defeated Senator Edward M. Kennedy by a much narrower margin.

This finding was based on an October survey which showed Nixon 23 per cent ahead of McGovern but only nine points in front of Ted Kennedy. Five per cent of the voters were undecided in each instance.

On a straw vote taken in December of last year Kennedy ran only three points behind Nixon. Then Nixon visited Moscow and Peking, and his political stock rose.

This writer is not convinced that President Nixon would have defeated Senator Kennedy at all if they had been the Presidential adversaries.

Senator Kennedy, of course, made no campaign for the Presidency. Usually, a President starts with a substantial lead and loses ground as the campaign progresses.

Ted Kennedy, an exciting campaigner and a colorful figure who draws big crowds, might have been able to close the gap if he had been fighting for election as President.

An incumbent President, of course, is never easy to defeat, and Mr. Nixon had a number of factors working for him which might have been enough to enable him to beat back a challenge by Ted Kennedy. But it would have been a close race.

Senator McGovern's campaign was largely ineffective. He was able to make only minor gains. But he isn't a Ted Kennedy by any means.

It Might Have Been Better If McGovern Kept Eagleton

Hindsight has 20-20 vision, as the politicos in the smoke-filled back rooms are disposed to observe.

But in retrospect it now seems it would have been less disastrous for Senator George McGovern to have kept Senator Thomas Eagleton as his Vice Presidential running mate than to dump him the way he did.

It wasn't so much that McGovern dropped Eagleton. Almost every political pundit agreed at the time that McGovern really had no choice but to replace the Missouri Senator on the ticket.

It was the way he dumped him, his clumsy, inept and even cruel handling of the matter.

People are basically fair-minded in their judgement. They resent seeing anyone kicked around beyond a point. Senator Eagleton is an appealing person who aroused a great deal of public sympathy.

It now develops that two McGovern aides knew at least part of Eagleton's medical background but didn't consider it important enough to tell the Senator about it.

McGovern made the mistake of not acting immediately and decisively, of creating the impression that he would retain Eagleton, that he vacillated, and that he finally yielded to pressure, some of it from within his own organization.

The timing in his handling of the Eagleton Affair could not have been much worse because he dropped Eagleton overboard after public sympathy had been aroused for Eagleton.

Sargent Shriver hardly proved to be the answer to McGovern's hopes. It's clear now why Ted tried to dissuade Shriver from accepting the Vice Presidential nomination. He was endeavoring to help McGovern.

Rumor That Gov. Sargent May Join Ford Foundation

Widely circulated but still unverified is a report on Beacon Hill that Governor Francis W. Sargent will resign to accept a position with the Ford Foundation.

If the rumor proves to be correct, Lieutenant Governor Donald Dwight will assume the Governorship, just as Mr. Sargent did early in 1969 when John A. Volpe, then Governor, went to Washington to become Secretary of Transportation.

Many State House observers are convinced that Governor Sargent no longer enjoys heading the state government, that the duties of his office are resting heavily on him and that he would like to get out.

Members of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress say that Sargent sought the job of Secretary of the Interior in President Nixon's Cabinet but that John Volpe is doing everything he can to keep Sargent out of the Cabinet and that Volpe is likely to prevail.

If it were not for Senator Edward W. Brooke, incidentally, Volpe might be Vice President today instead of Spiro Agnew and be preparing to seek the Presidential nomination in 1976.

Volpe had a good chance of becoming President Nixon's running mate in 1968 until Brooke executed a political coup which delivered the Massachusetts delegation to the Republican National Convention to New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

As a result, Volpe, who had been caught by surprise, was unable to deliver the Bay State convention votes to Nixon and, in fact, was himself obliged to vote for Rockefeller.

That probably cost him the No. 2 spot on the GOP national ticket in '68 and a chance to try for the Presidency itself in '76.

Jean Westwood Seen On Way Out, But Strauss Is Not In

While the Democratic picture is muddy and muddled, the indications are that Mrs. Jean Westwood of Utah will be replaced as the party's national chairman when the Democratic National Committee meets on Dec. 9.

Senator George McGovern, who at first indicated that he would stand behind Mrs. Westwood, apparently will not make any big battle in her behalf. Senator Edward M. Kennedy evidently will not make any fight at all for her.

So that probably tells a political requiem for Mrs. Westwood who publicly urged Senator Thomas Eagleton to step down for the good of the Democratic party and is now being requested to do the same thing herself for the same reason.

However, there is substantial doubt as to who eventually will be tapped to succeed Mrs. Westwood. It probably will not be Robert Strauss of Texas, former Democratic national treasurer who is being backed by Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson.

Too many Democrats believe Strauss is too close to a fellow Texan, John Connally, head of the Democrats for Nixon in the recent campaign.

They also suspect that Jackson, Humphrey and possible Connally may be trying to take over the Democratic party machinery.

Jackson is too hawkish and too conservative for many Democrats. Humphrey is too showman and is considered one of the architects of the Democratic disaster in the Presidential election because of the manner in which he divided the Democratic vote and made possible the nomination of McGovern.

Connally, of course, is regarded as a maverick Democrat and is not about to be given any voice in shaping the future of the Democratic party nationally.

Attorney George Mitchell of Portland, Me., a friend of Senator Edmund Muskie, is being mentioned as a possible successor to Mrs. Westwood. Mitchell is acceptable to the McGovern adherents and to Mrs. Westwood. However, there is no certainty he can muster the necessary votes to win election.

If a stalemate develops, Larry O'Brien may be a compromise choice to take over the position now held by the gravelly-voiced Mrs. Westwood. O'Brien seems to make a practise of declaring publicly that he doesn't want the chairmanship while asserting privately that he would be happy to make the sacrifice and hold the job.

That's what caused the confusion last July when Mrs. Westwood was elected to succeed O'Brien as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Senator McGovern thought O'Brien meant it when he said he didn't want to continue as national chairman.

What O'Brien really meant was that he wanted to be coaxed to stay.

O'Neill Has Votes Sewed Up To Become Majority Leader

Congressman Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Cambridge apparently has the votes sewed up to assure his election as the next Democratic leader in the national House and the No. 2 man on Washington's Capitol Hill.

This will be a well-deserved promotion for the highly competent and extremely popular O'Neill and a bit of political good fortune for Massachusetts.

It probably will mean that six years from now Congressman O'Neill will be preparing to succeed Carl Albert as Speaker and take over one of the most powerful political positions in the Nation.

O'Neill will get the solid backing of the Democratic Congressmen from New England. Some of the Republicans also would vote for him if they could. He will have the support of most of the Democratic Congressmen from the northern industrial states.

He may even get some votes in the south though his opponent is a southerner — if he still has an adversary when the election is held early next year to fill the position left vacant by the supposed death of Hal Boggs while on a flight in Alaska.

"Tip" O'Neill has been an outstanding congressman. He will be a credit to the Democratic party as the Majority Leader in the House. His ability to help Massachusetts and its citizens will be strengthened.

Unfair Treatment of Blacks In Navy, Tragic, Appalling

Political observers are wondering what effect the possible appointment of John Connally of Texas as Secretary of Defense would have upon the efforts to achieve racial equality in the navy.

From what this writer can ascertain, Admiral Elmo R. Zumwalt, Jr., chief of national operations, is making a genuine effort to provide equal treatment and equal opportunity for non-whites in the navy.

But some of the officers under him apparently are just going through the motions of carrying out his orders and are not actually putting them into effect. Zumwalt has served notice on some of them that they will be denied promotions and even mustered out of the service unless the situation is cleared up.

Black members of the navy apparently have a legitimate complaint about their treatment. This does not seem to be a case where they are seeking special privileges or preferential treatment.

They say they get inferior work assignments, poor job training, unfair disciplinary treatment and harassment while both on duty and off.

The shocking sabotage, the attacks on officers, the riots and the killings, of course, cannot be condoned. But black members of the navy are entitled to the same treatment and the same opportunities as whites. It is appalling and tragic that they're not getting it.

As Secretary of the Defense, John Connally might try just as hard as Admiral Zumwalt to see that the blacks get the treatment to which they're entitled in the navy. But it would be difficult to convince the blacks of that fact.

Comment On NOW Remarks

Editor, Newton Graphic
I would like to take exception to the remarks made by N.O.W. in a letter to the Graphic on November 16, 1972.

The results of the abortion referendum cannot be considered to reflect the opinion of a majority of Massachusetts voters. The 21 communities or legislative districts were carefully chosen by pro-abortion groups. The 13th district in Newton is presently represented by a Senator and Representative known to be in favor of relaxed abortion laws.

The people of the 13th district do not speak for the entire city of Newton. The people of the 12th district were denied the opportunity to express their opinion. A private poll conducted in the 12th district shows a majority of the people opposed to abortion on demand.

It is regrettable to me, as a resident of Newton, to have Newton upheld as a proponent of abortion when the entire city was not allowed to vote on the question. Newton has a reputation as a city of humanitarian people. Its services to the poor and aged have always been considered outstanding. Newton's program for special education for the retarded children is one of the finest in the Commonwealth. In spite of its fine record Newton is now being advertised throughout the Commonwealth as a city that turned its back on the most helpless and defenseless, the unborn.

On Rental Policy

(Note: A copy of this letter was sent to each alderman in time for the Nov. 20 meeting of the board.)

Editor, Newton Graphic:

The Newton Committee for Fair Housing and Equal Rights wishes to support the recent decision of the Land Use Committee to deny the "swap" proposal of the Kingston Realty Trust.

We strongly feel that the proposal is not the way to respond to the policy adopted by the aldermen to designate 10 per cent of all new housing to be built in Newton leased to the Newton Housing Authority for rental to low-income tenants. And certainly the idea of the Kingston Realty Trust does nothing to help ease the pressure for some low-income housing in the City of Newton. We understand from conversation with Mr. Quinn of the Housing Authority that there were 115 families and about 165 elderly persons on the waiting list as of September 30.

Since the 10 per cent allowance for leasing to low-income families and elderly persons is a policy, we recommend that it be put into the status of a city ordinance as soon as possible.

We would also suggest that the Land Use Committee follow recommendations by the MHFA with respect to housing within Newton, and we urge all the aldermen to insist on seeing the figures about the waiting list of the Newton Housing Authority on the quarterly basis as agreed.

We support the work that the Land Use Committee has been doing and hope that more of the members of that committee, as well as a significant margin of the total Board of Aldermen will recognize the necessity to meaningfully respond to the housing problem for persons on low income within Newton.

Graduate Realtors Banquet Was Held At Newton Hotel

The Graduate Realtors Institute (GRI) Banquet of the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Boards was held Tuesday (Nov. 28) at the Marriott Motor Hotel, Newton. Eighty-nine graduates of the Realtors Institute of Massachusetts, which is sponsored by the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Boards (MAREB), were awarded GRI certificates and pins by MAREB president Joseph R.A. Pandisio, Sr., Fitchburg, and executive vice president Milton H. Shaw, Framingham.

The coveted GRI designation is awarded to real estate brokers and salesmen who have successfully completed 90 hours of study and three major examinations required by the National Association of Real Estate Boards as part of the curriculum of the Realtors Institute.

Realtor Peter S. Meltzer, Springfield, was the principal speaker at the GRI Banquet and realtor John M. Peckham, III, Brookline, was the Master of Ceremonies. Attendance included more than 175 graduates and guests.

Luncheon was served by Mrs. George W. McCreery, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Douglass B. Francis, Mrs. Charles F. Weeden, Mrs. Philip Ver Planck, Mrs. Richard S. Willis and Mrs. F. Gilbert McNamara. Pourers were Mrs. Worthing L. West and Mrs. Willis E. Williams. The Business Meeting was chaired by president, Mrs. Lloyd D.H. Anderson.

Program chairman, Mrs. Sidney L. Eaton, provided them with a speaker: Mrs. Virginia A. Tashjian, head librarian of the Newton Public Library.

Harken Speaks At Newt. Hosp.

Dwight E. Harkin, M.D., clinical professor of surgery emeritus at Harvard Medical School, will speak on the topic "The Surgeon Looks at Heart Failure" at the sixth session of the 1972 Fried Lecture Series at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, Monday, Dec. 4.

The lecture is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in Usen Auditorium and is open to medical personnel in the Newton-Wellesley-Weston area.

Surgeon and chief of thoracic surgery at Mount Auburn Hospital, Dr. Harken also acts as surgeon emeritus at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and a consultant in thoracic surgery at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boston.

The Newton College Glee Club will present its annual Christmas Concert on Dec. 10 at 8 p.m. in the College Chapel on the Centre St., Newton campus. The vent is open to the public and free of charge.

The Newton College students will be joined in the concert by the Fordham University Glee Club under the direction of Dr. James Kurtz. The combined groups will be augmented by orchestral accompaniment and brass choirs.

Emmett Windham, assistant professor of music and glee club director at Newton College, will conduct. Titled "A Concert of Christmas Polyphony" the concert will include "Cantata 191 Gloria in Excelsis Deo" by Bach, "Jubilate Deo" by Gabrieli, "Four Psalms" by Schutz and "Christmas Cantata" by Pinkham.

Hearing-

plagued by numerous customer complaints of no dial tones, false busy signals, and disconnected numbers, the mayor's proposal could amount to a total rebate of $1 million or more.

Mayor Mann is basing his proposal on the fact that other public utilities, gas and electric companies, provide rate reductions when their services become inadequate. In addition, New York State set a pattern recently when it adopted a plan similar to the one the mayor has proposed. A total of 16,000 residents in that state receive telephone company rebates in July for bad service.

DPU Commissioner Tucker chaired the hearing again on Tuesday, when the phone company placed two of its own managers on the witness stand to explain, often in very technical language, its side of the story. At the initial public session Nov. 16, the DPU heard lengthy complaints from Newton residents who told personal anecdotes of poor telephone service.

The two concluding sessions of the hearing, however, drew very few citizens. Three were on hand Monday when the hearing resumed, but lost interest as the discussion moved into highly technical testimony.

On Monday of this week, the second day of the hearing, the DPU heard testimony from an Arthur D. Little Co. spokesman, Francis R. Collins, who stated that telephone service in Newton did not measure up to the level of adequacy set by the local firm's parent company, American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Arthur D. Little had been commissioned by the DPU to undertake a study of the system. The research firm brought out a thick document laden with extensive charts and diagrams, which Collins referred to in testifying to the poor service, under questioning by Kowal.

Kowal had been pressing for a rate reduction, using the Little Co.'s report as a basis for his moves.

Paul Galvani, attorney for the Telephony Company, was unable to cross-examine Collins Monday, but got his chance Tuesday. Galvani also produced two witnesses of his own, both of whom tended to refute some of Collins' claims.

Under questioning by Galvani, Collins admitted to never having been to the Newton Central Office of the New England Telephone Company, a switching facility servicing both Newton and Watertown, which provided much of the technical data in the Little report.

Galvani stressed Tuesday that "there will inevitably be some delays." Collins elaborated on that fact, stating that the delay factor was inherently built into the system, and compared it to 5 p.m. traffic jams.

Collins said that the telephone company strives to insure a dial tone within three seconds after a person picks up the receiver; any amount of time beyond that period, even 3.1 seconds, signifies a failure to live up to ATT standards.

Galvani established that inadequate switching systems lead to so-called "weak spots" throughout New England. In March of this year, the total number of weak spots in Massachusetts was 60, with only one of those in Newton, according to the testimony.

Collins said that the Little Co. report "indicates a problem with the switching facility." A new electronic switching system is expected to be installed in Watertown in 1974, which would ease the presently overloaded system.

Collins said that the capacity of the facility could be increased by adding more operating markers, the "brains" of the switching system, which analyzes digits dialed by individual customers. Later, Galvani questioned two telephone company employees on the witness stand.

The first of these, Peter L. Haynes, Switching System Manager for the North Division (Massachusetts) of the firm, claimed that the demand was exceeding the switching system's capacity in this area. He said that in the first ten months of this year 350 trunk lines were installed here, a "significant" addition.

Haynes said that reports showed that the calling rate of Massachusetts customers increased by one-third during the "busy hours" from 1968 to 1972. He also said that even after extra originating markers were added this year and last year, dial tone delays were still noted.

are flocking to the suburbs in search of easy targets for drug holdups. He said his department has arrested or sent out warrants on at least six men.

Police met with city druggists last week to discuss the current rash of heists, and met again Monday to continue talks.

Haynes said that the present core system of the Newton Central Office was installed in the early 1940's, and that the projected Electronic Switching System is much easier and cheaper to maintain.

The Telephone Company also defended its position with respect to handling customer complaints. Homer G. Wilcox, until recently the North Division (which includes Newton) Plant Manager for the firm, testified that 91 per cent of all trouble complained of by subscribers is alleviated without the necessity of the complainants having to call back a second time.

Wilcox also said that the Company is "continually striving" to maintain service at a level commensurate with ATT standards.

The Newton hearing was one of a series of hearings held throughout the state by the Department of Public Utilities. The proceedings now move into Boston.

A new "check in" system has been initiated, Quinn said, in which uniformed officers and plainclothes detectives make periodic visits to Newton drug stores that have been major targets in the rash of robberies.

Officers also were assigned to carry shotguns in "stakeouts" of Newton drugstores after some of the robbers started carrying weapons.

Druggists, he said, are considering using "more sophisticated" alarm systems and are following the suggestion made last week to remove all window displays and make it easier for patrolmen and citizens to see into the drugstores at all times.

Methods of pooling drug supplies in well-guarded, centralized locations are also being considered, Quinn said.

Conti-Nicolazzo Repeat Vows In Sunday Ceremony

Sunday at 3 p.m. Miss Anna Conti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aldo Conti, Needham, became the bride of Giovanni Nicolazzo, Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicola Nicolazzo of Platania Calabria, Italy.

The Rev. Joseph F. McCarthy performed the double ring ceremony at St. Joseph's Church. A reception followed at Amaru's restaurant in Dedham. The couple left for a wedding trip to Italy.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a silk gown with a long chapel train trimmed with satin and daisies. Her veil of illusion also was edged with daisies. She carried a bouquet of orchids and snapdragons.

Miss Ulman Conti of Needham was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Maria Caruso and Joanna Caruso of Waltham, and Patty Nicolazzo of Newton. Miss Maria Nicolazzo of Newton was flower girl.

Jerry Nicolazzo of Newton, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were George Caruso of Waltham, Franco Mercuri of Newton and Domenico Conti of Needham. Pat Nicolazzo of Newton was ring bearer.

The bride, a graduate of Italian University, is an employee of Carter's in Needham. Her husband, an agricultural school graduate, is self employed. They will reside in Newton.

MRS. FRANK STUART CLARK

Miss Carol Ann O'Brien Is Bride of Frank Clark

Baskets of white mums with yellow tea roses decorated the altar at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, recently when Miss Carol Ann O'Brien became the bride of Frank Stuart Clark. The Rev. John Quirk officiated and a reception followed the ceremony at Amaru's restaurant in Dedham.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. O'Brien, Grant street, West Newton, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin empire gown designed with a venise lace applique bodice, cuff of juliet sleeves, A-line skirt and chapel train with a ribbon lace border. Her shoulder bouffant veil was attached to a venise lace bonnet in floral design with seed pearls and crystals. She carried a bouquet of white and orange delight roses with stephanotis.

Mrs. John Capeless of Seabrook, N.H. was her sister's matron of honor. Jr. bridesmaid was Miss Mary Kietly of West Newton. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Gregory Hay of Waltham, Mrs. James Barberio of Newtonville, and sister of the groom, Miss Sandra Clark of Stoughton. They wore emerald green velvet gowns trimmed in ivory venise lace and carried bouquets of orange delight and wood roses and oragne, gold and bronze poms. Miss Donna Noonan of Avon was guest book attendant.

Thomas Roxburgh, Jr. of North Easton was the groom's best man. Ushers were William Clark and Edward Perry Cox of Stoughton, and John E. Capeless of Seabrook, N.H., brother-in-law of the bride.

The bride was graduated from Newton High School and Newton Jr. College. She is employed at Computer Design Corp., Wellesley. The groom attended Stoughton High School, Bridgeton Academy in Maine, and is currently enrolled at Stonehill College in Easton.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Clark reside in Randolph.

New President Will Meet Hadassah Associates

Mrs. Sumner Feldberg, chairman of Hadassah associates for the Boston Chapter, will hostess a special meeting at her home in Chestnut Hill Monday, Dec. 4 at 8 p.m. Mrs. Benjamin Fields of Chestnut Hill will co-chair the event.

The guest of honor will be the newly elected national president of Hadassah, Mrs. Max N. Matzkin of Waterbury, Conn. She will speak on the progress and programs at the Hadassah Medical Center in Jerusalem and will discuss the equipment and services implemented at the hospital, which is supported by Hadassah.

Mrs. Matzkin also will deliver the major address at the donor luncheon of the Boston chapter of Hadassah on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 4 and 5, at the Statler Hilton, Boston. Proceeds will benefit the Hadassah medical organization.

Among the guests at the two day gala will be supervisors of hostesses from Newton, which include the Messrs. Sidney Yoffee, Sol Finkelstein and David Brisk. Mrs. Robert Naigles is donor luncheon chairman.

Performing artists at the afternoon program will be the Winged Victory Singers.

The Consul General of Israel, Shimon Inbal, and his wife will attend the luncheon and extend greetings on the occasion of the 25th anniversary celebration of the State of Israel.

SAFE TOYS -- best gifts of all

Safer toys will be the best gift of all this Christmas for millions of children in the United States. Thanks to the Child Protection & Safety Act, the Food and Drug Administration is now empowered to ban from interstate distribution any toy or component that may prove hazardous to children.

As a result, toys are banned that expose children to the dangers of lacerations, puncture wounds or the ingestion of small parts enclosed in the toys.

Proposed Act
A further step was taken recently when the FDA, in cooperation with the Toy Manufacturers of America, issued proposed Toy Safety Act regulations calling for mechanical test procedures to help toy makers select only the safest materials.

For example, these tests require that toys for children up to 1½ years old must withstand 10 drops of 4½ feet onto a vinyl-covered concrete surface. Toys for children up to 8 must survive four drops from a height of three feet. Several other tests proposed by FDA are equally rugged.

Better toys

What does all this mean to parent and child? Simply this: Toys purchased this Christmas will be safer, stronger and longer-lasting. Toy manufacturers are taking an especially close look at the materials they choose and the way these materials are used.

Many of the nation's leading toy makers, for example, have selected Tenite cellulose plastics supplied by Eastman Chemical Products, Inc. to produce toys offering excellent impact strength and clarity.

Tough toys
Among the toughest thermoplastics available, the cellulose plastics include acetate, butyrate and propionate. Tenite cellulose plastics have been used in the manufacture of toys for over 40 years and this year over 8 million pounds of cellulose will go into the production of toys for virtually every age group of children.

Tops, bouncing balls and stacking toys molded from cellulose will entertain the pre-school set for hours.

For the grade school crowd there are cellulose dolls, miniature racing cars, and space helmets.

NEWTON ARTIST, Maude Lederman, center, and friends discuss one of her paintings at the Brockton Art Center's recent showing of her work. Mrs. Lederman is a true primitive painter who has been called "another Grandma." She began painting only seven years ago.

Newton Artist, Called 'Another Grandma,' Began To Paint Only Seven Years Ago

Mrs. Maude Lederman is a prominent Newton artist, mother of two daughters and a grandmother of five who began to paint only seven years ago. Nineteen of her paintings have been on display this month at the Brockton Art Center. In December her work will be exhibited as part of a continuing Arts Festival at the Village Congregational church in Wellesley.

Mrs. Lederman, who always has been interested in art, but had no formal training, began to experiment with water colors seven years ago. Her husband, the late Dr. Bernard Lederman was most enthusiastic about her work and urged her to show it to the curator of the then Nexus Gallery. Mrs. Lederman recalls modestly she thought her husband was simply biased by the work being hers, but the next thing she knew, her paintings went to her first exhibit at the Nexus Gallery on Charles street. From there her work has gone to numerous exhibits, including the Circle Theatre in Chestnut Hill, Brandeis University, Newton Centre Savings Bank and the Statler Hotel in Boston.

The distinctive characteristic of Mrs. Lederman's painting is her own personal style. Having no formal training, she paints in a primitive manner, using flat shapes, bright colors and bold backgrounds. Also distinctive are her happy themes reflected by children playing, people in parks, and bright scenery.

Marilyn Friedman Hoffman, curator of the Brockton Museum, writes "We can admire her work for the same reasons that twentieth-century masters like Picasso admired the work of the primitive artist Henry Rousseau, painter of jungle scenes, and for the same reasons that we admire Grandma Moses and the eighteenth century American masters. That is, we can enjoy Mrs. Lederman's work because it reflects a natural talent, unspoiled by knowledge of academic technique."

Mrs. Lederman recently enrolled in a painting course, but was urged to maintain her own style. She paints in many media, including oils, water colors, India pen and acrylics. In addition to painting, she enjoys poetry and has written several poems.

When asked how she responded to being called "Another Grandma" in comparison to Grandma Moses, she replied, "I don't know why they said that. I simply paint in my own style."

Her daughters, Mrs. Robert Gordon and Mrs. Everett Grossman, also reside in Newton.

MRS. JAMES DOUGLAS MCCHESEY

Miss Elitov Marries Mr. McChesney

Miss Paula Jean Elitov, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Elitov of Crafts street, West Newton, recently was married to James Douglas McChesney.

The bride was graduated from the University of Rochester where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Her husband, a graduate of the University of Rochester, attends the University of Rochester Medical School.

The show, which is an exhibition of sculptors works by the New England Sculptors Association at the Academy, will have Mrs. Egelson exhibiting a bronze titled "The Commuters" and Mrs. Paizer exhibiting a carving in popular titled "Thrust."

Paula Marcus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Marcus, 62 Waban ave., Waban, is a member of the Choir of Allegheny College in Meadville, Pennsylvania, which will soon be on its way to a pre-Christmas tour of Europe.

The group, presenting Christmas music from a wide variety of styles, epochs and moods, will leave on Dec. 3 from John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Maryagnes Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Young, Marlboro st. Newton, will sing with the College of New Rochelle Glee Club in a joint Christmas Concert with the College of Holy Cross Glee Club on Saturday, Dec. 2 at 8:30 p.m.

The program, which will feature Bach's "Mass in B Minor" will be held in the Sports Building on the College campus, Westchester, New York.

Aurelia Janice Fuchs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Fuchs, 140 Oliver rd., Newton, Mass., will receive her Masters of Education from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Fuchs, who received her B.S. in Elementary Education from the American International College in 1971 will graduate from U. Mass. with a A.I.C. — Alpha Chi-National award and was also on the dean's list.

She was a member of the Alpha Upsilon Sorority and the Alpha Chi-National honor society. She was a graduate from Newton South High School in 1967.

Robert L. Petkun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Petkun, 135 Kirkstall Rd., Newton has been awarded first-year honors at the Harvard Business School. He expects to receive the Master in Business Administration degree in June. He received the B.S. and M.S. degrees from M.I.T. in 1969 and worked for the Rand Corporation before entering Harvard Business School.

Wolfson Is Elected To Sailing Board

Joseph A. Wolfson, Newton Highlands, has been elected to the board of directors of the Community Boating in Boston.

The election came recently at the annual meeting of the club's corporation, which also voted in a president, three officers and four other directors.

Community Boating is a non-profit sailing club that has an annual membership of close to 4,000. Yearly meetings are attended by more than 100 members, who guide club activities and set policy for its seven-month sailing season.

Two Boutiques In Area Homes

The Charles River Valley Simmons Club is opening to the public two holiday boutiques in Needham and Newton to support scholarships for local Simmons College students.

A coffee time boutique in Needham on Friday, Dec. 1 at 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Newell Squires, 277 Harris Ave. will feature a silent auction of antiques along with the sale of member-made ceramics, enameled jewelry and stained glass.

On Saturday, Dec. 9, at 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. there will be an open house punch party at the home of Mrs. F. Roy Carlson, Mt. Ida Jr. College campus, Newton Centre. The sale of boutique gifts - candles (hand-made and colonial), Christmas decorations, and gourmet foods (Vermont cheese, Swedish relish, preserves, Christmas cookies and gingerbread men) will be assisted at the Newton home by Mrs. Thomas Hynes, West Newton and Mrs. B.F. Ottaway and Mrs. Bernard Torri, Wellesley.

Newton Man Is Notary Public

Jacob B. Gershman, 71 Cynthia Rd., Newton has been appointed a Notary Public.

Confirmation of the appointee was made at the State House at a meeting of the Executive Council following submission by the Governor. The term of the Newton Notary Public will expire in seven years.

DON'T KNOCK COMPROMISE

Looking for a new house? Then probably what you desire and the going price for such a dream house are mutually exclusive. There is no perfect house and very few families can afford everything they want. This means compromise.

You might have to trade off certain desirable features to get a house with other more important ones. For example, you may find yourself giving up a short commuting distance to get a house with more land or vice versa. You could give up a family room, say, for a second bath - then add the family room you really want later on when you can better afford it.

Make a list of your top priorities such as location, schools, number of bedrooms. This will do double duty. It will steer you to the house that comes closest to what you want now and one that will also satisfy your probable future needs.

If you have any questions or desire personal assistance in any area of real estate, feel free to phone or drop into our office: LYN MEDOFF ASSOCIATES, REALTORS, 1682A Beacon St., Brookline. Phone: 734-8671. We're here to help!

GBYSO To Present Special Holiday Program Dec. 13

The Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Eisenberg, will present a special holiday program on WNBC-TV, Channel 7 on December 13 at 8 p.m.

The Orchestra will present a work by American composer, Samuel Barber, originally commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Die Natali ("Christmastide") is a sequence of chorale preludes, based on familiar Christmas carols.

Another feature on the program will be the appearance of several solo dancers of the Boston Ballet who will perform some of the dances from the Nutcracker Ballet with the Orchestra.

Dennis Alves, one of the talented young artists of the Orchestra, will be featured as soloist in the Haydn Trumpet Concerto.

In addition to the above, the program will include works by Berlioz, Brodin, and Ravel. Members by Towns:

NEEDHAM
Mark Chen, Viola; Robert Hardt, Percussion; Sharon Henze, Horn; Michael Prolman, Violin.

Jimmy Dorsey's Band to Play at Police Ball Dec. 9

The Boston Police Relief Assn. will hold its annual ball at the Hynes Civic Auditorium on Saturday, Dec. 9.

As a result of the success of the 1971 annual ball, when it became obvious that the public enjoys dancing to the big name bands, the whole format of the annual ball has been changed and the emphasis this year is being placed on an evening of dancing pleasure.

The Jimmy Dorsey Band, conducted by Lee Castle, "World's Greatest Trumpet Player," will provide the music, both old and new, to satisfy everyone, plus an all star show, featuring Al Martino, who will be appearing nightly at the Monticello, Framingham.

The evenings festivities will begin at 7:30 when Police Commissioner Robert DiGrazia and John O'Neil, president of the Boston Police Relief Association will lead the invited guests into the hall. The presentation of the guests will be immediately followed by the awarding of the Walter Scott Medal for Valor, the highest award of the City of Boston. The Department Medal of Honor and the Thomas F. Sullivan Award to those Police Officers who distinguished themselves in the line of duty during the year of 1972.

President O'Neil is continuing the practice instituted several years ago of inviting all members of the Golden Age Clubs of the City to be his guests at the annual ball. They can come in groups or in couples, just by obtaining tickets, by mail from the Boston Police Relief Association, 1249 Hyde Park ave., Hyde Park, 02136.

The proceeds from the annual ball are used to assist the families of deceased members and members of the Association when sick and disabled. There are presently 977 retired members of the Association and 2239 active members, totaling 3216 members.

Tickets may be obtained by contacting Anthony Settino, treasurer of the Association, at the above address or at any Police Station.

Members of the board of directors of the Boston Police Relief Association making up the various committees for the annual ball are: Robert Dumas and Dominic Pagliarulo of District 1; Kirk Ampolos and Robert Ready of District 2; William Bostic of District 3; William Powers and Charles Webb of District 4; John Law of District 6; Roy Moser of District 7; Edward Lavigne of the Harbor Police; Henry Curtin of District 11; Joseph Griffin of District 13; Richard Mason of District 14; James Troy of District 15; Fred Greeley of the Traffic Division and Robert Lawler and Emmett Mahoney of Headquarters.

MRS. EMILY LAMONT, editor of a new cookbook, "Party Potpourri," demonstrates a recipe for Peruvian chicken. The book will be sold by the Newton Mental Health association to benefit the Newton Guidance Clinic. Observing are cookbook committee members, Irene Egan, Dorothy Gray and Ann Reynolds. Missing from the picture is the chairman, Marjorie Taylor.

Northeastern Players Present Greek Tragedy

"The Trojan Women," a Greek tragedy by Euripides about the ravages of war, will be staged by the Northeastern University Silver Masque Society at Northeastern's Alumni Auditorium, Dec. 1-2 at 8:30 p.m.

Directing this translation by Moses Hadas and John McLean is Mort S. Kaplan. Assisting him will be three senior drama majors, Judy Jacksina, Linda Firestone and John Carron.

"The aftermath of the war Euripides wrote about in 416 B.C. is still relevant and in many ways can be compared to the situation in Viet Nam today," commented Mr. Kaplan.

Anthony Buglio, costume designer for "The Trojan Women," has created a wardrobe that combines several periods of fashion to give a feeling of agelessness to the theme of the play. Set designer is Linda Firestone and lighting director is Howard Schechter.

Local members of the cast include: Judy Jacksina and George Scoff of West Roxbury and Jerry Roy of Jamaica Plain.

For reservations, call the Northeastern University Drama Department or the University Box Office at 437-2247 between 11 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Newton Mental Health Group To Sell Cookbook

Several months ago 1100 letters were sent to friends of the Newton Mental Health association asking for recipes to be used in compiling a cookbook. The result was "Party Potpourri," a cookbook designed to help hostesses entertain with imagination, flair and delicious food.

The book will be presented at a gala cocktail party, Dec. 3 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the home of William Carmen. The party will benefit the Newton Guidance clinic and guests will be offered a sampling of hors d'oeuvres, canapés prepared from recipes in the book. The public is invited to attend the benefit and information may be obtained by calling 969-4925.

"Party Potpourri" was edited by Emily Lamont, wife of a Newton physician, who first became interested in gourmet food while living in Germany. She studied cooking with a French woman and has given cooking lessons to a group of medical wives in Los Angeles, Calif. Mrs. Lamont's husband, Tom, assisted her by listing suggested wines for each menu in the book.

Included in "Party Potpourri" are menus and recipes for brunches, luncheons, suppers, buffets, cocktails and dinner parties. There is a sprinkling of ethnic dishes from the various family backgrounds of Newton residents. A section also is included on poems and philosophy.

Task Force For Children Out of School

The Task Force on Children Out of School is a privately funded agency which believes that quality education is a right, not a privilege, of every child. On this basis it acts as an advocacy body for children with school-related problems.

Children with special needs (emotionally disturbed, mentally handicapped, physically handicapped, learning disabilities, language barriers, pregnant girls, and behavioral problems) are often placed in an inappropriate program or are excluded from school altogether.

The state of Massachusetts has a legal obligation to provide a quality education for every person in the Commonwealth between six and twenty-one. This obligation is frequently ignored resulting in thousands of children being excluded from the education which is rightfully theirs.

The Task Force on Children Out of School has worked for over three years to see that every school-age person in the Commonwealth recognizes and receives his right to an education. There is a full time staff members handling individual cases. If you, your child, or someone you know is excluded from school, contact Denise McWilliams at the Task Force of Children Out of School, 889 Harrison Avenue, Boston, 445-5071.

Caution—tree lights need early check

It's Christmas Eve. The children are snuggled in their beds. The tree is secure in its stand.

And it's time to trim the tree.

But—Christmas Eve is on a Sunday this year, and tree trimmers would be wise to check the lights far in advance.

Sunday night will find most stores closed up tight, a proposition that could chill the heart of a tree trimmer trying to find Christmas bulbs to replace those that are not working.

An early check on the lights means time in which to get replacement bulbs, and a supply of extras. There's always next year.

'Rec' Room In Garage Low Budget

Converting a garage to a recreation room can be more palatable to the budget-conscious family than building an add-on room from scratch.

A national survey estimates it costs between $18 and $30 per square foot to add a room at ground level, not including interior decorating. This totals $3,240 to $5,400 in building costs alone for a 12x15-foot family room.

With a garage, the renovation can be whittled to a fraction of

Thursday, November 30, 1972

that cost, especially if the home owner does most of his own work.

Careful Planning Needed
Careful planning is a "must" for the family wanting to make the conversion. Family members will be concerned primarily with the wise use of space for maximum family enjoyment. They can obtain help from their building supply dealer, builder or professional designer on such matters as handling of ceiling, floor, insulation, ventilation, heating, lighting, furnishings and decor.

For an unusual effect, a wall of Masonite brand Bayside lap siding could be painted a bright red. This siding has the appearance of cedar shakes, but it comes in 16-foot lengths of hardboard, each 12" wide, which can be applied quickly.

Have a Textured Wall
This striking product is available unprimed for painting or staining, or prestained. It may be purchased at building and lumber supply yards.

Another Masonite brand hardboard siding, popular Stuccato in the motif of stucco with a skip-trowel texture, could be installed on other walls for a pleasing contrast in color, texture and design. This siding comes prefinished in a soft white.

Other attractive exterior hardboards may be selected. For further information, write Masonite Home Service Bureau, Box B, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

Sermon

Rev. Newell Curtis' sermon was entitled "Her Finest Hour."

The seeds which have been down by so many for so long do not suddenly, with the twinkling of an eye, vanish or evaporate. This is impossible, for to use the analogy of Paul, "what is sown is perishable — what is raised is imperishable." (1 Corinthians 15:42)

"We are now at that point in our time — what has been sown as a formal, gathered community of faithful followers, is now to enter into an imperishable, eternal existence. And thus it becomes, though we grieve at this moment, her finest hour," he said.

The Lord's Supper began with the congregation singing the spiritual "Let Us Break Bread Together on Our Knees." Rev. Nathaniel Guptill and Rev. Frank Weiskel, 14th and 15th ministers of the church, conducted the Service of Communion and 12 deacons and former deacons served the bread and wine.

The Commission and Blessing included "Our Personal Commission" read by the congregation and led by Mr. Anthony.

"Let us now go forth into the world in peace; being of good courage; holding fast to that which is good; rendering to no one evil for evil; strengthening the faint-hearted; supporting the weak; helping the afflicted; honoring all persons; loving and serving the Lord, and rejoicing in the power of the Holy Spirit."

Recessional

The Recessional Hymn was "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past." Following the blessing by Rev. Curtis the audience remained standing through the playing of "The Hallelujah Chorus" on the organ.

After the service of praise and rejoicing, the congregation left the church saddened but satisfied that its assets had been creatively and wisely spent in "The First Church Legacy" and that its doors would remain open.

A reception was held in the Parish Hall where, in the lighted Fischer Cabinets, was a display of memorabilia which included the priceless 17th century pewter and early 18th century tankards and communion cups which have been given to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Guests

Because the Invitations Committee had searched the files and traced the addresses of former members, children now grown and moved elsewhere, there was a spirit of reunion over the punch and cookies. People came from not only all parts of Massachusetts but from all the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kansas and California.

Informally greeting friends in the Boynton Room near the portrait of the Rev. Russell Boynton, the 13th pastor, were the two former ministers who participated in the service, the Revs. Guptill and Weiskel and their wives. Mrs. Russell Boynton, was there with her two daughters, Martha Anne Pawle, and Mary Peg MacPherson and their families.

The church has voted to give her husband's portrait to Mrs. Boynton. Dr. and Mrs. David M. Stowe from Tenafly, New Jersey, former members, also received friends. Dr. Stowe is Executive Vice-President of the United Church Board for World Ministries.

Other church staff members back for the occasion were Ralph MacLean, organist for 54 years; Marjorie Dunham from Northampton, an earlier church secretary; Josephine Laveley and Bettie F. Dietz, former directors of Religious Education; former Student Minister Donald Ketchum from Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Leslie Harwood, Jr. of Newton Centre were present. They are the oldest in membership, having joined the church in 1899.

Elizabeth Paul Bergson, member, whose family settled their farm (now Paul Street) in 1822 was also present, as was another whose roots were deep, Helen Ward Foote from New Hampshire; lineal descendant of John Ward, first Deacon of the Church 1664-1708, and who gave the name to Ward Street.

Other special guests were Mrs. Albert I. Gordon, widow of Rabbi Gordon of Temple Emanuel; Margaret Bradley, Arnold, daughter of the 11th minister, the Rev. Dwight J. Bradley, and wife of the Suffragan Bishop of Massachusetts, Rt. Rev. Morris Arnold; Hon. and Mrs. Howard Whitmore, former Mayor of Newton; Mrs. F. N. Boudreau, president of the Church Women United of Newton; Mrs. Yves Henry Bugler of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Rev. and Mrs. Curtis was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Newell H. Curtis, Sr. of Vermont; the Rev. and Mrs. Harper Welch of Portland, Maine who were influential in Mr. Curtis' joining the ministry; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sears of Plympton, Mass.; Mr. Curtis' first parish; Mrs. Charles Moors from his pastorate in Rochester, New Hampshire; the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Scott and Mrs. Elizabeth Logan, old friends; Dingli Sithole from Rhodesia, a student at Clark University in Worcester and a member of the Curtis family while attending Newton High School; and their daughter, Mary Curtis, home from Kansas State University.

Twenty churches and temples were represented. The list included Auburndale Congregational, Central-

How to manipulate your way to a free checking account. Even a cheaper loan.

Businessmen have been doing it for years.

"My company will give your bank more business if your bank will give my company a better deal."

Now you can make the same offer to South Shore National. But before we begin making deals, let's agree to do this, just to simplify things for both of us:

Let's take all your bank accounts, and put them together on one monthly statement.

Take that first step with us. And you're in a position to begin making deals.

So:

If you're willing to keep a monthly total of at least $400 between your checking account and up to as many as four savings accounts, we'll give you your checking account free of charge.

If that sounds complicated, let's look at a couple of examples:

Let's say you keep a low balance of, say, $180 in your checking account and $220 in a savings account. That comes to $400 and would earn you a free checking account.

Or suppose you keep a low balance of only $50 in your checking account, $200 in a joint savings account, and $75 in each of two trustee accounts. That also comes to $400 and earns you a free checking account.

The point is, you need at least $400 in checking and savings. How you spread it around is pretty much up to you.

In addition, as a Multistatement customer, we'll give you a 10% bonus refund of the paid finance charges on a new installment loan when it's satisfactorily repaid.*

The deals will save you money. The single-statement arrangement will save you confusion. Here's how:

Introducing Multistatement.

On one itemized list, Multistatement gives you the complete picture of all your banking transactions for the preceding month.

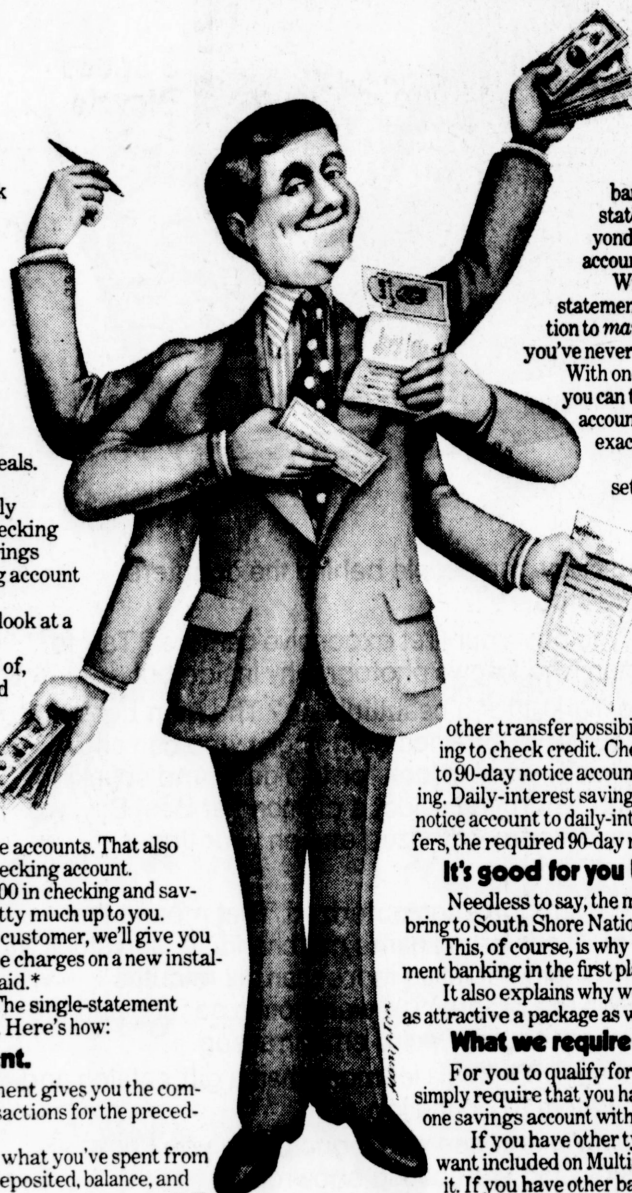

You'll get the whole rundown on what you've spent from your checking account, what you've deposited, balance, and so forth.

You'll see how much you've added or withdrawn from each savings account you have with us, how much interest has been paid to you, and how much you have in the account now.

If you have an installment loan with us, you'll see how much you've paid back, how much you still owe, and how many payments that amounts to.

If you have Check Credit (an account that allows you to make your own loans simply by writing out specially coded checks), you'll see how much of your cash reserve you've used up and how much you can still borrow.

*PRINCIPAL LOAN AMOUNT IS $100 OR MORE AND MUST BE OR BECOME A MULTISTATEMENT ACCOUNT WITHIN 90 DAYS FROM THE DATE OF THE LOAN.

Some fancy financial moves.

To say that Multistatement simplifies the management of your money is an oversimplification.

The fact is, by putting so many banking services together on one statement, Multistatement goes beyond any of the other single-statement accounts you've probably heard about. With South Shore National's Multistatement account, you're now in a position to maneuver your bank accounts in ways you've never been able to.

With one simple instruction to the bank, you can transfer money from virtually any account to any other. (And you can tell us exactly what day to transfer it.)

Or you can authorize the bank to set up an automatic monthly transfer of some fixed amount.

Money to cover a check.

An obvious advantage of the transfer feature is that, when your checking account is low, you can make a transfer from savings into checking.

But think of some of the other transfer possibilities: Checking to savings. Checking to check credit. Check credit to checking. Checking to 90-day notice account. 90-day notice account to checking. Daily-interest savings account to 90-day notice. 90-day notice account to daily-interest. (On 90-day account transfers, the required 90-day notice must be given.)

It's good for you because it's good for us.

Needless to say, the more of your banking business you bring to South Shore National Bank, the better for us.

This, of course, is why we're coming out with Multistatement banking in the first place.

It also explains why we're making Multistatement just as attractive a package as we possibly can.

What we require from you:

For you to qualify for a Multistatement account, we simply require that you have a checking account and at least one savings account with us.

If you have other types of accounts with us that you want included on Multistatement, we'll be delighted to do it. If you have other bank accounts with us that you don't want to appear on Multistatement (your own savings account on the side, for example), that's okay, too.

How to get Multistatement:

With 34 offices of South Shore National Bank all over the South Shore and west of Boston, chances are fairly good there's an office of South Shore National Bank that's not too far from you.

But even if there isn't, that shouldn't keep you from opening a Multistatement account if you want one.

After all, there's always the phone. (Our number in Wellesley is 235-3000.)

And there's also our handy coupon.

Multistatement
All your bank accounts on one statement, once a month.

Gentlemen:
Please send me an application for Multistatement.

Buy the sea, Buy the sea,

Not exactly, but buying a home right on the water in Massachusetts Bay is just about as good a deal. Weymouthport is a peninsula surrounded by water. It's like having a house at the Cape yet being only 15 minutes from work in Boston.

Weymouthport offers everything a condominium can. Appreciation, a chance to write off a lot of cost and a home you own. We also offer a little more for your money. We offer the sea, the salt air, the balmy days of Summer with cool nights and the fresh feeling of walking along the shore in the Spring when it's fun to be outside for a change.

The sea comes free when you buy your condominium. It has to be free. You can't put a price on the feeling of enjoyment you'll feel if you can call Weymouthport home.

Buy a home by the sea, by the beautiful sea. Our model apartments are open daily from 12 - 5, Sundays 11 - 5, and mornings by appointment.

Heart Fund Gives Doctor Another Year To Work

Jaime D. Cavalho, M.D., who has been carrying on an investigation into the mechanism of kidney failure at Newton-Wellesley Hospital under the direction of Lot B. Page, M.D., the Hospital's Chief of Medicine, has been awarded a second fellowship from the Massachusetts Heart Association to continue his work for another year.

Dr. Cavalho came to Newton-Wellesley in July, 1971 for a post doctoral research fellowship working with Dr. Page in the Hospital's hypertension laboratory.

Under another Heart Association grant, he will continue his investigative research in "The Role of Renin-Angiotensin in Acute Renal Failure."

Funding for the research project is provided from contributions to the annual Heart Fund drive, conducted by the Greater Boston Chapter of the Mass. Heart Association.

Cronkhite Guest Speaker At Newton-Wellesley Dinner

Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr., executive vice-president of the Children's Hospital Medical Center, Boston, will be the speaker at the Annual Dinner of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, Tuesday, December 5, at the Marriott Motor Hotel.

The dinner follows the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, scheduled for late afternoon, and is attended by trustees, medical staff and hospital friends.

After a career in active private practice as an internist, Dr. Cronkhite was appointed general director of the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston in 1962 and promoted in May 1971 to executive vice-president.

An innovator in many aspects of medical care delivery, in April of 1970 he was appointed by Governor Sargent as Chairman of an Ad Hoc Committee to establish primary care centers in Massachusetts.

These centers, known as Health, Incorporated, opened their first unit near Children's Hospital Medical Center in February, 1971, and several others are now in the active planning stage.

The centers are geared to the philosophy that everyone has a right to a reasonable opportunity for good health and that health care must be delivered to the community in ways that are acceptable to the recipient.

Dr. Cronkhite's professional and community activities include: president, Society of Medical Administrators; Member, Health Insurance Benefits Advisory Committee, Social Security Administration; consultant, National Center for Health Services Research and Development of HEW; chairman-elect of the Council of Teaching Hospitals of the Association of American Medical Colleges. He is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Harvard Community Health Plan, the New England Hospital, and he is the author of a number of articles on medical subjects as well as on hospital administration and health care delivery.

As a major general in the Army Reserve, Dr. Cronkhite is commanding general of the 94th Army Reserve Command and is the principal USAR Member of the Army Reserve Forces Policy Committee. He saw active service in World War II and holds the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Medal.

Dr. Cronkhite is also vice-president of Coutman and Company, Inc. (designers and builders of yachts). He is a trustee and chairman of the Trustees Policy Committee of Bowdoin College, from which he received his A.B., and is past president of the Bowdoin Alumni Council. He received his M.D. from Harvard Medical School and served his internship and residencies at Massachusetts General Hospital. In 1970, Dr. Cronkhite received an Honorary Doctor of Laws from Northeastern University.

A thousand bottles of wine on the wall...a

And thousands more in racks, barrels, baskets and bins. Martignetti's has the largest selection of wine in all New England. Wines for every taste, occasion and budget. Don Ryan, our expert wine buyer, travels the world to bring you the finest wines of France, Italy, Portugal, California...almost everywhere. And Don won't sell you a wine he hasn't tasted and approved of himself. At Martignetti's you'll find the prized Chateau Calon Segur '28 and dozens of other costly vintage wines. But you'll also discover a specially purchased group of Petite Chateaux...like the delightful Chateau Grandis. The rare Niersteiner Kranzberg Eiswein from Germany might be next to a pleasant little Liebfraumilch. Sake from Japan. Retina from Greece. Vina Bosconia Reserve from Spain. When it comes to wine, we speak the language.

It's Newton And Brockton In First Super Bowl

Tigers Big Underdog In Dream Game; Defeated By Brookline 20-6 On Holiday

By DAVID CUTLER

The dramatic conclusion to Newton High's football season can be paralleled to The Holy Scriptures, itself, the Book of Ecclesiastics, chapter 3, verse 4: "A time to weep, and a time to laugh; A time to mourn and a time to dance." For no sooner had the sorrow of losing to Brookline 20-6 settled, when it was learned that the Tigers had qualified to play Brockton in the first Schoolboy Super Bowl, anyway.

First, the bad news. The Tigers started the game in their customary fashion by taking the opening kickoff and marching for a touchdown. The 16 play drive, which consumed six minutes, and covered 59 yards was capped by Jerry Keliher's one yard run to the left side. But those were Newton's final points as the two point conversion failed, and the Tiger running attack never got rolling again.

The next 24 minutes of play was typical Newton-Brockton action: a lot of running, a lot of hitting, and not much scoring. Statistically there were 75 yards in penalties walked off, 130 rushing yards in contrast to zero passing yards, and neither team could strike to within the opposition's 20. It was tough defensive football with enough mistakes to make it interesting. During this time span, which included most of the first half and a good part of the third period, there were also three fumbles, a perfectly thrown touchdown pass dropped, and four occasions when the quarterback was dumped for a loss. Exciting, scoreless football.

The situation changed drastically midway through the third quarter. Brookline's running trio of Gary Travis, Bruce Gutierrez, and Beill Seibolt came to life. The offensive line was opening holes and in 13 plays Gutierrez crossed the goal line putting the Indians on the scoreboard. Travis ran for two and Brookline had an 8-6 lead in the early moments of the final period.

Newton had a golden opportunity to come back when Brookline QB Dick Simmons fumbled the ball on his own 26 and Tony D'Amico recovered it with six minutes left in the contest. A draw play to Peter Dion on fourth and four failed, and Newton had to surrender the ball. "We did not execute that play very well," stated coach Jim Ronayne. "That could have been the most crucial point of the ballgame."

The importance of that play became apparent 25 seconds later. Gary Travis, after running into his own man at the line of scrimmage, busted down the left sideline all the way to the Newton endzone, 67 yards away. The rushing conversion attempt failed, so Brookline led 14-6 with 4:26 left to play.

Knockout Punch
The knockout punch was delivered by Travis with time running out. The Indians had taken possession at the Newton 35, and on runs of 1, 24, 2, and 7 yards had their third touchdown in less than 12 minutes. Thus the game ended, Brookline 20, Newton 6.

For Brookline it was a great team effort, but certain individuals were particularly outstanding. "Seibolt, Travis, and Gutierrez were just great," said their coach Ed Schluntz. The Indians amassed 219 yards on the ground. Ronayne analyzed it this way: "Our defense didn't play that badly. Outside of the long run their running wasn't much better than ours." One thing Ronayne just couldn't understand was how Brookline stopped the potent Tiger ground attack. "I still wonder why we couldn't run against them. Their defense filled in some big holes. You've got to give them a lot of credit. They played a great game."

Nevertheless, Newton came in second in the Division I ratings. Victories over Greater Boston League powers Everett and Medford were certainly the difference, for in the present rating system teams are rewarded for 1) their won-lost percentage, and 2) the quality of their beaten opposition. Newton played the hardest schedule of any team in Division I. The Tigers played six teams which finished above .500. The ratings also support the notion that the Suburban League is the toughest league in Division I.

Brockton Favorite
Brockton coach Armond Colombo has objected to playing Newton in the post-season contest on the grounds that his team has already beaten Newton this year (34-7), that Newton only came in third place in its league (behind Brockton and Brookline, and that this should be a game of "champions."

"But," points out Ronayne, "out present team is not the same one which lost to Brockton. It's like a new season for us."

For Newton to stop the Goliath from Brockton on Super Bowl Saturday, they will need a lot more than a slingshot and pebbles. They will need the great effort which can be put forth by "champions."

BROCKTON NEXT — The Newton High School football team will play Brockton this Saturday in the first high school Super Bowl and the Tigers are a big underdog but have high hopes for an upset. In this photo taken in a loss to Brookline last week Mark Connolly gains ten yards. Tigers will be looking for big win on Boston University's Field this Saturday and will be seeking to make amends for early season loss to Brockton. (Robert Grossman Photo) half ended with the same score as the first period 19-0, but the Capello defense was clicking.

In the second half Capello took the opening kickoff in a time consuming march and moved down the field by virtue of Quarterback Dave Matthews passing and culminated the drive when Matthews hit end Chuck Pendergast with an 11 yard scoring flip. Matthews then hit Skip Fawson for the conversion points and the Matthews comeback was underway.

The Capello defense picking up momentum stopped another Packer offensive threat With time running out in the third period Matthews hit Bill Ellingwood with a 50 yard TD pass. Again Matthews hit Fawson with the conversion pass and it was now 19-14.

When the Pack got the ball back, they consumed time, but were unable to score. Capello took over on downs and riding a crest of momentum started to chip away on passes setting up a Matthews to Pendergast bomb which gave Capello a first and goal at the one. Matthews drilled one to Joe Capello for the go ahead points. On a razzle dazzle play Chuck Pendergast threw to Joe Capello for a 21-19 lead with four minutes left in the game.

Fight Back

With their backs to the wall, the Packers came to life. Paul Pasquarosa ran the kickoff to midfield. After successive completions to Rappy Pasquarosa, Kevin Marden and Pete Manson, the Pack found themselves with a second down and goal at the 19. Here Rappy turned in his last catch of the night on the three yard line. The Packers were looking for a pass interference call on the play, but received none. Here the two minute warning was given.

On third down, Nick Pasquarosa just missed connections with end Pete Manson. On fourth down, and virtually the last offensive play of the season for the Packers, Nick Pasquarosa hit center Dick Quigley in the end zone and the jubilant Packers regained the lead 25-21. Matthews and Capello tried desperately to score, but had a fourth down pass butted away by Rappy Pasquarosa who was replacing an injured Ed Cameron. The Packers ran the clock out for their third Championship in

Newton High Hockey Team Will Have A New Look This Year; Ronayne Head Coach

It is a year of change for Newton High's hockey program this winter. From the coaches to the players to the rink where they practice, NHS has a completely different look as they take to the ice for the 1972-73 season.

Interim coach Jim Ronayne will try to fill the large shoes left by 12-year mentor Francis "Sarge" Kinlin. Kinlin left following last season to spend more time with his family. He had compiled a 122-87-23 mark at Newton High. Ronayne has coached the Newton South squad and for the past few years has headed up Newton's jayvee team. Kenny Welch, the present J.V. coach and Elliot Feldman will be assisting Ronayne. "I'm doing this for one year," stated Ronayne flatly. "That was the agreement."

There has been an almost total turnover in personnel from last season. Gone are Co-captains and leading scorers Wally Cox and Jim Fay, not to mention eight other departing seniors. Cal Moffie, Steve Donovan, and Mark Connolly are the only returning regulars. Ted Tocci, Pete Berquist, and Dave Rossi, all of whom have seen varsity action, will also be coming back. There are a horde of skaters moving up from the jayvees to fill the open spots. "No one's job is secure," said Ronayne.

The new Fessenden rink will be Newton's main home practice surface this winter. Not only is it excellent ice, but it will provide the squad with a place to practice four times a week. This will be a marked improvement over the three practice-a-week schedule of a year ago. With scrimmages and then games added in, it will amount to five or six skating days a week.

For the first time NHS will put forth a sophomore hockey team. This will provide more students with the opportunity to play hockey, as it gives the coaches a chance to train more varsity prospects.

There will even be changes made in the game itself. New rules will make checking in the offensive zone legal, previously a one minute penalty. "I think it will make for less scoring," theorized Ronayne. "There will be close checking all over the ice."

Ronayne's hockey philosophy blends well with the new rules, "forecheck and backcheck." But the team won't just be a hitting one, it will be a passing one. "We'll play as a unit, like the Russians."

With all this change it remains to be seen if Newton High can regain its winning tradition, upset by last season's 5-12-1 record. Ronayne said with a smile, "It'll be interesting, very interesting."

Strong Defense

The defensive team which played so well throughout the year included ends Brian Keefe and Dan Donovan, pass rushers Dave Biggieri and Dan Brosnan, line backer Don Marden and Bill Corbett who was also the team punter, and a secondary of Ed Cameron, Paul Pasquarosa and Terry Morris. This unit put forth six straight shutouts throughout the year. Despite not winning the Championship last season, the Packers have never finished lower than first during regular season play.

Art Carroll's Packers Win Touch Title Again

The Art Carroll's Packers won their third championship in four seasons by defeating the Capello Brothers 25-21 in one of the most exciting finishes ever. By virtue of the victory, the Packers boosted their season mark to 9-0 and now own a 31-2-0 record since the leagues inception four years ago. The Capello Brothers had their best season ever making the finals for the first time and concluded the year with a 6-3 record. The game started out with

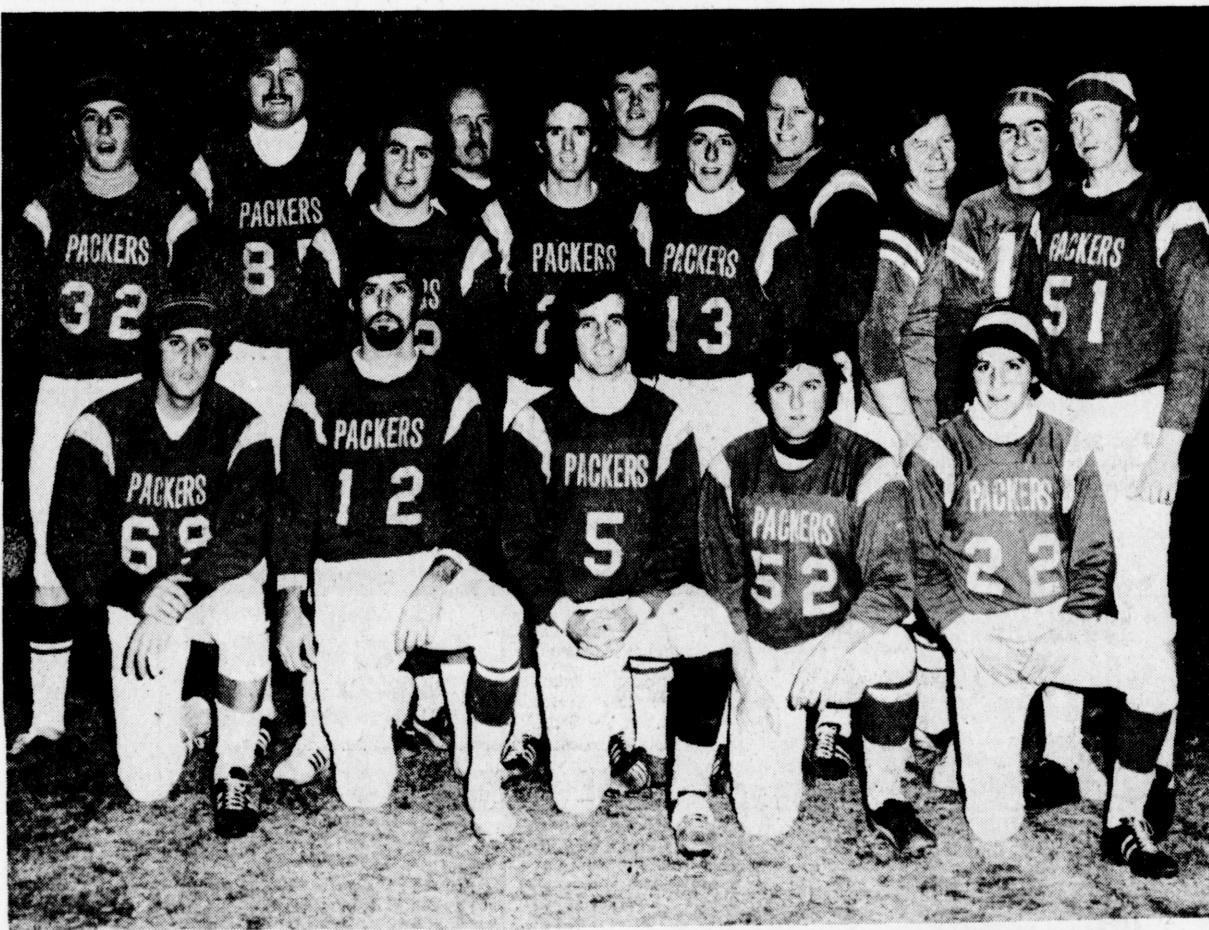

"Packer" momentum. In the first series of downs quarterback, Nick Pasquarosa, through an 18 yarder to brother Rappy Pasquarosa for a 6-0 lead. The conversion failed. Capello trying to get back fell victim to a pass interception by Paul Pasquarosa. The Pack then brought it in for their second TD as Pete Manson grabbed an 18 yard pass and the Pack led 12-0. The conversion points failed. Capello turned the ball over four times in the first half via the interception route. Terry Morris and Ed Cameron had one each and Paul Pasquarosa had two. After Capellos scoring drive was thwarted, the Pack hung up their third straight TD when Manson scored on a 15 yard pass from Nick Pasquarosa. This time the conversion pass was good as Rappy Pasquarosa hauled one in from brother Nick and a 19-0 first period advantage.

Things seemed to get worse for Capello as a fourth down snap sailed over the head of Quarterback Dave Matthews. Here the Capello defense started to click and repelled the Packers for the first time. The

South Eleven Loses High Scoring Holiday Battle To Acton-Boxboro 26-22

BY LEWIS H. FREEDMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

For a team whose whole offense is built around a quarterback who can't run, Newton South came surprisingly close to a fleet Acton-Boxboro squad, Thanksgiving Day, before falling, 26-22, at Acton.

Ned Moan, still hobbling around on an injured foot which refuses to heal and prevents him from running effectively, proved that he could still put his weight on to throw, however.

The 182-pound senior completed nine of 20 passes for 153 yards and two touchdowns, and got his feet together long enough to score South's other touchdown on a two-yard run. His heroics weren't enough, though, as the Colonials had an answer to every South move.

Score First

The Lions, seeking their third straight victory, got on the scoreboard first in the second period when Moan bulled his way in. Halfback Pete Nathanson carried over for the two-point conversion and it was 8-0.

The lead was short and sweet. The man AB coach Ed Leary characterized as "the player who makes our offense go," went. First, Darryl Schwartz went over from three yards out and then Schwartz took off from his own 12-yard line on an 88-yard TD romp. Snap, crackle, pop, 12-8 Acton-Boxboro at the half.

South won the third quarter, 6-0, making the score 14-12 when Moan fired a 17-yard pass to flanker Kevin Hoban. But that was the last lead the Lions enjoyed and as the period ended the enemy was perched on South's 15-yard line.

One play into the final stanza Joe Harrington found super Schwartz cavorting alone in the end zone and tossed a strike to him and it was all over for the Newtonites.

Acton's offense let someone else in on the fun for its final score. Halfback Mark Lucas put six points on the board with a two-yard run for an insurmountable 26-14 lead.

The Lions got a break in the final minutes when their whole defensive line poured through and pounced on Harrington as he tried to punt and forced a fumble. Dennis Anastasia, playing in place of injured Rich Taranto, recovered on the AB seven-yard line.

Pattison Scores

Moan flipped a short toss to end Paul Pattison for the touchdown and then rushed over for the conversion on a keeper. The Moan-to-Hoban combination was deadly, accounting for five completions on plays of 12, 18, 17, 23, and 26 yards.

South's next-best weapon was sophomore Nathanson who picked up 62 yards rushing.

Schwartz compiled 156 yards on the ground for Acton, to go along with his three touchdowns.

The young South squad closes out its season with a 3-6 mark, not overly impressive, but not horrendous, considering the preponderance of sophomores and juniors in the line-up, and the high injury rate this fall.

"I'm encouraged," said coach George Winkler. "We made mistakes, but you have to expect that. But we improved over the second half."

South wasn't the only Dual County League team to come up turkey-less this Thanksgiving. The Weston Wildcats needed a victory over arch-rival Wayland to tie Bedford for the league title. But the Warriors, who lost the championship for the first time in six years, were not prepared to go down docilely.

Peck Comes Back

Last year Bob Peck was the state's second leading scorer and rushed for over 1500 yards. This year he has been injured, and last Thursday was his first game at full strength.

With Peck lasting for 103 yards and one touchdown, fullback Charley Colbath bulled for 73 yards and three touchdowns and the defense holding Weston to minus 42 yards rushing, the Warriors pulverized the Wildcats, 26-0.

Bedford faced non-league foe Burlington and triumphed, 29-20, after finishing its conference schedule at 6-0-1.

In the other Dual County encounter, winless Westwood and winless Lincoln-Sudbury met. Westwood prevailed, 18-13, keeping LS winless since the day it began football.

Lynnfield, 6-3, pounded non-league opponent North Reading, 38-8, in an all-around happy day for Dual County teams.

to fade over the second half of the year because he had a number of outside interests with the school newspaper and the math team."

The remaining three varsity harriers were a source of almost constant surprise and pleasure to Geist.

Sophomore Chris Capeless, who ran a 5:10 mile as a ninth grader, appeared to be the immediate answer to South's fifth man problems when he dipped under 15 minutes at the start of the season. However, he did not improve and stayed in that time range for the whole year. "Capeless is another fellow with a lot of iron in the fire," observed Geist, "but if he does concentrate on running he will be able to develop a promising potential."

The startling improvement of junior Dave Robinson was definitely a plus for the squad. As a first-year man in 1971, Robinson was strictly a jayvee performer, usually last man, and clocked finishing times in the vicinity of 17:30. This year he started chopping blocks of seconds off his personal record early and kept going, down to 14:55.

If Robinson's improvement was startling, then Bob Lein's sudden appearance on the scene was shocking. Lein, a junior who never ran before, came out for the team a few weeks into the season. He started off on the jayvee and ran a couple of 19-minute races before bursting into the top five on the squad. His best race was an unbelievable 14:45. Geist, truly flabbergasted by the gift from heaven said: "He's got a lot of spirit. He has asthma, too, and that makes it doubly hard for him. He just likes to compete."

Returnees from the junior varsity include first man Russ Kintner, and Ara Shushmanian and Stu Rothman. All three are juniors. Kintner has the best time of 15:45.

An interesting addition to the team was Margaret Horoika, Charley's sister, who, because of the new state rule making females eligible for certain male sports, was allowed to compete. Ms. Horoika scored fairly regularly for the jayvee and covered the Mt. Ida Junior College course in a best of 18 minutes. Her best race was a 1.5-mile all girls race at Falmouth, where she placed 24th out of 100 competitors.

Last year at this time, in South's 1971 cross-country summation, The Graphic wrote

Newton Lions In Upset 6-6 Tie In Canada Test; Get Red Carpet Treatment

BY LEONARD HOLT

The Newton Athletic Assoc. Lions, putting on their best show this year, tied the East Mountain Roughriders 6-6 in Hamilton Ontario, in an international upset for Canada who had a league leading 10-1 record. The U.S.A. and Canadian teams played at the Bishop Ryan Stadium on Saturday Nov. 25th, due to last minute changes because of snow conditions.

There were approximately 1,100 spectators which included several members of the professional Hamilton Tiger Cats league—leading football team. One of these players from the "cats" was Angelo Mosca of Waltham the 6 foot 4 inch 275 lb. defensive tackle who appeared to be enjoying this mudfest between the youngsters from both sides of the border. The boys, knowing that they were being observed by members of the Tiger Cats, one of the most famous professional Canadian Football teams, the day before their own game against the Ottawa Rough Riders in the Trans Canada Gray Cup Football Championship playoff inspired the young oys to play their greatest and perhaps muddiest game this year.

Although the rules and regulations were split Canadian and American, you might say that the Lions had a slight edge, because again for the eighth week in a row the Lions played on a muddy and quite slippery field. Every single fan watched intently as the offensive and defensive players of both teams crashed helmets and shoulder pads, looking more like "pros."

The scoring of the game went: late in the first period Ronny Knox of the East Mountain Rough Riders thundered up the middle 22-yards for their only score. The extra point attempt was absolutely crushed back as the Lions defense crashed in on the East Mountain halfback trying to find a hole in the middle. There were none.

Then, shortly into the second period, the Lions came thundering down the field passing and running with accuracy. Then on the Lions 8th play, Mike Mosca found Bobby Lipson open (not too long) with a 26-yard bullet pass that Lipson caught,

Soph's Will Help "Looking ahead to next year, it's the same old story. There are a couple of good runners with good potential to form a nucleus of coach Richard T. Geist's squad, but help is needed. The sophomore crop has to be good for South to improve."

The prediction now is an instant replay. Ress, Capeless, Robinson, and Lein look capable, but there has to be more depth for more success in 1973.

dodging one tackle. Again, though unfortunately for the Lions, the Rough Riders defense arose with the same determination on stopping the Lions attempted sweep for the game winning extra points. From this point on, neither team got far as both defenses played well and the field was slipperier than ever, preventing any possible long yardage plays. So there the score stood, 6-6, until the final gun sounded.

Interesting as it may be, on the last play of the game, the Rough Riders were punting the ball on the fourth down. Lineman Andrew Toyias crashed through and deflected the punt, another Lion player recovered the ball, but was caught on the 12-yard line. He didn't get far.

Hamilton is one of Canada's leading football cities in which the Canadian Gray Cup playoffs are being played, with the Lions vs Rough Riders game arranged to coincide with the weekend excitement of the big game the next day between Hamilton and Ottawa.

Mike Mosca, quarterback of the Newton Lions, is a cousin to Angelo Mosca, defensive tackle for the Hamilton "pro" team. On Sunday, Nov 26th, the Hamilton Tiger Cats played the Ottawa Rough Riders and beat them 30-27. Angelo Mosca reserved 50 tickets for the players, coaches, and other members of the Newton contingent to watch this game

The Lion's trip activities went as follows: departure from Logan Airport at 10:05 Friday morning, arrived in Buffalo, N.Y. 11:20 a.m., took but four to Niagara Falls, lunch and onto Hamilton, Ontario where the boys were received by their "hosts" and taken to the homes of the other players. Saturday: Game time 2:00 p.m., Socials at Sheridan Hotel for parents in evening. Sunday: attended the Canadian Pro Football game in Hamilton Stadium. Monday: tour of Hamilton and a visit to African Lion Safari, and off to Buffalo via bus. The Newton Lions observed the Canadian "waterways to the Great Lakes" lock system on their way to Buffalo Airport and home. The

Sports Shorts

There's nothing like Monday night football with Frank Gifford, Don Meredith, and Howard Cosell providing fascinating irrelevant commentary, and each trying to outdo each other's last crack.

When Washington played Atlanta in the nation's capital two Monday's ago, the three musketeers were on hand to record the game for future generations. A huge sign greeted them — "Welcome Dandy Dan, Faulless Frank, And — The Mouth." A true winner.

While Redskin quarterback Bill Kilmer was double-reversing to end Charley Taylor, and Falcon fullback Art Malone repeatedly scurried out of the backfield to snare short passes from under-rated Bob Berry, the verbose, but entertaining trio kept up a running stream of witticisms.

The highlight of the evening came when the ABC camera zoomed in on Atlanta coach Norm Van Brocklin. Gifford noted that there were seven little Van Brocklin's home in Atlanta watching the game. "He hasn't spent all of his time coaching, has he?" retorted Meredith. Cosell immediately picked up the loose mike — "Moving right along as we brush off the latest Meredith comment..."

P.S. The Redskins won the game, 24-13 and halfback Larry Brown went over the 1000-yard mark for the season.

Tuft's Danny Moynihan, the New England cross-country champion, competed in two national meets, last week. Moynihan finished second in the five-mile NCAA college division race in Chicago, Illinois with a 24:40 timing, three seconds back of North Dakota State's Mike Slack.

Later, Moynihan didn't fare so well in the university division race over six miles in Houston, Texas. He was 85th, in comparison to his 22nd place 1971 finish.

"I was ready to run the race when John Brodie got hurt — a chance he waited not-so-patiently for for six years. The 49ers new quarterback may never return the job to its old owner. Spurrier has been impressive, his best performance being five touchdowns passes thrown against Chicago.

Pittsburgh rookie Franco Harris, a 230-pound fullback from Penn State, keeps crunching right along. He looks like the biggest shoo-in for rookie-of-the-year honors in any sport since Carlton Fisk. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

Private School Grid Roundup

It was a long time between victories for Our Lady's, but the Lancers ended a six-game losing streak, last week, by surprising St. Columbkille's, 14-6, in their season's finale.

Our Lady's won its opening Catholic Suburban League game and then lost its next six before closing out with a 2-6 mark.

The victors notched their first score on a 72-yard drive following the game's opening series. Halfback Tony Colella, the Lancers' primary offensive weapon all season scored the TD on a three-yard burst for a 6-0 lead.

St. Columbkille's battled back with a touchdown in the second quarter on a one-yard plunge by Mike Dargen. Dargen collected 92 yards rushing in all.

The 6-6 deadlock was broken in the fourth quarter when Colella, who totaled 121 yards on the ground, broke loose on a 36-yard jaunt, and then quarterback Gary Bearfield ran it over for the conversion.

of my life," said Moynihan. "I'm very frustrated." What happened was bad luck. The field of over 300 had to run through a very narrow area after a quarter-mile. Moynihan, who started from the exact middle of the line, was trapped in the crowd and couldn't move up. At times he was forced to almost walk. Curiously, Slack, who was the favorite in the event and had placed third in 1971 suffered from a similar fate and placed 50th.

It's funny how things work out. The Patriots dealt Duane Thomas right back to the Dallas Cowboys because he was more trouble than he was worth. So now look what happens. For an encore we have the continuing saga of Carl Garrett. Thomas belonged in Boston. Everything else has happened this season.

Steve Spurrier got his chance when John Brodie got hurt — a chance he waited not-so-patiently for for six years. The 49ers new quarterback may never return the job to its old owner. Spurrier has been impressive, his best performance being five touchdowns passes thrown against Chicago.

Pittsburgh rookie Franco Harris, a 230-pound fullback from Penn State, keeps crunching right along. He looks like the biggest shoo-in for rookie-of-the-year honors in any sport since Carlton Fisk. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

South Cross Country Coach Pleased At Team Performance

Although it was not the season he had hoped for, Newton South cross-country coach Richard Geist was still relatively pleased with his teams overall performance this year.

The Lions finished 5-11 on the year in the Dual County League, a record which tied them with the 1,966 squad for most victories in a season. That team was 5-2 in the Suburban League.

"I was looking for an 8-8 year," said Geist, "but it took the team longer to jell than I expected. Our biggest thrill was the double meet victory over Wayland and Lincoln-Sudbury at the end of the year."

South also scored wins against Maynard twice and Lynnfield. The Lions' leading runner in almost every race was captain Jack Ferreri, a hard-working harrier out for the sport for only the second year after a sophomore fling with the football team. Ferreri, who logged a surprise best of 14:51 over South's home 2.6 mile course as a junior, improved that mark to 14:27 this season, the fastest clocking by a Lion in 1972. "Ferreri was a good captain and a good leader," commented Geist.

Ferreri was usually followed to the finish by junior Byron Ress. Ress, who was a sophomore find in 1971, never performed up to expectations this year. His best time was 14:44 a year ago, yet his best efforts this season hovered around the 14:30 mark. "He didn't come down the way I thought he would," noted Geist. "I originally thought he would be under 14 minutes as a senior, but now I don't know."

John Mason was a senior who had a discouraging season, despite some hard work during the summer. Mason was plagued with colds and injuries and suffered through an erratic campaign which saw him fluctuate between the 14:45 and 15:30 range.

"Charley Horoika improved steadily throughout his three years on the team," said Geist. "He came along very well from last year, and made it down to the 15-minute mark. He had a very good first half, but started

Service To Honor Dr. Cohon

TEMPLE BETH AVODAH will hold a congregational meeting on Sunday, Dec. 3 at 7:45 p.m. It will be followed by a report entitled, "The New Aliyah, Soviet Jewry: Problem and Promise," to be delivered by the well-known lecturer, Ronya Schwaab. Born in Russia, she was educated at City College in New York, the New School for Social Research and Boston University. She recently led a group from Boston to Russia under the sponsorship of the Citizen Exchange Corps.

Special Sabbath eve services honoring Dr. Beryl D. Cohon, rabbi emeritus of the congregation, will be held Friday, Dec. 8, at 8 p.m. at Temple Sinai in Brookline.

The temple's founding rabbi is being honored on the occasion of his forthcoming 75th birthday. Dr. Cohon, whose 12th book, "Shielding the Flame", was recently published, will address the congregation during the service, speaking on, "The Romance of the Rabbinate."

Joining in the service will be Cantor Baruch J. Cohon of Los Angeles, cantor of Valley Beth Israel, and member of the faculty of Hebrew-Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in California. Cantor Cohon is coming east for the event honoring his uncle, Dr. Cohon.

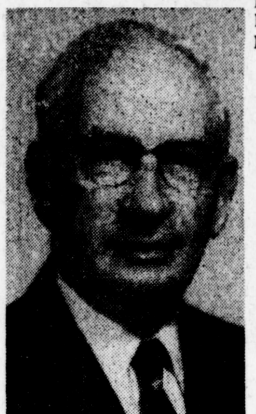

The musical program is under the direction of Delores Fox Corley, director of music at Temple Sinai.

Special choral numbers will be presented by William Kopans, a member of the Temple Sinai Choir for many years who returns for this special service.

Other participants are Mrs. Beryl D. Cohon, wife of Dr.

Cohon, offering a Prayer of Thanksgiving; Benjamin Goldfarb, president of Temple Sinai, bringing greetings; Mrs. Paul Cohen; and Rabbi Benjamin Z. Rudavsky who will speak "In Appreciation." The Sabbath Lights will be blessed by Helaine G. Cohen whose Bat Mitzvah occurs the following morning.

Those on the Committee of Arrangements for the Sabbath of Thanksgiving honoring Dr. Cohon include:

BERYL COHON

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cohen, chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wheeler, co-chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Bachner; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Citron, Miss Paula Dubrow; Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Franklin.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gorin, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Luinsky, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Madfis, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pearlman, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Saltzman, Mr. and Mrs. Henri Schwartzberg, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Shulman, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron H. Sibley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Silver, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zonderman.

B'nai B'rith To Meet on Dec. 6

The regular meeting of Mayflower Chapter B'nai B'rith will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 8:15 p.m. at Temple Reyim, 1860 Washington St., Newton.

Chairman for the Evening Rachel Daitch, and her co-chairman vice president Mildred Silver have planned the program. Ronya Schwaab, news analyst, world traveler, lecturer, and book reviewer will review the current best seller "Oh, Jerusalem" by Larry Collins and Dominique LaPierre.

At this meeting there will be a Chanukah Gift "Grab Bag." To give and receive a gift, participants bring a "Grab" for not over $1. Ronya Schwaab will give her interesting review on "Oh Jerusalem."

Refreshments will be served by Delores Lebow and her committee. Charlotte Glickman and Sylvia Porter are in charge of hospitality.

"Child's Play" At Xaverian High School

The Xaverian Players, drama club at Xaverian Brothers High School, Westwood, will stage "Child's Play," a drama-thriller by Robert Morasco, on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 16 and 17, at the school.

Patrons will also have the opportunity to make it a dinner-theater arrangement. The play will be presented on both evenings at 7:30, and a spaghetti dinner will be served in the students' dining hall at 6 p.m.

Tickets for the play alone cost $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for students and children. An additional $1.50 will complete the dinner-theater affair. Those wishing to dine at the school are asked to make reservations by calling the school at 326-6392 before Dec. 12. Tickets for the play may be purchased in advance at the door.

"Child's Play" concerns evil and the occult connected with a private boys' school and rumors which fly about a faculty member. This year the Xaverian Players are under the direction of John Roper.

First Meeting Of Jewish Chapter

The Emma Lazarus Chapter of the American Jewish Congress will hold its first meeting on Thursday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Barbara Tobasky, Chestnut Hill.

The speaker for the evening will be Joseph B. Robinson, national director of the Commission on Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress. He will talk on "The Voucher Plan and Aid to Secular Schools."

"Night Of Miracles" To Be Presented, Dec. 3

The Christmas Cantata, "Night Of Miracles," will be presented by the Sactuary Choir of the United Presbyterian Church, Park and Vernon St., Newton, on Sunday, Dec. 3 at 7 p.m.

Norman Curtis, minister of music, will direct and perform as baritone soloist. Leonore Curtis, soprano, and James Calderwood, baritone, will also sing with the choir as soloists. Frederick Chatfield will be organist, and Hazel Trask will be at the piano.

Through the years, the Sanctuary Choir in Newton, has been active musically, presenting both sacred and secular concerts during the year, with guest artists. The "NIGHT OF MIRACLES" is a contemporary Christmas Cantata written by composer of sacred music, John Peterson.

As he began work on the Cantata in 1958, he looked on it as a "dual challenge." He said it was "an original work with a new and different theme." He said "It portrays the miraculous truth of the Incarnation... the night when centuries old prophecy came miraculously true, a night when shepherds were awe-stricken by a gloriously brilliant heavenly host that told of the birth of the Prince of Peace; the night when God sent His only begotten Son to be born of a virgin for the redemption of a world of sinners."

There is no admission charge, but a fee of offering will be received. The United Presbyterian Church is at Exit 17 of the Mass Turnpike Extension.

Good year for creative youngsters

It's a great year for innovative craft projects in toyland. Play Stone, a unique formulation of natural clays by the makers of Play-Doh, which hardens in permanent form without firing and is paintable, is featured in Cool Jewels, an ecology-oriented jewelry making kit.

Roll-Away also uses Play Stone to give youngsters a new way to custom design cars. A series of Presto-Molder kits also uses Play Stone to create farm animals, cars and jewelry.

Play-Doh will delight the younger set with two new play concepts. Kitchen Play has molds for creating pretend foods, such as turkey and cake, plus accessories for pretend cooking and serving.

Gomobiles provide accessories for creating silly cars and crazy trucks with Play-Doh forming the bodies.

Another new thrill for young artists is the Swinging Spirograph which adds an extra design dimension to Spirography, the unique instant art by Kenner, based on meshing gear wheels. A new Spiroset set, too, opens new creative opportunities for the very young with innovative pattern designs that make it easy to design groovy animals and faces.

Favors $600
It was Ald. Edward Richmond, speaking during the committee of the whole meeting, who reported Mann had indicated he would not oppose a $600 reimbursement that did not include any fringe benefits. He said the mayor made his comment privately after he vetoed the earlier proposal.

The committee of the whole meeting, to be attended by all aldermen, was called by Board President Eliot Cohen. Cohen, after the salary veto, prepared a questionnaire for aldermen asking them to state their views on various salary proposals to see if he could find common ground for compromise.

Reviewing his findings Monday, he said 13 of the 24 aldermen had returned the questionnaire prior to the meeting and the results were "inconclusive."

Survey
He reported that five aldermen were completely opposed to any salary, two favored $600, one favored $1,200, three favored $2,500 in 1973, one favored $1,500 in 1973 and two favored $2,500 starting in 1974.

He said five also said they favored a freeze on the salary amount for about five years, eight opposed including life insurance and health benefits and one favored providing them.

Aldermen, he said, estimated the amount of time they devoted to their jobs in a range of 2,080 hours to 387 hours.

Other aldermen opposed returning the questionnaire at all.

The Newton board is the last official city or town body in the state that remains unpaid, with the exception of School Committees which are barred from pay by law.

Civic
The core of Newton aldermen opposed to a salary argue that the job is one to be approached as a "civic" activity and services should be donated willingly; and that it is progressively easier to raise a salary once it is established than it is to institute one.

Those at the meeting Monday spent an hour and a half exploring a range of possibilities including a monthly salary based on the number of meetings attended, paying each alderman one-twelfth of the mayor's salary, earmarking money in the city budget to cover postage, and the other crucial question, whether the pay would go into effect in 1973 or 1974.

Votes on all of the proposals were splitting in a range of 4-5, 3-5, 6-5, and 8-5. Ald. Ernest Dietz finally commented: "I think this is a dead duck."

Alderman Jason Sacks, at one point, suggested that the salary question be placed on the ballot in the next election and eight aldermen favored the idea.

Fair Cance
Alderman Joseph McDonnell pointed out that the "electorate does not get a fair chance on questions when only one side is

Woman Part Of Fair

Mrs. Charles Hovey, Newton, is a member of a committee of volunteers from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society which is planning a Boston Christmas Fair to be held in Horticultural Hall on Dec. 7-9.

The fair will have exhibits by the Arnold Arboretum on the different type of greens and cones; the Herb Society on the use of herbs in Christmas decorations; and the Massachusetts Christmas Tree Growers Association on the proper care of trees.

campaigning on an issue." Alderman Richard McGrath argued that the Board of Aldermen has other "items and activities" that are "more important than this" to discuss.

"The board should be able to accept something legitimately due to itself without having to go to the public," he said.

Although he voted against the salary the first time around, McGrath said he "expected to support" a salary in next year's campaign for re-election.

Alderman Wendell Bauckman stated his support for paying aldermen $600 as of 1974.

"I'd rather see this board institute a salary than the next one," he said. "It's going to come to pass, be it a year from tonight or two years from tonight."

City Woman Is Luncheon Host

Mrs. Melvin I. Sturnick, Newton, along with two other women are the hostesses for the annual Holiday Luncheon of the Women's Auxiliary to the Norfolk District Medical Society on Dec. 5 at noon.

The luncheon, which will be held at Amaru's Restaurant, 80 Bridge St., Dedham, will be held to raise money for scholarships and will feature "Exotic Japan."

In addition to a program planned by the Japanese Airlines there will be a raffle and door prizes. Donations will be $5.50.

Subway Post Offices Open

Subway Post Offices are now open at Park Street and Washington Street for the 1972 Christmas season. Postmaster George K. Walker of the Boston Postal District, Joseph C. Kelly, general manager of the Mass Bay Transportation Authority, and William Phipps, executive director of the Retail Trade Board were on hand for the opening.

Postmaster Walker stated that the two office will be open daily for the sale of stamps from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday; p.m. from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 2, 9, and 16.

Boston is the only city in the world to establish a subway post office to assist commuters on public transportation. They have been very popular since their inauguration several years ago with the cooperation of the MBTA.

The Postmaster reminded the public that parcels for distant states should be in the mail no later than Monday, Dec. 4, and greeting cards, by Sunday, Dec. 10.

Christmas kits will be delivered to all homes in the Boston Postal District on Dec. 7 and 8. Customers are requested to use the bands enclosed in the kits and separate their Christmas cards in three bundles: "LOCAL," "MASS" and "OUT OF STATE." Be sure to use ZIP Code on your return address as well as to the addressee.

This Week's Best Buys

Courtesy Massachusetts Department of Agriculture
When the kids arrive home from school and begin looking for snacks, you'll be doing them a favor by supplying them with fresh apples, says the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture. Apples are not only delicious but contain a large quantity of Vitamins A and C plus pectin and mild acids to aid digestion. The apple's bulk will satisfy that snack time hunger, but won't spoil dinner. The average apple has only 90 calories.

Many produce departments are featuring sales on Cortland and Red Delicious apples from nearby orchards good for eating and cooking. When you stock up, remember to keep your apples refrigerated to maintain flavor, firmness and freshness.

M.D.A. reports that the winter squashes continue in excellent supply. You can prepare squash so many ways it's a natural for mealtime variety. You can bake it, boil it or make pies and cakes and cakes with it. Look for Butternut, Acorn, and the grand daddy of the squash family, Blue Hubbard.

Also available are native cabbage, parsnips and purple-top turnips. Stock up and make plans for a New England boiled dinner or a delicious stew soon.

This is cranberry time in New England and the supply is excellent. Stock up for relish, sauce, cranberry bread. The kids will spend an evening of fun threading fresh cranberries on a string to decorate the Christmas tree. Keep fresh cranberries refrigerated until you're ready to use them.

A colorful event you won't want to miss takes place Wednesday, November 29th through Friday, December 1st, at Burlington Mall, off Route 128. The New England Carnations Growers Association sponsors New Varieties Days during which you'll view all of the new varieties of this native flower created during the past year.

There will be thousands of blooms assembled in hundreds of breathtaking arrangements and displays.

Listed as an official agriculture fair by M.D.A., cash prizes are awarded for the winning displays and new varieties, all of which you'll be able to see, and photograph, if you wish, to your heart's content.

SPORTS TALK

Boston Braves Retain Much Talent But The Whalers Stole Their Fans

BY LEWIS FREEDMAN
It's kind of hard to believe, but this mecca of hockey has forgotten the existence of one of its hometown teams in the sport it loves best.

The Boston Braves, last year's surprise darlings of Beantown, are this year's passe team.

When the 1971-72 hockey season opened, the Braves and Boston shocked the world at large by turning out in huge numbers for minor league hockey. The Braves smashed every American Hockey League attendance record and at the same time proved to be a very fine club, carting off Eastern Division honors.

The Braves are not the outstanding Braves of last year, though they are good enough to be one point out of second place in the east, yet this time around the fans are staying away in record numbers.

There is one succinct answer to the question of why the sudden termination of the romance — the New England Whalers. The new World Hockey Association entry is a cut above the Braves in play, and has stolen their fans.

The Braves never competed with the Bruins for fans. Most of the original fans the team had were frustrated in attempts to get Bruins tickets and thus turned their attention to the next-best ice show in town. Only now the Braves are not even second-best, and what's being proved now, sadly, is that even though this is hockey's holy land, Boston cannot support three big-time hockey clubs.

Last week at the Boston Garden, 3,295 fans who remembered the good old days turned out to watch the Braves blast another AHL

Massachusetts squad, the Springfield Kings, 4-0.

The faithful for Braves games are people who fell for the team a year ago, and were too loyal to switch their allegiance, fathers with young sons, and college kids of two types — those who still can't afford major league prices and those like Boston University co-ed Anne K., who are learning about the sport for the first time.

The most interesting thing about watching (or listening in on) a person's introduction to hockey is the questions which inevitably arise.

Ms. K.'s best query came between the first and second period. "What's that funny machine doing out there?" she asked.

That, Virginia, is a Zamboni machine. And what was Zamboni's first name, anyway?

Springfield is a team which is not faring very well this winter. (It is winter. Have you been outside lately?) The Kings have won less than half of the games they have played, and from the looks of the team, last week, that's because it has no offense, whatsoever.

The most menacing things about the visitors from out west are 1) their uniforms, which make them look like flaming purple people eaters with yellow stripes and Imperial Margarine crowns on each of their chests; and 2) the groupies they brought with them, who couldn't have numbered more than 12½, but made the noise of nearly a dozen.

The Braves are a young team with 15 players 25 years old or under, and they have experienced a tremendous roster turnover from the group that last year's fans grew to identify with.

Only Ron Boehm, Richie Leduc, Steve Stirling, Ray Fortin, Ron Jones, and Matt Ravlich are returnees on the 20-man list.

The '72-'73 Braves have made the most of the best local feeding ground of them all — Boston University. The defending two-time NCAA champions have sent three players to the Braves in the last two seasons and each of them is playing a key role in coach Bep Guidolin's strategy.

Three of the top four scorers on the squad honed their trade on Commonwealth Avenue. Stirling, the captain of the first national title team, tallied 31 points on 18 goals and 13 assists last winter before a knee injury sidelined him for the season's last 16 games. He's fourth on the Braves stat list now.

Stirling's old BU teammates Bob Gryp and Ron Anderson are one-two in the team totals. Gryp, at 6-1, 190, has the perfect tools for the hatchet man that he sometimes is. His powerful frame has cowed many opponents' fevered spirit. The big surprise has been his scoring. He was not renowned as a big point-getter in college.

There was some initial question whether Anderson, who skipped his senior year to turn pro, was ready for a tougher brand of play. The biggest handicap was supposed to be his slender build (165 pounds), yet he has been scoring with the same rapidity he did as a Terrier.

The first period versus Springfield was dull hockey. The Braves couldn't hit a barn with a shot and the Kings exhibited a consistently sloppy passing attack. With 1:29 to go in the period the Braves enjoyed a two-man advantage for 38 seconds, but couldn't make a thing of it. It was 0-0 after one.

Boston took over in the second stanza. Doug Roberts notched a short-handed goal at 2:07 which slithered in off Bob Vroman's pads. Five minutes later dashing Ron Anderson blasted a 20-foot shot from the corner and it was 2-0. The Braves protected goalie Dave Reese superbly and carried a 2-0 lead out of the period.

The third period was pretty much an instant replay of a combination of the two periods before it. The first three-fourths of it were slow-moving and featured some of the worst power plays seen in Boston, but over the last three and a half minutes the Braves erupted again on an unassisted goal by popular Richie Leduc, and then Leduc again with only nine seconds left.

Asked to sum up the game's highlights Ms. K. replied: "There was a lot of action, but the pretzels had too much salt." Sometimes, watching the Braves can be like seeing the old Mets at the Polo Grounds.

Newton Notebook

Rezzuti's Name

It was only a matter of time before Newton's Tommy Rezzuti broke the New England university division interception record, but time was running out.

Rezzuti, an all-purpose football threat at Newton South (1969), entered the 1972 football season at Northeastern University with 19 career interceptions, including an NCAA college division-shattering season total of 14. He already owned the New England small college career mark, and was eight short of the university division standard of 27, held by Harry Agganis, during his years at Boston University.

The record-breaking interception finally came in NU's last game of the season, a 28-19 victory over Vermont. He finished with eight for the season.

"I feel pretty good about it," noted Rezzuti when questioned about his reactions now that the pressure is off. "I think the publicity will help me as far as the pro scouts go."

That is Tom Rezzuti's dream — to play professional football. It is something he has always wanted to do, even when he was being spurned by colleges because of his fragile, 5-8, 140-pound high school build. He beat the odds once, and now he's set to buck them again. He has gotten a lot bigger over the last four years — he's up to 5-10, 180 — but that's still small for the pros, and he knows he's in for a fight. But all Rezzuti is asking for is a chance.

"I think I can be a safety in the pros," he states flatly. "I'm not particular about the team. Any team will be all right, but I just want a chance."

There is also little chance that Rezzuti will make his way into the pro ranks as a punt return specialist, one of his side talents in college. Although he averaged about 10 yards a punt for the second year in a row, he doesn't think he has a future as a return man in professional ball. "I'm just not fast enough," he said. "I think I'm good enough to play on defense, anyway."

Rezzuti had trouble getting the record, even though, as he puts it — "I was thinking about it all year." Most clubs tried to throw away from his area in the Northeast zone, and Boston University attempted only three passes in the entire game. Vermont went to extremes. The Catamounts tossed 44 passes, but only one went to Rezzuti's zone. He's glad it did. It just happened to be the magic pass the one he was waiting for — good old number 27.

Once again Boston College proved that it has no right playing the major teams in eastern football. The Eagles were smothered by Lambert Trophy winner Penn State, 45-26, to clinch a bowl appearance for the victors. It was not a happy day for the fans at Alumni Stadium, even though sophomore halfback Mike Esposito rushed for 115 yards. Nittany Lion quarterback John Hufnagel was named AP player-of-the-week for his performance. Hufnagel threw for 271 yards and ran for 92.

Hopefully, the Eagles learned a lesson, last Saturday—not to look down their noses at any New England teams — namely UMass. The Minutemen pounded BC into the ground, 28-7, to officially become the top team in New England. Paul Metallo rushed for 146 yards and Piel Pennington put it together well enough to complete 15 passes, nine to end Steve Schubert. BC did not have it at all. This loss, making the season's slate read, 3-7, could convince the administration to start taking on teams it can handle.

Kevin Haley, who had a schizophrenic pitching year during the spring and summer, for Our Lady's High of Newton, and the Boys' Club of the Newton National Division, signed a major league contract with the Cleveland Indians, last week.

Haley suffered with the Lancers' 1-13 record, but had the distinction of winning the team's only game. His personal record was 1-6. Things got better for Haley as the weather got warmer. The Boys' Club won the league crown with Haley as the mainstay of the mound corps. He was 9-1.

Another ex-Our Lady's athlete, Tom Giusti, won a varsity football letter as a linebacker for Bridgewater State, this fall. — LEWIS FREEDMAN

YMCA Unveils Winter Programs

Guitar instruction by Robert Gahton, a performer for many years in Greater Boston establishments, heads the list of creative and educational programs offered to boys and girls at the Newton YMCA this winter.

Registration for members and non-members will begin Dec. 13.

A long-time instructor at the Y, Gahton teaches two classes, beginners and intermediates, for children 10 and older.

The fundamentals of folk guitar are stressed.

The successful children's music theater, now in its 12th season, will once again be offered to children 5½ to 14. Mrs. Hilda K. Moses instructs a primary and intermediate company which present a musical production at the end of the season.

Two dance classes, including ballet under the direction of John Duane, are also available. Duane, who has studied at the University of Mexico, with the New York City Ballet Co. and Warner Brothers, teaches beginners, intermediate and advanced classes.

Wendy Martz, a graduate of the Erick Hawkins School of Modern Dance and the Don Flansburgh School of Ballet, has scheduled creative dance programs for 4-year-olds and children 5 and older. The courses emphasize movement, games, and improvisations to make use of children's natural flexibility.

For girls 10 and older, sewing will be taught by Maria Puzanghero, an instructor with the Quincy Adult Education Program. The focus of the course will be on hand sewing, using a pattern, fitting and the use of a sewing machine.

Tobey Hirsch, a graduate of Carnegie Mellon University and a long-time instructor at the Y, teaches five different courses. Arts 'N Tots, a class for children 3-5, emphasizes creative works with paper, boxes, paints, crayons and other materials. Collages, rubbings, painting and popscicle stick art are among some of the things produced.

Printmaking and weaving will be offered to children 8 years and older.

For five sessions, children will work with linoleum, wood and vegetable cuts and the final five classes will be devoted to offloom hand weaving and card weaving.

Two ceramics courses are available, one for 5-7-year-olds and the other for people over 7. Students learn the basic methods of hand building, slab, coil pinch and glazing.

Some modeling and glazing work is also included in the crafts workshop for children 8 and older. In addition, the program offers rubbings, puppet-making, hand crafts and tie dyeing.

Color theory will be taught in the painting class for those 8 and older. Oil, tempera, and water colors are the media.

City's Orchestra To Begin Series

The first concert of a three-concert series by the Newton Symphony Orchestra will be presented this Sunday, Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. at the Meadowbrook Junior High School.

Music director, Michel Sasson will lead the Orchestra in: Rimsky-Korsakov's Russian Easter Overture; Piano Concerto No. 4 by Beethoven and Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony. Pianist Phyllis Moss will solo in the Beethoven Concerto.

Single tickets at $3.50 and the 3-concert subscription series at $9 will be available at the door before and after the performance.

THE F. A. DAY JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL auditorium will be the setting for a Metropolitan Wind Symphony Young People's Concert Saturday (Dec. 2) at 11 a.m. The concert is free and open to everyone. Jerry Gardener, director (left), has planned to include works by Jenkins, Grainger, Bennett and Beethoven. Adam Gordon, trumpet soloist, will perform the last movement of Hummel's Trumpet Concerto with the Wind Symphony.

Country Players Slate Auditions

The Newton Country Players will hold open auditions for their mid-winter production on Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 5-6, at 8 p.m. in the Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge st., Newton Corner.

This season's mid-winter show will be "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little" by Paul Zindel, a Broadway play recently made available to theater groups.

Performances are scheduled for Feb. 9, 10, 16 and 17 at 8:15 p.m.

The Zindel play is an up-to-date comedy-drama with roles for five women and two men. The play will be directed by John S. Deming of Newton Highlands.

Now in their 17th year, the Country Players are a non-profit, philanthropic association of local residents dedicated to the development, expansion and assistance of theater activity on community and educational levels.

Winter Programs Established

The cold weather heralded the Newton Recreation Department's Winter Outdoor Programs featuring skating and tobogganing.

The department maintains and operates three natural pond areas, several acres in size. The ice surface are planed and broomed daily and snow is plowed when necessary and where the ice is thick and strong enough for the motor equipment.

The three natural skating areas are Bulbough's Pond, Newtonville, Crystal Lake, Newton Highlands and Ware's Cove, Auburndale. They are open Monday thru Friday from 2 to 9 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 10 to 9 p.m. All these skating areas are supervised.

In addition, there are smaller areas flooded, weather permitting. These include Burr Park, Newton Corner; Newton Centre Playground, Newton Centre; and the Albenmarle Playground, Newtonville.

Others include tennis courts at the Ward School, Chestnut Hill; Memorial School, Newton Centre; Highlands Playground, Newton Upper Falls; Hamilton School, Newton Lower Falls and Boyd Park, Newton.

Flooded areas, other than tennis courts are maintained at the Bowen School, Newton Centre, Spaulding School, Newton Centre, Lincoln Playground, Waban, West Newton Common and Allison Park, Nonantum. Information on skating conditions may be obtained by calling 969-2851, any hour of the day, seven days a week.

Recreation intern, Austin Moore, reports the Recreation Department's first annual Boys' Junior High School Street Hockey League completed play with the Auburndale Seals taking the two out of three playoff series with the third game win over the Cabot Swamp Rats, 7 to 5.

Leading scorer was Warren Newton of the Swamp Rats with four goals. Pete Arnold of the Seals was next with his three-goal hat trick.

The members of the championship Seals are Gerry Frazier, Jackie Bellevue, Chris Polsell, Bob McGrath, Peter Arnold, Tom Burns, Chuck Drakes, David Boyd, Artie Cavallo and Barry Quinlan and the Cabot Swamp Rats, the runners-up, are Curtis Mitchell, Steve Sera, Nick Bovin, Henry Marini, Danny Taylor and Steve and Warren Newton.

Recreation supervisor, Fran Towle, reports that the Women's Volleyball League Clinics have been completed and the two division league will begin play on December 4. The Clinics held at two schools were directed by Carol Stapleton at Day Junior High and Mary Ann Beldezek at Burr.

The League, for women, 18 and over, will play at Day Junior High, Burr and Carr Schools on Monday nights at 7 and 8 p.m. A total of 13 teams are listed in the "A" and "B" division of the league.

Towle also reports the Recreation Department will sponsor a Basketball Clinic for 5 and 6 grade girls starting Saturday, Dec. 2. The clinics will be held from 10 a.m. to noon at the Day Junior High School for an eight week period.

The girls will be coached in Basketball techniques and will

Bookworm Ball Will Launch Library's December Activities

The Second Bookworm Ball at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner on Saturday, Dec. 2 at 8 p.m. starts the whirl of exciting and varied activities scheduled for the Main Library and its branches during the final month of 1972.

Residents including Newton Free Library Trustees, friends and staff of the library, and other invited guests will dine, dance, and be merry at the NFL's Bookworm Ball.

December is a busy month for Library Director Virginia A. Tashjian whose schedule includes an address to the Chestnut Hill Mother's Club on Dec. 4. Mrs. Tashjian also will be the guest speaker at the Women's Club of Newton Highlands on Dec. 6 and the invited speaker at the Naomi Club meeting on Dec. 12.

"Weaving Directions," a group show of on-loom and off-loom woven pieces by Newton artist and teacher Shirley Fink and 10 of her students will be on exhibit at the Main Library through December.

The sparkle of stained glass, loaned by M.C. Dolan of Needham, Mrs. Gail Trief of Newton, and Richard Jansky of Boston, will emanate from the display cases during the holiday season.

"A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" is the featured film scheduled for viewing at the Main Library, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. Free films are screened every Tuesday at noon, Thursday at 7 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. at the Main Library.

Important dates to reserve are Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 1 and 2 when the players, call Sandy Deming (969-1867) or write P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, Mass. 02159.

Newton Recreational-Library Players, a drama group co-sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department and the Newton Free Library, will present Neil Simon's play, "Plaza Suite," at Meadowbrook Junior High School, at 7:30 p.m.

Social Services Librarian Mrs. Ellen Lynch spoke recently at the Simmons College School of Library Science on the Duties and Responsibilities of a Social Service Librarian. Mrs. Lynch also participated in a meeting of the Federation of Agencies serving the Blind and Visually Handicapped.

Holiday bells will ring out at Newton Highlands branch of the Newton Free Library on Wednesday, December 13 at 2 p.m. when the Bell Ringers-Yeo Group present a festive program for Senior Adults. Refreshments will be served and Joan Nolan, Branch Librarian, invites all interested citizens to attend.

Lester Petersen will exhibit oils and watercolors through December at Highlands branch. At Newton Centre, Ann Harbison, branch librarian, will give a book talk Thursday, Dec. 7 at 10:30 a.m.

Auburndale branch will feature an exhibit of landscapes done in oils by Alfred Spital of Waban.

Children visiting the Boys' and Girls' Rooms of the Newton Free Library can use toys being tested and reviewed for the Toy Review Magazine, published in Newton Upper Falls. This cooperative effort means the Library can provide expanded services for Newton children.

Other Newton Free Library activities include a regular schedule of story hours, creativity programs, and films for children at the eleven Boys' and Girls' Rooms located throughout the city; announcements of NFL programs and meetings on the Doug Steffan Show, WNTN (1550 on the dial); twice monthly meetings of the Bridge, Camera, Chess, Junior Chess and Great Books Clubs; and twice weekly meeting of the Young Adult Drama Group at Newtonville.

Places, dates, and times of Newton Free Library programs, which are free and open to the public, are listed in "Library Lowdown," the NFL's monthly publication of news and information.

Holiday Concert On December 5

The Highland Glee Club of Newton under its conductor, Robert C. Prince, will give its Christmas Concert on Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 8:15 p.m. in the Meadowbrook Junior High School, Newton Centre.

The Club's guest artists will be Joan Minkoff and Jeff Brewer, members of "Clearing", a recording group that will sing their original interpretation of material taken from traditional folk songs, hymn tunes, and classical music as well as songs they have composed themselves.

High's Music Production On WEZE Radio Show

The Newton High School Music Department's production "Harvest Fest" will be spotlighted as a half hour feature on WEZE's Variety Show, Sunday, Dec. 3, at 9:15 a.m. Segments of the original production have been selected for presentation.

The program will be hosted by Newton pianist and poetess, Regina ViVardo, a frequent guests artist on the Variety Show.
